

Cat burglar, kidnap suspect, same man

by JOHN MAES

A former Elk Grove Village resident, the subject of a nationwide manhunt for the kidnappings of a Glencoe woman and a California woman earlier this month, is the same man known as the "Northwest suburban cat burglar" who terrorized dozens of area residents in 1974.

Authorities said they are seeking Robert Edward Williams Jr., 23, formerly of 29 Grange Pl., Elk Grove Village. Williams is suspected of the two abductions and possibly a third that occurred April 12 in the Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has said Williams' fingerprints have been found on the autos belonging to both abduction victims, Muriel Fulton of north suburban Glencoe, and Evelyn Axlerod of Sherman Oaks, Calif.

THE FBI ALSO said blood stains found in Mrs. Axlerod's car and those found on a spent bullet casing in the auto match her blood type. Mrs. Axlerod's abandoned auto was found April 12 by police in Rolling Meadows. Police fear the woman has been slain.

Williams has been listed as an escapee from a Chicago prison work release center since March 1, about three weeks before he was due to be paroled following his conviction for a string of burglaries in 1974 in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Mount Prospect police arrested Williams in June 1974, shortly after he burglarized an apartment at 1101 Hunt Club Dr. An investigation later tied Williams to a number of home and apartment burglaries in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Williams specialized in burglarizing apartments and stealing purses and wallets containing cash, often entering while residents slept, police said.

IN ONE INSTANCE, Williams successfully burglarized an Elk Grove Village apartment where 12 persons and a dog were sleeping.

Another time, an Elk Grove Village man told police he was awakened by a noise in the middle of the night and found a man kneeling at the foot of his bed. The burglar, realizing he had been spotted, bolted from the bedroom and out the front door, escaping with the resident's wallet.

Police said the wallet burglary was the first of 22 Elk Grove Village burglaries in which the burglar had been spotted.

Elk Grove Village police in 1974 said physical evidence and questioning linked Williams to 22 burglaries and attempts in the village in a span of seven weeks.

SIX BURGLARIES occurred in one apartment complex, the Eagles on Tonne Road in Elk Grove Village, and were attributed by police to Williams.

Of a string of burglary charges later brought against Williams, four involved break-ins to the Huntington Commons complex, Mount Prospect.

Elk Grove Village police Lt. William Kohnke said Williams' identity as the kidnap suspect came to light three days ago.

Kohnke said Patrolman Jeff Jenkins, son of Police Chief Harry Jenkins, saw a composite sketch of Mrs. Fulton's kidnaper on the department's bulletin board, noticing it was similar to Williams' picture.

"IT JUST STRUCK a familiar note

with him," Kohnke said. Jenkins alerted local investigators to the similarity and a file containing Williams' photo and fingerprints were later turned over to Glencoe police.

A clerk at Globe Hoppers, a store at Woodfield Shopping Center, Thursday identified Williams as the same man who attempted to rob the store April 12, Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy said.

Schaumburg police suspect Williams abducted an Itasca woman from the parking lot of the center the same day. Mrs. Dale C. Fridlund was forced at gunpoint to drive to Wood Dale where she was released unharmed. The kidnaper stole her car, which has not been found. Conroy said police expect to show Mrs. Fridlund a photo of Williams within the next several days.

GOOD MORNING!

Today

Mike Klein's people

Beer can buff wants containers not contents

Some people are continually saying they're bored, that life just does not mean anything.

You can generally pick out those people easily. When they describe weekend plans, the discussion begins with a yawn and ends with a nap.

This behavior is not for Bill Wishart. His mother, Virginia, says that Bill is always into something.

Bill's day starts each morning. He slides out of bed, places one soft contact lens in each eye and hustles off to learn eighth grade at Froquois Junior High School in Des Plaines.

There are dozens of ways to keep busy after school.

BILL LOVES sports. He wants to compete in athletics beginning next year at Maine West High School.

For his more creative moments, there's a set of drums which crowds one corner of his bedroom. And then there are the beer cans. Hundreds and hundreds of beer cans.

It all began about three years ago with Jim Holm, Bill's good friend from down the street who saved cans. Bill thought that might be interesting, even though his mother was not entirely convinced.

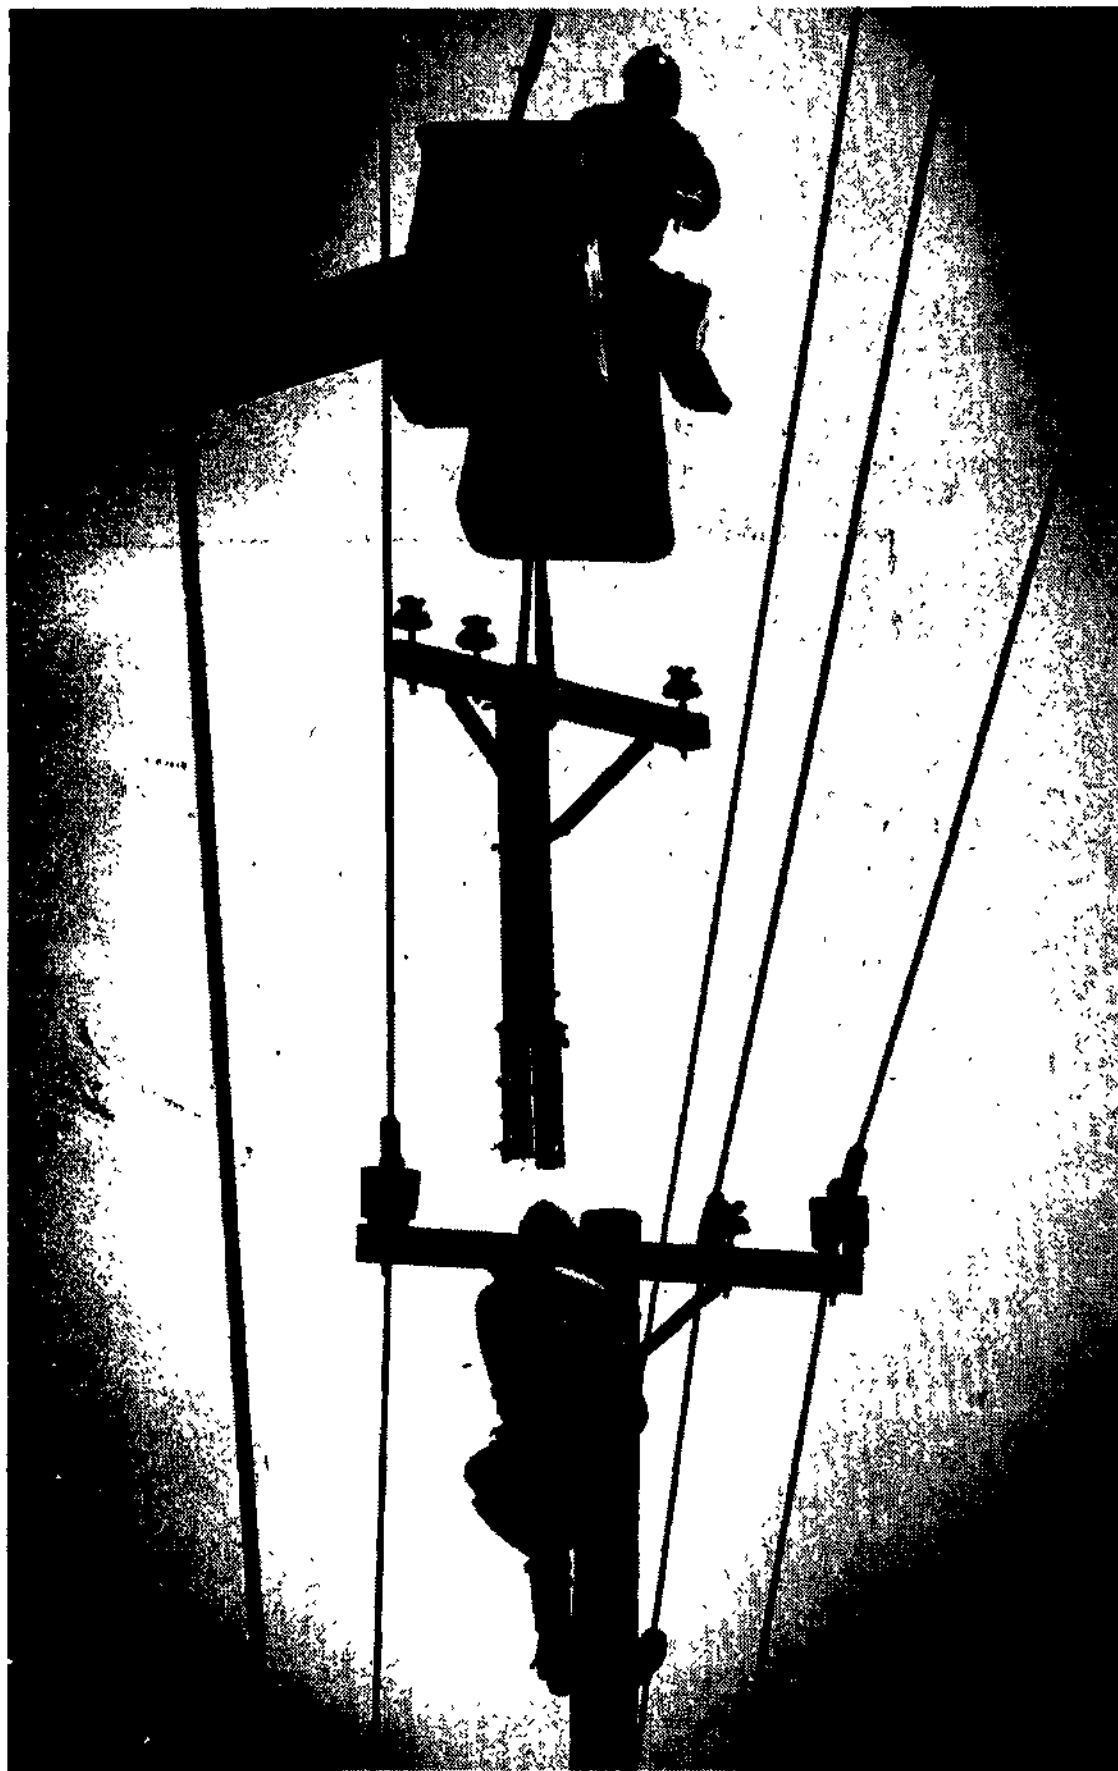

Virginia Wishart thought, "Oh, my God, beer cans! He's going into dumps... how unsanitary! Who needs them?"

Bill was not deterred.

"We started by going to flea markets, looking for cans, trading and buying the good cans," said Bill.

"Then we joined a few clubs and saw what they wanted is to trade cans. When you're a beginner..."

County weighs track site for courts building

by JOE SWICKARD

A site near Arlington Park Race Track is under consideration by Cook County officials as a Circuit Court mini-center, the Herald has learned.

Officials of Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights are actively promoting the site, 10 acres of vacant land at the southwest corner of Euclid Avenue and Wilke Road in Rolling Meadows.

The property is owned by the Madison Square Garden Corp., owners of the race track-Arlington Park Hilton Hotel complex.

COUNTY OFFICIALS said it is one of five or six possible locations in the area worthy of a "second look." About 20 possible locations were originally considered by the county last August and September.

Donald O'Connell, administrative director of the Circuit Court, said the sites will be reconsidered "within the next few weeks or about 30 days."

However, O'Connell said any locations being studied are "tentative" now and subject to final approval by the Cook County Board of Commissioners.

Arlington Heights Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the Rolling Meadows site is "perfect."

"We've been months now," Hanson said.

JOINING WITH Hanson have been Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer and Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, he said. Meyer and Ryan were not available for comment Thursday.

Advocates of the Rolling Meadows site say it is large enough to accommodate the building and necessary parking facilities in addition to its central location in the area and access by several major highways and the Chicago and North Western Ry. However, it is smaller than sites for two similar facilities, O'Connell said.

A court facility would be similar to ones planned in Maywood and Markham, he said.

If those plans were followed in the Northwest suburban facility, it would have about six to 10 court rooms and offices to house county and court clerks, probation officers and assistant state's attorneys. The courts would be able to handle probate and divorce actions in addition to criminal and traffic cases now dealt with in the branch courts, such as the one in the Arlington Heights municipal building.

DESPITE CONCERNS in some quarters that the county board may be hesitant about building another facility soon, O'Connell said plans for one in the area are "absolutely" still alive.

"We need more court space. We need more court space in northern Cook County. But when this might come to fruition, I really couldn't say," O'Connell said.

Among staunch supporters for en-

Elderly remember panic, fear of 1918 flu epidemic

by KURT BAER

(Last of a three-part series)

For those old enough to remember, the 1918 flu epidemic was a fearsome thing.

"One morning we sat at the window and counted 18 funerals pass our house before noon," 81-year-old Olga Bardinet recalled Thursday in her room at the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, Arlington Heights.

Her neighbor, 70-year-old Esther Rauscher, also has vivid memories of the influenza attack that killed 548,000 persons in the United States, 21 million worldwide.

"We lived in Bellwood and there was only one doctor for the area and he just couldn't take care of all the cases. My dad was a pastor, and he would go call on the people and pass out medicine," she said.

"MY MOTHER MADE asafetida bags that people wore around their neck. Quite a few died, although I don't know how many. (I was only 12 years old at the time.) Dad had to take care of the funerals. The people had to have tickets, pieces of paper, that said they could be allowed in to the funeral. We tried to do the best we could," Esther Rauscher remembers.

Health officials fear that a strain of so-called swine influenza isolated in February at Fort Dix, N.J., is similar to the killer 1918 flu. A national vaccination program is planned this summer and fall to head off another possible epidemic.

But in 1918 there was no vaccine. Influenza was not even known as a virus. Sulphur drugs and quinine were used to combat the disease, according to those who remember. And certain preventive measures sound almost primitive by contemporary standards.

MARTHA REITER, 78, remembers that the doctor told her to put camphor in her nostrils as a way to keep out flu germs. And 82-year-old Carl Schmiedtke recalls the words of his doctor.

"We didn't have (paper) tissues then. And the doctor told us, 'Don't reuse handkerchiefs. Use old rags. Then wrap them up in newspaper and burn them.'"

World health organizations around the world have been waiting for several years for evidence of a major shift in the flu bug—a signal that another epidemic may be on the way.

For the first time in history, it looks as though there will be time to take steps against a new flu, Dr. Edwin Kilbourne, head of the nation's first flu task force, told President Gerald Ford. The result is the $135 million national immunization plan.

Four drug companies already have begun mass production of what will amount to 200 million doses of vaccine—each about one-half cubic centimeter of clear liquid.

MANY OF THE INJECTIONS will be given by a high-pressure gun that forces the shot through the skin at very high pressure. This painless method of immunization eliminates

Train hits bike; boy, 15, killed

A 15-year-old Des Plaines boy was killed early Thursday when he was struck by a Chicago and North Western Ry. train while crossing an unguarded stretch of the track on his bicycle. Ronald Bahr, 444 N. Sixth Ave., was apparently on his way to school at Maine West High School, where he was a junior. Police said he was killed instantly.

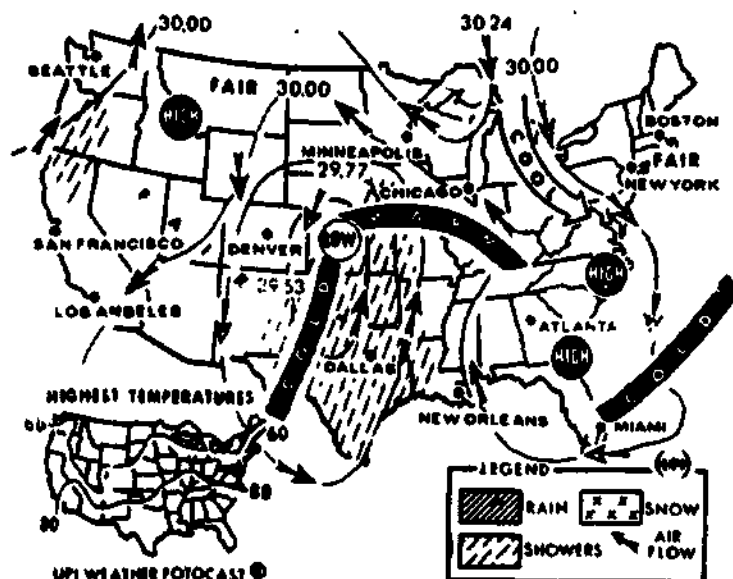

Rainstick Junction open

More than 1,000 unclaimed umbrellas in the Chicago and North Western Ry. lost and found are now available to commuters at the station. The umbrellas will be at the Rainstick Junction cart and free for the use of any North Western commuter caught unprepared in a sudden rainstorm. The Rainstick Junction cart has been in operation for 13 years, and more than 4,000 umbrellas have been distributed to commuters. Although all umbrellas are stamped "return to Rainstick Junction," one was recently spotted in West Berlin.

Walker cable hints no 3rd party

From Herald news services

Illinois Democrats took steps to heal splits left over from 1972 and the March 16 primary at their state convention Thursday in Springfield.

Gov. Daniel Walker, in a telegram to the convention, hinted strongly he will not form a third party to run in the Nov. 2 general election and will not work against Michael Howlett's bid for governor. Chicago Mayor Richard Daley said: "We are meeting at a time when the greatest call that can go out is a call for unity, confidence and consideration for one another."

Howlett asked delegates to "join with me in welcoming to our ranks every Democrat in Illinois."

Walker's telegram, read to the convention by John Touhy, Democratic state central committee chairman, was received with polite applause and fit into the unity theme. The telegram said: "I am a Democrat and I believe strongly in the two-party system. I believe the people of Illinois and across the nation need Democratic Party programs and Democratic Party victories in November."

THE TWO STATEMENTS seem to rule out the possibility of a third party candidacy by Walker and suggest the governor will at least not support Howlett's GOP foe, James Thompson, the Republican gubernatorial candidate.

Walker's Press Secretary Norton Kay refused to elaborate on the statement, telling reporters, "I think you're going to have to make your own interpretations."

Thursday night, however, an aide said the statement means Walker will not create a third party.

The convention was expected to select a chairman for the Illinois national convention delegation Thursday, but delayed action until sometime in June. Daley was expected to get the nod.

EARLIER THE convention rounded out the state's 169-member delegation to the national convention in New York City this July.

Delegates committed to U.S. Sen.

Adlai Stevenson III are Howlett; Lt. Gov. Neil Hartigan, state Senate Pres. Cecil Partee, Ray Schoessling, and Irene Hernandez, all of Chicago; Michael Bakalis, Downers Grove; and Anna Wall Scott, Champaign. There are also six alternates. Stevenson has a total of 86 delegates.

Delegates committed to Jimmy Carter are Angie Ray, Chicago; Cynthia Ingols, Oak Park; James Wall, Elmhurst; Margi Benton, Evanston, and Stanton Brody, Glencoe. There are four alternates. Carter has 59 delegates.

Ethics items to be on ballot: coalition

The three constitutional amendments proposed by the Coalition for Political Honesty will definitely appear on the November election ballot, officials for the coalition said Thursday.

Coalition officials said they expect to have at least 500,000 signatures by May 1, the deadline for placing constitutional amendments on the ballot. That would be 125,000 more than the number required to put the issue before Illinois voters.

The coalition has proposed three constitutional amendments which would prevent legislators from drawing their salaries a year in advance, ban double dipping, and strengthen provisions against conflict of interest in legislative votes.

DURING A DEBATE Thursday night on the amendments at the Wheeling Township Republican Organization meeting in Arlington Heights, coalition member Michael McGinn said, "This is the broadest coalition that has ever been assembled in the State of Illinois."

He said the coalition's goal is to restore honesty in the Illinois General Assembly. "At the present time, the Illinois General Assembly has a higher crime rate than the national rate," he said.

Arlington Heights attorney Richard Cowen, former Wheeling Township GOP committeeman, said he opposes the proposed amendments on double-dipping — the practice of a legislator holding two or more governmental jobs simultaneously — and conflict of interest.

Cowen said he has no problem supporting the amendment prohibiting advance pay, but said the double-dipping provision "is talking about a type of conflict of interest, but is it any different if a legislator is a member of another governmental agency or if he is a member of a union, a law firm, or is a farmer. Why say that a legislator can have any other outside source of income, but he can't have outside income from another governmental entity?"

COWEN SAID he also is concerned about the conflict of interest provision, which requires a legislator to abstain from any vote on which he has a "personal, family or financial interest."

"People elect representatives because they do have certain personal interests, and it is important that these come into play in the legislative caldron," Cowen said.

He said the most important thing a conflict of interest provision would do is outlaw "personal interest — meaning money, but not personal interests in a constituency."

Collector wants containers only

ner, you don't have enough cans to trade."

That presented a problem. Bill thought he had the answer: Yet another beer can club for beginning collectors.

THEY WOULD CALL it the International Society of Beer Can Collectors (ISOBCC), a rather mighty title.

Bill became its president and Jim Holm vice-president. Mitch Drain and Dan Flarito were enlisted as secretaries.

"We just thought it'd be an organization of kids from around here," said Bill.

So even Bill is surprised by the ISOBCC.

The society will have its second Can-Vent this Sunday at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel. It's a five-hour affair beginning at 11 a.m.

And judging from the ISOBCC's first Can-Vent which overflowed the O'Hare Inn's ballroom last Nov. 9, Bill thinks they might attract 8,000 people Sunday. He's sort of amazed.

"There will be about 200 exhibitors and we don't know how many 'walking traders,'" said Bill. "There's prizes for the best displays by exhibitors."

AFTER THAT initial Can-Vent, ISOBCC membership zoomed to nearly 1,000. The society's second News Digest, which Bill hopes to complete soon, will have a 2,000 advance printing.

So beer cans are booming.

BILL WISHART

Today

Mike Klein's people

Bill keeps more than 350 cans on two walls in his bedroom, not counting doubles.

He finds them most anywhere, in forest preserves, along railroad tracks, behind factories... wherever a litter bum might litter.

"That's what's nice about the hobby," said Bill. "You can go across the street and collect beer cans while you clean up your city."

Of course, those are just ordinary beer cans. The serious collector always looks for something special. And some cans appear so similar. Collectors will look for even the smallest difference, such as a misspelled word. Having the date on a can really helps.

Bill went to his shelf and pulled down a Gluek's Beer can.

The date said 1933. It's an especially fine can, one of six cone topped cans in Bill's collection. They are the ones which look like automotive additive cans.

CONE TOPS are all from the 1930s, even though some people are now making fakes.

Bill said there's an easy way to know fakes. All the originals had rounded bottoms. The fakes don't.

The Gluek's Beer can might be his oldest. "I wouldn't trade that," he said.

All the regular names fill the shelves in Bill's room. There are Old Chicago cans, Old Style cans, Pabst cans, Michelob cans and Schlitz cans.

But there are also Feldschlosschen cans, Big Cat Malt Liquor cans and a Carib Lager bottle from Trinidad.

Bill said that foreign cans "cost you." His first was an Asahi Lager Beer can from Japan. Bill paid $5 cents. The going rate today is $1.

One more thing... you might wonder what happens to all that beer. It just goes down the drain. Nobody in the house likes beer — they just like the cans.

Soviet choice is conflict or cooperation: Kissinger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said Thursday the United States has "the military power and the political will" to resist Soviet expansion in Africa, and offered Moscow a choice: conflict or cooperation.

"The Soviet Union's irresponsible and impermissible intervention in Africa remains a very dangerous element" in world affairs, Kissinger told a news conference on the eve of first official trip to black Africa.

"The United States has the military power and the political will to resist irresponsible actions."

Rejecting Ronald Reagan's claims that he is ready to settle for "the best deal" he can get with the Soviets, Kissinger said U. S. policy toward Moscow is a twofold affair.

"One, we will resist irresponsible action or Soviet use or supply of military power, or the use of surrogate forces," he said, meaning by "surrogate forces" the estimated 15,000 Cuban troops in Angola and other African states.

"Two, we remain ready to work for a more peaceful world."

Asked what Soviet action would satisfy his demand for "responsible" behavior in Africa, he said Moscow would have to reduce its supplies of military equipment and advisors, and Cuba would have to withdraw its forces from the continent.

Premier Fidel Castro Monday called President Ford "a vulgar liar" for suggesting Cuban troops were in Africa at Soviet instigation.

Discussing the positive potential of U. S.-Soviet relations, Kissinger said a second-stage strategic arms limitation agreement is still "possible and desirable" and added, "I would not exclude the possibility of significant progress this year."

Kissinger leaves Friday on a two-week trip to Kenya, Tanzania, Zambia, Zaire, Senegal, Ghana and Liberia — his first trip as secretary to black Africa.

"We are certainly going with an attitude of good will," he said, and a desire to demonstrate both U. S. opposition to white minority regimes and concern for close ties with black African nations.

"We are not going with the intention of attempting to set up puppet regimes," he said. "The only successful African policy is one in which African nations can achieve their objectives without outside intervention."

He said he would not meet with any of the white leaders of Rhodesia, where black guerrilla warfare is on the rise.

He said he believes it is still possible for blacks to achieve majority rule in Rhodesia by peaceful means.

Boston courthouse ripped by dynamite bomb, 20 hurt

BOSTON (UPI) — A dynamite bomb wrapped in a paper bag exploded in a downtown courthouse lobby Thursday morning, injuring 20 persons.

Four victims of the bombing remained hospitalized. One man had his foot blown off.

Officials immediately acted to prevent the incident from igniting further trouble in the tense city, although there was no evidence the bombing was related to recent incidents of racial violence. Police could give no motive for the bombing.

Mayor Kevin White and Gov. Michael Dukakis appealed for calm and planned to lead a "procession against violence" through the downtown area Friday.

An anonymous telephone tip had been received at the courthouse 20 minutes before the 9:12 a.m. blast, which shredded walls and shattered windows just as the police bomb squad pulled up to the building.

The incident touched off a wave of fake bomb threats, resulting in the evacuation of two state office buildings.

Police had conflicting descriptions of the possible bomber, but finally cancelled all of them.

Police Commissioner Robert McGahey said the explosion in the second floor lobby of the 15-story Suffolk County Superior Court building was in "no way at all related to the racial attack" Wednesday night in which whites stoned a black woman and her child. The city has been jarred repeatedly in the past days by racial beatings and stonings.

The FBI and police investigated whether the bombing was a reference to the attack on the black woman or to a man awaiting trial for murder.

"There was blood all over the floor; I was even slipping on it as I tried to help the injured," said Capitol Police Officer Dennis Sullivan, one of the first to arrive at the scene of the bombing.

Assistant District Attorney Paul Buckley, his suit splattered with blood, said "everyone seemed to be moaning and crying" after the explosion. "Some were screaming. Others were sitting down on the floor, bleeding. Everyone seemed to be covered with white."

A police spokesman said the call may have referred to the attack on the woman and child or to an upcoming murder trial.

"I'm lucky to be alive," said a stunned Nat Desreux, who was standing outside the probation department on the second floor when the bomb went off about 9:15 a.m. "All I know is this bomb went off and when I turned around there were bodies lying all over the floor."

Cuban embassy in Lisbon bombed

A bomb ripped through the sixth floor offices of the Cuban Embassy in Lisbon, Portugal, Thursday, causing death, injury, heavy damage and near-panic. Hospital spokesmen said the blast killed one man and injured at least five persons, including a policeman and a woman said to be in critical condition. The explosion came only hours after the military's revolutionary council ordered the army on full alert in the event of violence during the voting Sunday in Portugal's first free legislative elections in 50 years.

Butz' tour could have been cheaper

Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz and a party of 25 other persons, including wives of department officials, are using an Air Force VIP jet on a globe-girdling trade tour that will cost $1,800 more per person than commercial airfare. The Agriculture Department said in a statement, released in response to questions, that it will reimburse the Air Force for the cost of operating the VC135 aircraft and crew on the three-week trip. Total cost is estimated at about $112,000. This averages out to $4,307 for each of the 26 persons making the full 10-country tour through the Pacific, Asia and Europe. According to travel agencies, a regular economy class ticket for the same trip would cost $2,349.

Candidates ask high court fund help

All the major presidential candidates except President Ford asked the Supreme Court Thursday to release $2.2 million in federal campaign funds blocked by congressional bickering over the powers of the Federal Election Commission. Ronald Reagan joined six Democratic contenders in complaining that their First Amendment rights and those of the American taxpayers are being violated by the failure of Congress to reconstitute the commission. Federal funds were cut off last month following two stays of a Supreme Court order saying the FEC was illegally constituted. Congress agreed on a compromise measure but went on its Easter-Passover holiday before taking action on the proposal.

Witness says he gave Moore $25,000

The chief government witness in the extortion trial of Gov. Arch Moore testified Thursday he gave Moore $25,000 in 1972 in the hope of obtaining a desperately-needed state banking charter. Theodore Price, former president of a now bankrupt loan company empire, said during direct examination he gave the money in three installments to the Republican governor. Moore, 53, and his former top aide, William Loy, 43, are each charged with a single count of conspiring to extort $25,000 from Price in return for the bank charter, which never was granted. If convicted in the W. Virginia case, each could be sentenced to 20 years in prison and fined $10,000.

Revolutionary government threatened

New fighting erupts in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Moslem leftists Thursday threatened to set up a revolutionary government and "liberate" Christian-held areas of Lebanon unless Christian President Suleiman Franjeh is replaced within 10 days. Franjeh gave no indication he was about to step down.

A new battle erupted Thursday evening between Moslems and Christians and conflicting casualty reports said between 80 and 150 persons were killed or wounded.

There was heavy mortar fire between the Moslem area of Naabab and the predominantly Christian suburb of Sin el Fil. Artillery of the rebel Lebanese Arab Army near Beirut airport opened up to counter the guns of the rightists blasting Naabab.

Rebel army mortars in uptown Kantari also fired dozens of shells into rightist areas.

First leftist casualty reports said 82 persons had been killed or wounded.

Soliah testifies he lived, slept with Patty Hearst

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Steven Soliah testified under oath Thursday in his trial on bank robbery charges that he and Patricia Hearst shared an intimate relationship during her "missing year" as a fugitive.

Soliah, under direct examination by his attorney, said he met Miss Hearst in Berkeley about one month after the May 1974 shootout between six SLA members and Los Angeles police. She was with Bill and Emily Harris, and they were carrying bags of guns.

After that he saw her off-and-on for several months and finally lived with her at the time of their arrest in San Francisco.

"I lived with her, I slept with her, we had a very close relationship," said the accused bank robber as he testified before the jury for the first time in his trial and denied any part in the robbery.

Under direct examination, Soliah admitted he owned ammunition for a 9 mm pistol similar to cartridges found on the floor of the suburban Crocker National Bank after the April 21, 1975 holdup. He added that he owned a 9 mm pistol that he bought from a former roommate in 1974.

But he told the jury that he lived in San Francisco at the time of the robbery in Carmichael, 90 miles away.

In San Francisco, meantime, a court-appointed psychiatrist who examined Miss Hearst shortly after her arrest, backed up her story that she feared for her life from both police and William and Emily Harris during her underground days and was just trying to "survive on a day-to-day basis."

Dr. Donald Lunde told UPI Miss Hearst had an "irrational fear" of the Harrises, who last week were charged with her kidnapping. He said she was terrified by the thought that she would be killed because they might try to shoot it out if trapped, as were six terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army members slain in Los Angeles.

Miss Hearst was also "not particularly politically oriented — if anything, she was politically naive," Lunde said his study of her social background before her kidnapping showed. "She was certainly not politically active."

Lunde, 39, a Stanford University psychiatrist who found the heiress mentally competent to stand trial, said he was the first mental expert to examine her after her capture last September and that from the beginning, "she told me she was afraid of the Harrises."

The rightists said they had sustained "a number" killed and 150 wounded.

A Beirut radio station said the leftists would set up a revolutionary government in their own sector after May 2 unless a new president is picked by then and "lead the battle for the liberation of other areas."

A statement from the electricity department, meantime, said Lebanon faced the possibility of a total power blackout. Chairman Faud Bizri said only one of the 13 main power lines was still functioning and three weeks of absolute peace would be needed to repair the others.

U.S. Envoy Dean Brown concluded a three-week mission Thursday, meeting Health Minister Majid Arslan and Economy Minister Adel Osseiran. He will see Franjeh Friday, then fly to London to report to Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. He will go on to Washington for further consultations before returning to Beirut, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

The right-wing Phalangist party radio said France was pursuing the possibility of sending troops to Lebanon to operate with Syrian forces in enforcing a cease-fire in the year-old civil war.

French Ambassador Hubert Argod has gone to Damascus for consultations with Syrian officials, the radio said.

But a French Embassy spokesman said Argod was in Syria to see his wife and France's position on sending troops to Lebanon was well known.

"If all sides requested such a move, a favorable response was possible," he said.

As the presidency again became the key issue in the Lebanese crisis, street fighting died down in most areas of Beirut but heavy shooting continued in the downtown commercial sector.

Earlier Thursday Beirut airport came under rocket fire that damaged three parked planes, one of them a freighter leased to the Lebanese company Trans Mediterranean Airlines.

Franjeh meantime met with his Maronite Christian allies near Jounieh, north of Beirut. The group may "formulate a final stand" Friday.

KING CARL XVI Gustaf of Sweden, left, examines 1896 Duryea, the first American car manufactured in the U.S. as he toured Greenfield village and Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn, Mich. Thursday as part of his 26-day U.S. tour.

Vernon Walters quits CIA

• The White House Thursday announced the resignation of Deputy CIA Director Vernon Walters, a key Watergate witness who testified he tried to stop the FBI Watergate probe on Richard Nixon's orders. Presidential press secretary Ron Nessen, said Walters, 59, an Army lieutenant general, was leaving the No. 2 agency post because CIA Director George Bush "wanted to build his own team." The announcement said President Ford was nominating Associate Deputy CIA Director Henry Kacoe 51, to succeed Walters.

• Princess Anne, who sustained a cracked vertebra and concussion when her horse rolled on her, was transferred by ambulance Thursday to London strapped in a stretcher. She was ordered to spend a second night in the hospital. A statement issued by Buckingham Palace said Anne was recovering from the mild concussion but still had a headache. It minimized the spinal injury.

• The American Broadcasting Company has an agreement in principle with Barbara Walters for her to serve as a co-anchorperson on the ABC evening news program, a spokesman for the network said Thursday. In addition, Miss Walters will host four prime-time television specials each year and serve frequently as the host of the Sunday ABC news series "Issues and Answers," the spokesman said.

• World famous film director Ingmar Bergman announced Thursday he had gone into exile because of his battle with Swedish tax officials and will henceforth produce his movies elsewhere. The two-time Academy Award winner already has left Sweden and was reported to be staying with friends in Paris.

• Judith Campbell Exner, who claimed she had an affair with the late President Kennedy, has won another round in her battle to look at her FBI files. Edward Schwartz, chief U.S. District Court Judge in San Diego, denied a government request to delay turning over the files until officials had filled thousands of earlier requests.

Rolling Meadows to ask village

'Post full pump price of gasoline'

Rolling Meadows officials will ask Arlington Heights and Palatine officials to require that service stations advertise the full pump price of gasoline instead of the separate prices of gasoline and sales tax.

"We believe the ordinance we adopted a year ago is a good one and plan to send a copy of it to communities that border our city, asking their officials to also consider adopting it," Ald. Daniel Weber said Thursday.

Weber is chairman of the city's public works, building and zoning committee.

TWO ROLLING MEADOWS service station owners, Ron Langton and Eric Christiansen, have asked the committee to review the city's sign ordinance.

Station owners in the city, if they advertise at all, must post signs that show the full price instead of gallon price excluding tax.

Langton, owner of the Standard Service station on Hicks and Euclid roads, Thursday said, "the city's rule does not allow us to be competitive. It was needed when it was adopted, but since the state has passed laws that govern advertising of gas prices, the city law is no longer needed," he said.

Langton said station owners in most other communities can advertise pump or gallon price, plus tax.

"A Rolling Meadows station across the street from a station in another town that's advertising gallon price doesn't have a chance," Langton said.

"The ordinance definitely hurts our business. It's doubly discriminatory," Langton said.

"WHY DON'T THEY pass an ordinance that requires the grocery store to add the tax price to a head of lettuce. That's what they are making us do," he said.

Langton and Christiansen, owner of the Standard Service station at 1801 Algonquin Rd., both said they are pleased with the aldermen's quick response to their request to review the ordinance.

"Right now a station across the street from me, because it is in another town, can post a gallon price plus tax. If I sell my gas for the same price but post a pump price, the average motorist will look at the sign and still think his gas is selling cheaper than mine," Christiansen said.

Christiansen said the public works committee has offered to meet again with service station owners after it receives a response from Arlington Heights and Palatine officials.

"I believe the ordinance was first adopted because the city officials believed neighboring communities around us would also impose the rule," Christiansen said.

Neighboring Schaumburg and Elk Grove Village have similar ordinances.

"I'm not attempting to have the city's ordinance repealed," Christiansen said.

County mulls courts facility in area

(Continued from Page 1) Large court facilities have been local police officials. They have said recently in the past that their men lose time traveling to the branches, which are often overcrowded.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case said, "I have no objection to it here. Any court facility moving closer to being a centralized location that would save our men time and travel, I would have no objections to." ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Police Capt. Maurice J. English said, "It's (a) logical (location). It has the area for parking, it's centrally located, and it would be accessible. The site has a great deal of potential."

If the court facility is built, it might figure into a suggested reorganization of the district court boundaries. One suggested realignment calls for using the Tri-State Tollway as an east-west border, which would place most Northwest suburbs within the proposed facility's jurisdiction.

Circuit Court Judge Harold Sullivan, presiding judge of the 2nd District, said he would favor a new facility, but said "the big problem" is whether the county board will be able to continue to provide funds for the facility.

O'Connell said the inspection of the five or six sites still under consideration will begin after construction of the Markham facility is underway. He said he could not speculate when a final decision might be reached.

No foul play seen in death of exec

Investigators are discounting the possibility of foul play in the death of the president of an Arlington Heights publishing company whose body was discovered in a forest preserve Tuesday.

Metzger, a Winnetka resident, was last seen Monday afternoon as he left his company offices.

It doesn't appear to be murder at this point," said Phillip Bettiker, Cook County Sheriff's police investigator. Bettiker said Metzger's body showed no marks of violence. His car, parked nearby, wallet and personal effects were undisturbed, he said.

The coroner's office will perform an autopsy on the body and results are expected "within two weeks" from the tests, Bettiker said.

The investigator said it is possible that Metzger was fatally stricken as he walked in the forest preserve near Palatine Road and Edens Expressway.

Metzger's company, in the village north industrial park, publishes college textbooks.

Is Sleeping Sickness Still Around?

Yes it is, according to public health officials who are worried that outbreaks of encephalitis could be spreading. Encephalitis is a mosquito-borne virus. Its symptoms include headaches, lethargy, dizziness, stiff neck, nausea and fever. In its most virulent form it attacks the brain and may produce coma and possible death.

Though the symptoms of the virus have been pinned down, there is no specific treatment or vaccine. Health authorities still consider the best protection to be a strong mosquito control program. Do not hesitate to consult a doctor if the symptoms of encephalitis are present.

SPREADING JUNIPERS are one of the most versatile of all evergreens. They're hardy and fast growing and can be found in a wide choice of shapes — and they will fit into even the most modest landscape budgets.

Guest gardener

by ED FINK
of Klehm's Nursery

Whatever else is used in a landscape plan the essential element of success is with the use of evergreens. Mention the word evergreen and it is almost automatic the plant one imagines is a Christmas tree-like plant. Nothing could be more wrong. In the evergreen family there are seven basic forms from the spreading junipers that hug the earth and grow only about three inches high to the towering pines, firs and spruces that can be as much as 50 to 70 feet and more tall. One of the things that makes the evergreens so desirable is that in the winter when shrubs and trees have lost their foliage the evergreens will retain their color giving a bright look to the winter landscape.

Of all the evergreens perhaps the most versatile is the juniper, known botanically as Juniperus. Junipers are hardy and fast growing and with a wide choice in shape and form they fit into any landscape plan and even into modest landscape budgets. Another virtue of the juniper is that the color is not limited to green. In the family, in addition to various shades of green, there are junipers in shades of blue and even the Gold Coast that has golden foliage. An especially attractive juniper is the Andorra (Juniperus horizontalis plumosa) with feathery green foliage that turns to plum purple in winter.

Starting at ground level are the spreading junipers that are excellent ground covers and for foundation plantings. The very excellent Blue Rug grows into a thick mat that will be only about three inches tall and a single plant will spread to as much as five to six feet. This is a choice plant for an oriental effect and unexcelled to plant where a cascading effect over walls, rocks or railroad ties is wanted. Other spreading plants, such as the popular Hetzi, will grow to about five feet tall and can be an unusual accent at a corner of a building or to soften a gas light standard. The Hetzi is a special favorite of landscapers for it is one of the junipers that will adjust to light shade but more important, it will tolerate hot, dry locations and will do well even in poor soil. There are many other good spreading junipers that can't be mentioned in this limited space but you can be sure there is a suitable juniper for just

Add new grass by over-seeding

Some lawns are so thin or open that even heavy fertilization will not be enough to thicken them up in one season. Adding new grass plants by over-seeding the lawn is advisable in such situations.

A good rule of thumb is that wherever bare soil is clearly visible, sowing grass seed is sensible. Otherwise nature may beat you to it with weeds.

Another common re-seeding situation isn't evidenced by bare soil, but something just as visible — patches of dead vegetation. They are actually the skeletal remains of last year's crabgrass plants. When they disintegrate this spring, their place will be taken by a new crop of crabgrass (from seed dropped last fall) unless remedial steps are taken. First, grass seed should be sown to re-establish the desirable plants smothered by last year's crabgrass. Then crabgrass preventer should be spread, being careful to use one which is compatible with grass seed.

Still another good reason for re-seeding is to upgrade the lawn by adding newer, improved varieties of grasses — such as Vicia, Windsor and Vantage Kentucky bluegrasses or Biltmore hard fescue. Richer, more vibrant greens, better shade adaptability, more disease resistance, and denser growth characteristics are some of the performance advantages to be gained by introducing these superior performers into a lawn.

Also in the juniper family are the upright growers. These will vary from the Iowa juniper that will grow to eight to nine feet tall to the Canaert that will reach 18 feet. The Canaert is an especially attractive tree with heavy foliage that remains bright green through every season and further enhances its beauty by bearing bright blue berries in the fall. The upright junipers offer a variety of color ranging from bright green to shades of blue and blue-gray. For landscapers who want a carefree form rather than the neat symmetrical there is the Robusta juniper with a random outline.

For those who want something distinctive and unusual there are sculptured or topiary junipers. These are shaped into pom poms, lollipops, poodles and other forms. Also interesting, is that some species of junipers lend themselves especially well for bonsai plantings.

AMERICA'S MASTER GARDENER

Timely tips

Cool season vegetables should have been planted already, if not... do so immediately. However, do not work a wet soil unless you want a soil like concrete.

About mid to late April start warm season plants indoors. These should be planted outside around Memorial Day.

Many factors can affect germinating flower seed

Getting good flower seed germination rates indoors or out involves many factors, says G. M. Foster, University of Illinois floriculture specialist.

Foster offers these tips to aid success:

Buy seed from a reputable dealer. If you stored your own seed dry and cool throughout the winter, it probably retained its ability to produce new growth. However, seed stored at quite warm temperatures may germinate poorly.

It doesn't pay to try to get a head start on nature by sowing seeds outdoors too early in the spring, Foster says. It's better to sow seeds indoors four to eight weeks before you normally can start them outdoors, depending on their rate of development. Then you can plant the young seedlings directly into their final location.

A good indoor soil mix contains equal parts garden loam soil, peat-moss and perlite or vermiculite. Prepare the soil bed before seeding so the soil particles in the upper layer are small and will come in contact with the seed. If the soil particles are too large, there will be air pockets around the seed, resulting in poor germination.

Planting depth often determines whether germination succeeds, Foster adds. It's especially important with very small seeds, like snapdragon or petunia. Small seeds should be placed on the surface of the soil bed and then watered in with a fine mist. If small seeds are covered with soil, germination will often be very poor and erratic.

Thoroughly moisten the soil before sowing large seed. Place the seeds on the soil mix and then cover them with the same mixture or with soil to a depth of two to three times the diameter.

Prevent erosion

Wind and rain are serious threats to land. Each year millions of acres of land and millions of dollars are lost due to soil erosion. Trees, shrubs, plants, grass, ivy and other ground cover provides a protective barrier against the destructive effects of rain and wind on soil. A properly planted row of trees can reduce eroding force of wind by as much as 75 per cent. Foliage plants help break up raindrops and soften their destructive impact on soil.

Cheap vacation

One of the most inexpensive vacation spots is a gazebo in the backyard, or a sun-shaded deck for lounging and barbecuing.

ter of the seed.

Place the seeded container in a plastic bag to maintain a high humidity level. Temperatures should be kept around 70 degrees F. Be sure to remove the plastic bag as soon as the seedlings emerge. Place the container in a sunny window and maintain night temperatures of about 60 degrees F.

Thin out a sowing after the seedlings have started to develop their true leaves, Foster says. This is necessary to provide adequate space for each plant.

Annual flowers should not be sown outdoors until after the soil starts to warm up. If the soil is cool and wet, many seeds will rot and some seedlings will be lost even before they break through the soil surface. Wait until maple leaves start to appear — this usually coincides with warming temperatures, Foster says.

It's also important to keep the soil surface moist at all times. If the soil surface dries out periodically, germination will be delayed. And, if the soil becomes very dry at times, the germinating seeds or young seedlings will perish, Foster includes

Give fruit trees attention now

Prompt attention may save young fruit trees damaged by rabbits this winter says James E. Schuster, extension horticulturist at the DuPage County Cooperative Extension Service office in Wheaton. If a complete circle of inner bark was not eaten away, that portion of the tree above the injury may survive. Treat the wound with commercially prepared tree wound dressing and wrap it with newspapers. This will keep the wound from drying and protect it from the weather. If the wound dries before the injury is discovered, the life sustaining inner bark probably would die.

If the part of the tree above the wound cannot be saved, there is still a possibility of developing a new tree. When new shoots arise from the part of the trunk above the graft union, the strongest one can be trained into a new tree. Remove all other shoots and any shoots or suckers growing from below the graft union.

If your shade and flowering trees showed short annual growth, sparse foliage or light green and yellow leaves last summer, they may need fertilizing says Schuster. And the time to apply that fertilizer is in early spring when the buds begin to swell. Mid-summer fertilizing may stimulate new vegetative growth too late in the season and cause the tree to be unprepared for winter.

Fertilizer should be applied in the feeder root area. These roots are usually in the top 18 inches of soil and extend just beyond the spread of the branches.

The fertilizer should be placed in holes about two feet apart. Apply one to two pounds of fertilizer per inch of trunk diameter.

Although evergreen trees need less fertilizer, they usually benefit from an annual application of about 1/3 pound per foot of height.

Schuster also warns that nursery stock is a perishable product and the plants should be set into the ground while they are dormant and less sensitive to the stresses of transplanting.

Some plants are sold without soil on the roots. These are called bare-root stock. This plant material is usually cheaper than plants in containers or plants having the soil around the roots and wrapped in burlap.

Soak the roots of bare-root stock in water for at least 12 hours before planting. If you can't plant immediately, store plant material in a cool place out of wind and sunlight.

Take care to keep the soil on balled and burlapped plants moist. And, when planting, leave the burlap around the roots but tuck burlap down around base of ball. Completely untie and remove the twine. Twine left on the plant could strangle the growing plant later.

Container-grown or potted plants may be set anytime the ground isn't frozen. They take the shock of transplanting much better than any other kind of nursery stock.

Start seedlings with seed tapes

by BILL MEACHEM

In the 30 or so years that I have been involved in home gardening, perhaps the most dramatic innovation in plant propagation has been the seed tape.

Seed tapes are not new, you'll tell me. True, they have been around for several years. I've refrained from writing about them until I had used them more and ironed out some kinks in their use.

As you all know, seed tapes are ribbons of a plastic-like material in which seeds are imbedded an inch or so apart. The strip itself dissolves when it comes into contact with water, leaving only the seeds.

Seed tapes, I've found, are great for starting little seedlings. I use a flat tray of some kind — sometimes large, sometimes small. When growing seedlings from tape in these trays they are nicely spaced apart and do not need to be transplanted until they are ready to go out into the garden. This saves time.

I use a combination of sterilized soil, peatmoss and vermiculite — a third each — for my seed-starting mix. This mixture will sustain the seedlings with a little nutrition until it is time to plant them in the open garden.

Now, here's a trick I learned. Keep the seed-starting soil dry when you are placing the tapes. As soon as it gets moist, the tape becomes sticky and hard to work with. Because the tape holds the seed in place, you can water them from the top with a fine spray as soon as the tape is in place.

You'll find some gaps with certain seed tapes. This is to be expected. Not all seeds will germinate — even in the regular seed packet. But you can give the seedlings a better chance for survival if you prevent bugs by spraying the soil with an aerosol before placing the tapes.

One objection I have heard about is that tapes are expensive. Yes, they cost a little more than packet seeds. But I don't mind paying a little extra for the convenience of not having to transplant my seedlings. Also, if I put tapes in rows outdoors, I will eliminate the first thinning, and give the little seedlings a better chance of getting over the first few weeks without competing among themselves.

Organize watering chores

by Janet Tara

It's best to have one person responsible for the watering of plants. If you have more than one eager gardener in your family, divide the plants equally and make sure each person is responsible for the plants in her or his territory. That goes for regular watering, inspecting for diseases and fertilizing.

If you have a hard time keeping track of which plants need watering once a week, once every other day or once every two weeks, try to group the plants according to pot size and type. To aid your memory, group all plastic potted plants in one area or room; all of the same or similar size, variety and type on one windowsill. Coordinate groups with light requirements.

Big plants pose a more complex watering problem. It's best to have them in pots with drainage holes that will tell you when you have watered enough. Overwatering is very easy with plants in enclosed containers. Try keeping a log book for big plants to help determine when they need watering, but always do the finger test too. Push your finger gently in about one inch to test for dry soil. Then water if necessary.

Always water thoroughly. Don't tease plants with little bits of water each day. Little bits of water cause a plant to grow fitfully as it tries to reach water just beyond its roots. Uneven watering inhibits proper growth.

Area questions RTA rate plan

The Regional Transportation Authority appears to be preparing the public for new taxes, and suburban residents understandably are apprehensive.

A recently released staff report says the RTA budget will be in the red by almost $52.9 million by the end of next year. The deficit is expected to increase to $96.1 million by 1981.

The report recommends that the RTA seriously consider either a gasoline or parking tax, noting that fare increases or drastic service cuts otherwise will be needed.

Residents of the Northwest suburbs must wonder what service they are talking about. The bus systems operating in several communities have little ridership, and the Chicago and North Western Ry. and the RTA have been unable to settle their differences over funding.

What they understand, however, is that good public transportation is expensive but necessary. But the RTA figures are unconvincing, particularly since the preliminary budget approved in January showed a $54,000 surplus for the coming fiscal year.

At least one suburban RTA board member, D. Daniel Baldino of Evanston, said he is not convinced that "the numbers are right at all" which point to a rate increase.

We agree and would like to see the RTA justify its financial projections. A good place to start would be the preparation of a balanced budget instead of relying on the current deficit estimates.

The board and the public should know exactly what programs would have to be cut if new funds aren't found. The RTA staff has not yet prepared such a document, and without it the board cannot hope to make an intelligent decision on the need for new taxes.

Nearly three-quarters of the RTA's $811 million five-year program currently is slated for the Chicago Transit Authority. Many suburbanites feel the CTA is a patronage-ridden agency that soaks the public and should be overhauled.

By comparison, the meager suburban share of RTA funds has been a bitter pill for many to swallow. Most, however, have taken a wait-and-see attitude.

While belt-tightening does not always provide needed answers, it is a good place to start. If the RTA hopes to sell new taxes to the suburbanites, it better be able to justify every penny.

I'm always skeptical of unforgettable figures!

Magna Carta still has Senate in revolution

by STEVE GERSTEL

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Damn the British. Even 200 years after losing the colonies, they still have Americans up in arms.

Not that they meant to, Lord forbid. Always gracious and sportsmanlike in defeat, the British generously offered to loan the United States an original copy of the Magna Carta to mark the rituals accompanying the Bicentennial. It was really very decent of them.

And to make a bit of a ceremony of it — instead of just stuffing it in the cargo hold of the Concorde — the British said why don't 25 of you come visit and escort it to the United States.

Sounds pleasant enough, doesn't it? But Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield had more trouble getting approval for the trip from his colleagues than the 13th Century Lords had wringing the Magna Carta out of King John at Runnymede.

Before it was all over, the normally mild-mannered Mansfield (Irish) was furious. So was highly excitable Sen. John O. Pastore (Italian) who can blow at major and minor controversies with equal abandon.

Sen. Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla., said sending 25 would turn the trip into a "magna junket."

"A smaller delegation, in my opinion, will not be an affront to the British," Bartlett said. "I believe a larger delegation will be an affront to the American taxpayer."

The Senate agreed and tentatively voted to dispatch a delegation of nine.

Then Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., said nine was fine but that they should pay their own way.

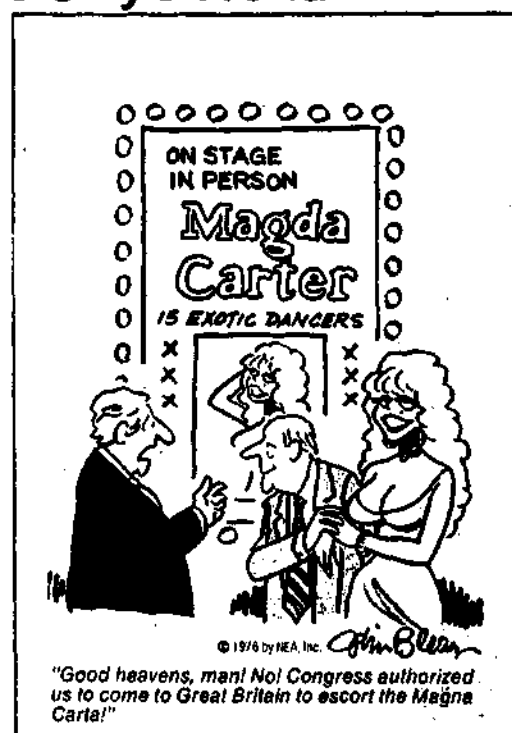

"I should think that any member of the Senate or any member of the House would be delighted to make this trip, possibly on an excursion basis, and go over and pick up the Magna Carta," Allen said.

That was too much for Pastore. He said, "If you want to go over and get the Magna Carta, go over and get it. I am not a candidate for the trip. I do not have the time. I really do not care for the air flight."

"But all of this comedy, all of this nonsense," he bellowed, "I think is a disgrace. It is a disgrace."

Mansfield said, "This is the 200th year of our independence and here we are making fools of ourselves. "Do we have no appreciation of an offer extended in good faith by those whom we defeated to acquire our independence," Mansfield asked. "Do we not have any sense of decency and dignity and decorum?"

Berry's World

Properly abashed, the Senate reversed itself. There will be 25 coming after all.

And it can be presumed that the well-mannered Britons will not mention that nasty bit of business on the Senate floor.

Editorial on marijuana regulations questioned

Your editorial comments against local marijuana regulations in Friday's Herald cannot go without a response. The article did little for my faith in your reporting and research of previous material. It supports my feeling of the "Power of the Press" — which when properly used can be educational and beneficial to the public — however this was not the case.

Decriminalization has never been considered in Hoffman Estates regarding the use and possession of marijuana or any other cannabis derivative. It has been clearly stated in public committee that at least in my opinion, this subject is illegal, will always be illegal, and is one of the most violent crimes in our society today.

The attitude you display of status quo regarding both the problem and a solution is impossible to understand. In light of the most obvious traffic in dope in the suburban area plus the increase in activity reported by the media, I would have assumed the opposite from your staff. Your position in the community should have made you even more aware than others.

In no way do I want our proposed ordinance to conflict with the proper enforcement of the State drug statutes. As you reported a legal opinion is being sought at this time, not on the impact as you stated, but on the enforceability in our local courts. The impact would be nothing but positive, both in our Schools and in our Village. Since possession under state law now calls for a 6 month jail sentence and a maximum fine of $1,000.00, it should be very obvious that a local ordinance establishing reasonable local control could and would only improve on the current application of the law on this subject.

We would all no doubt be more comfortable if the proposed ordinance were a state law, which will be brought to the attention of our state legislatures. However, until that time, I cannot accept a "head in the sand" type attitude on this most serious subject. It will not go away, and to do nothing about it is like giving tacit approval to this violent crime which is the destruction of the minds and bodies of our young people today.

Based upon what little we know of the Groups who oppose the strict application of the law on cannabis control and their resistance to local ordinances, plus the members of our society who will feel it directly in their wallets, it not only indicates that we are on the right track but that we may have hit them right where it counts.

A state law on this subject will be fine, but we just can't wait! Every day and every night more and more of our youths in school and from every walk of life are offered and exposed to "grass" — and even worse! We cannot afford to look the other way, to say the law is too severe or to ask and wait for others to act. Nor can it be suggested that we do nothing.

The present state statutes may in the future be amended or rewritten to whatever extent. But today as they are written, they desperately need help. Local ordinance control will provide local action. This will work toward the reduction and with the aid of all involved, the possible elimination of marijuana and all other cannabis derivatives from our community.

Death penalty letter amusing

This is a response to Mr. Dalton R. Harold's letter, "Reject death penalty," April 13 issue.

I was most amused by the letter. In that letter he elaborates on how intolerant and brutal our society has been, and that we have failed. He states that the death penalty is a step backwards. What does he offer as an alternative solution?

He should consider this: A man brutally beats, rapes and murders a young girl (who just happens to be someone's daughter). What sort of "forward step" would be recommended for him? The Dale Carnegie course?

The death penalty certainly is not a solution. But our laws do provide that the punishment should fit the crime.

When an offender is convicted of an atrocious, heinous crime, the death penalty is more than justified.

Her concern is for Dist. 214

I can surely appreciate the apprehension residents and school boards sending students to Dist. 214 may have.

For the past 18 years I have watched high school elections to the point of disinterest. Why? It has been noted by vote count, location of winners proved a fact that year after year residents in certain areas worked hard to get their candidate elected.

Why would one community with the help of Paddock (Publications) work so hard to defeat Elk Grove candidates. Could it be control? Because of this many residents who would look at the total district and total problems refused to run. This year we have a winner, Mrs. (Marilyn) Quinn, the first in a long time. I wish her well (and look at where the vote came from for her victory).

Education is a very serious business. It controls the destiny of a community by its programs in school. It creates or eliminates problems in a community by its overall internal discipline. It creates pride in a community by its attitude of teachers. At one time I would say this was true of Elk Grove High School. Not now.

Many times in the past and even now, the only time the board and superintendent know we exist in the south and across the tracks is when talks of a unit district comes up. Take a look at your night school programs. Where are most located?

Now, since Elk Grove furnishes 40 per cent of the operation base to support Dist. 214, ask where it comes from and the problems this 40 per cent creates for a community — the Industrial Park. It creates heavy traffic, police problems, industrial blight. Because of this, I would think we would have the best of everything. It has been noted only in the past couple of years an upgrading of the grounds has been going on (for obvious reasons, no doubt).

Many residents feel Dist. 214 is too big for efficient and effective education. Many residents have become very disenchanted with the operation of the superintendent's office and the board and we want to control our own destiny. Education is the key to the growth of a community and a nation.

Paddock spelling bee Saturday

More than 300 seventh and eighth grade students will compete Saturday in the Paddock Publications regional spelling bee. Fifteen of the students will win a spot in the final spelling bee May 1.

Spelling bees will be held in three locations Saturday; five finalists will be selected from each of the bees for the May 1 contest.

The public is invited to attend the competitions. Students have been assigned to one of the following locations: Schaumburg Regional — Schaumburg Township Library, 32 W. Library Ln., Schaumburg; Arlington Regional — Miner Junior High School, 1101 E. Miner St., Arlington Heights; Des Plaines Regional — Friendship Junior High School, 550 Elizabeth Ln., Des Plaines.

THE BEES WILL begin at 12:30 p.m. and continue until all but five contestants have been eliminated. Contestants are to be at their assigned location no later than 12:15 p.m.

The spelling bee is an oral competition in which students are given words to spell. Contestants may ask for the definition of the word and a sentence in which the word is used before spelling; contestants may not write the word down before spelling, however.

A panel of three judges will oversee each bee.

Eighty-two contestants will compete at the Schaumburg regional, 123 at the Arlington regional and 123 at the Des Plaines regional.

The final spelling bee will be held at Miner Junior High School. The first place winner and his parent will receive a trip to Washington, D. Dow drops 3.31 points in slow stock trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — Profit takers snapped the stock market's four-day rally Thursday by cashing in on recent gains and driving prices lower in slow-down trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which reached a 39-month high Wednesday, lost 3.31 points to 1,007.71 after being ahead as much as three points in the early going.

Investors were not surprised by the profit taking since the blue-chip Dow average had climbed 36.37 points to 1,011.02 in the four sessions through Wednesday. Wednesday's close was the highest since it finished at 1,018.66 Jan. 23, 1973.

The late selling trimmed other averages, also. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 0.34 to 102.88, the NYSE common stock index slipped 0.16 to 54.84 and the average price of an NYSE common share shed 10 cents.

DECLINES EDGED advances, 778 to 702, among the 1,894 issues crossing the tape. The 414 unchanged issues reflected some investor uncertainty.

Volume slowed to 20,220,000 shares from 26,600,000 traded Wednesday, the biggest session in a month.

Chartists were encouraged the Dow average remained above the 1,000 level.

Prices closed mixed in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex market value index gained 0.03 to 103.50 but the average price of an Amex share decreased by one cent. Volume totaled 2,550,000 shares, compared with 2,770,000 traded.

SIGNAL OF REVOLUTION

On January 1, 1776, six months before the Declaration of Independence, General George Washington ordered a bold new flag raised at the top of Prospect Hill in Charlestown, Massachusetts, and in so doing announced the creation of the Continental Army. The banner was the British "Red Duster" with the Union Jack in the canton, but with six white stripes cutting through the solid red field. This made thirteen alternating red and white stripes, standing for the thirteen colonies at war with England. This flag became known as the "Continental Colors" or the "Grand Union Flag." For six months this was the flag of the united colonies, and on July 4, 1776, became the flag of an independent United States of America.

After that day the people of the new country wanted a distinct flag to symbolize their new independence. Almost a year was to pass, however before the Continental Congress responded.

Elderly recall disaster

the distress encountered when injections are given by a needle. Jet injectors can deliver around 800 shots an hour.

The flu vaccine is produced from fertilized chicken eggs which are injected with the virus. At an appropriate time, the tops of the eggs are sliced off and a sterile pipette is gently lowered into each egg. The virus-laden allantoic fluid is aspirated and processed.

Many steps later, the purified flu vaccine is ready for packaging. All along the line, from the purchase of eggs to the final shipping of vaccine, the process is subjected to federal inspections.

"I THINK THE flu vaccine is a wonderful idea, but I probably won't take it because I'm allergic to eggs," Mrs. Rauscher said.

THERE IS SOME concern about the mass use of the vaccine among persons allergic to eggs. But Dr. Kilbourne maintains that in his 30 years of work in the flu vaccine field, he does not know of any fatalities or crippling side effects due to allergic reactions.

"We're aiming for two kinds of prevention — mortality, the elderly and those with cardiac and pulmonary ailments; and morbidity, most of that in younger age groups," Kilbourne said.

"It would be ideal if most were immunized before Oct. 1. Realistically, one could give the vaccine right up to the first of the year and prevent many cases," he said.

"Any mass immunization program has its hazards. Many things attributed to flu vaccines, when investigated, will not be due to it," Kilbourne said.

THE VACCINE probably would not be recommended for children under five because it has produced some reactions in that age group.

Bill Reiter, 78, was fighting in the front line trenches in France World War I when the first flu epidemic broke out. If immunization can prevent a recurrence of the disease, he thinks every American should get a shot.

"In the Army we were vaccinated (though not against flu) and I think we may have gotten a little better protection than some others. But still a lot of men in the trenches died and not from bullets. Only we didn't know then what it was from," he said.

THERE IS STILL disagreement among scientists that the swine flu virus found at Fort Dix, N.J., is the same as the 1918 strain.

At the recent annual meeting of the American Chemical Society, Dr. C.J.V. Nossal of Australia questioned the move. He said the flu found at swine flu epidemic

how serious is it?

Fort Dix is not the stuff for a "red-hot alert."

"If it was all that hot a flu strain, it probably would have gotten beyond Dix by now," he said.

But necessary or not, mobilization for the national flu vaccine already has begun. Vaccine is being produced, tested and packaged. And many if not all Americans, appear ready to go along with the plan.

"I believe it's a good idea," says Olga Bardinet, "because I went through the epidemic in 1918 and, believe me, it wasn't so nice."

Housekeeping fertile field for humor

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Joan Anderson walks the middle line. She doesn't preach "Total Womanhood." She isn't a women's libber. But she is a contented mother and wife who sincerely believes in self-expression. For the Arlington Heights homemaker, it simply means saving time to write in between completing all her housewifely chores.

In the past several years Joan has free-lanced a number of short articles and essays to family-oriented and Christian publications. In addition, she and a collaborator, Ann Serb of Rogers Park, wrote a book titled "Love, Lollipops and Laundry," released last month by a Catholic publishing house, Our Sunday Visitor, $1.95.

It's a compilation of 67 essays, mostly humorous, on the joys of being a wife and mother. Most of it is joy. But it also includes those days when a woman is "almost ready to 'kill' her husband. It's the whole spectrum of a woman's life. And that's all a part of it," said Joan describing the paperback.

ANN CONVINCED Joan to write. Moving to Arlington Heights with four kids and one on the way, Joan, because of a difficult pregnancy, was more or less confined to the house. A stranger to the area, she was unable to get out and become acquainted.

"I was moaning over the phone to Ann one day and she used her favorite line. 'Start pounding out your frustrations on the typewriter rather than the kids.'

"I said I didn't have time, which is no excuse for Ann who has eight kids, three times as big a house to take care of and a husband who travels all the time."

So, Joan tried it. Selling her first two articles boosted her self-confidence. She wrote more. Her previous experience had consisted of infrequent contributions to her college newspaper and "sending off an occasional irate letter to the editor, which I still do," she said.

Mostly, Joan writes about what she knows best, funny and touching stories about her children and daily home duties.

"Housework is dull. There is no doubt about it. But if housewives are appreciated by their family, that makes all the difference. I'm neat because I hide everything behind doors. And, I've never made a two-layer cake that didn't have a mound in the middle."

REALIZING SHE had resources buried she hadn't used, Joan began free-lancing more serious articles. For a teacher's manual she submitted a story about minimal brain dysfunction because one of her sons is afflicted.

"I started out writing an hour a day while the baby was napping. You have to do this regularly when first starting out. Otherwise, if you have a bad day, you won't go back and pick it up again," she said.

"Regular discipline is necessary at the beginning to build up your self-confidence. Now I'm much more flexible."

The book itself evolved from "another one of those days." Joan called Ann. (In the past year they have seen each other only once, to lay out chapters of the book, but a telephone call pack keeps them in touch daily.) Before they hung up, the decision had been made. A book was the challenge they both needed.

"Love, Lollipops and Laundry" is written "for the quiet women, housewives and mothers who are doing a good job and getting little outside moral support," said Joan.

"SO MUCH TODAY is written for the career women. I'm not condemning the working woman, but we want to revitalize the woman who chooses to stay in the home. She needs attention, too. Return to her the dignity she deserves and there won't be this polarization," she continued.

Joan puts her family first. "My writing doesn't seem to sell if I haven't fulfilled my first calling. But every woman, if she's smart, finds something for herself, anything that will make her more of a person.

"Having your own interest not only enhances your life as a woman but carries over to your husband and family. Many women have a misguided sense of duty. They always say later, I don't have time for myself now . . . and later never comes. So they end up becoming martyrs or frustrated."

Joan added, "Total Woman" asks women to sacrifice all their

For camera buffs and movie fanatics

The second annual Chicago International Photo Show, which opened last night at McCormick Place and continues through Sunday, offers a variety of activities and entertainment in addition to an inclusive display of the latest in photographic equipment.

Is your camera behaving poorly? Bring it along for a free check-up at the show's camera diagnostic clinic. Or better yet, bring a "well one" along to photograph the live models that are available to camera buffs.

Need some good picture-taking advice? A number of lectures and demonstrations are scheduled throughout the show, including Joe DiMaggio's Audio-Visual Workshop in Candid Photography.

But even those persons who have never snapped a shutter in their lives might enjoy coming out to the movies. Silent and early sound motion pictures are featured in The Classic Film Festival Theatre.

THE PRESENTATION, being shown continuously in its own theater, ranges from "The Great Train Robbery," the first western ever made, to "Bogart," an hour-long documentary on Humphrey Bogart's career with excerpts from his films.

Included in the festival are "Champeen," one of the early Our Gang comedies; "The Dentist," one of W. C. Fields' comedies; "Popeye Meets Aladdin and His Lamp," one of the first color, animated featurettes; "The Kid In Hollywood," an early Shirley Temple short; and "Jungle Drums," the first Superman cartoon made for theatrical release.

Another featured attraction at the second Chicago photo show particularly appeals to children. A Festival of Walt Disney Masterpieces shows excerpts from classic and current Disney cartoons and live productions.

Special photo exhibitions include the work of photojournalist Flip Schulke, who as a regular contributor to Life covered many of the last decade's monumental stories: President Kennedy's assassination, the funeral of Martin Luther King, and the Mercury, Apollo, Gemini and Skylab projects.

FOLLOWING celebrities around the world is Ron Galella's line of work. And often it gets him into trouble. His passion for candid shots once prompted Marlon Brando to Break Galella's jaw.

Among the celebrities featured in Galella's exhibit are Ingrid Bergman, the Kennedys, Jacqueline Onassis, Cary Grant, Marlene Dietrich and, of course, Marlon Brando.

The Presidency of Gerald Ford as documented by David Hume Kennerly, the official White House photographer, is also a part of the photo gallery section of the show.

The photographs of President Ford and his family culminate the Gallery of Presidents. The special exhibit, developed for the Bicentennial, features a photograph of every U.S. President who sat before a camera. Going as far back as Andrew Jackson, the photographs are borrowed from the archives of The Library of Congress.

And one shouldn't leave the show without seeing the original photogravure impressions of E. S. Curtis' study of the American Indian.

The photographic antiques are from the collection of Paul Lodi, Boston, Mass., who recently acquired the available existing sets of Curtis' lifework. "The North American Indian."

IN 1900 Edward Sheriff Curtis left Seattle with a cumbersome 14 by 17-inch view camera. Under the most primitive conditions, he compiled a pictorial record of every North American Tribe. But he was broke and only half finished after 15 years of work.

A chance meeting with President Theodore Roosevelt, who quickly saw the importance of Curtis' work, allowed the early photographer to complete his life's ambition. Roosevelt introduced Curtis to J. Pierpont Morgan, who became his financial backer.

Admission to the show is $3; with discount coupon, $2. Children under 11 are admitted free (Discount coupons are available at local camera stores.)

Hours: 5-10 p.m. today; noon-10 p.m. Saturday; and noon-6:30 p.m. Sunday.

Neil Sedaka's the best, just as he was in 1959

Neil Sedaka is one of today's best songwriters, a feat all the more remarkable because he was one of the most popular in 1959.

"I am a contemporary artist," Sedaka said, "not a ghost. I've continued to write all the way through and I've tried to stay aware of what people are buying. I hope my songs have developed and grown."

Indeed, his songs have matured from the teenage sentiments of "Calendar Girl," "Oh, Carol" and "Happy Birthday, Sweet Sixteen" (1959-1963) to the successes of the current time, "Laughter In the Rain," "Bad Blood" and "Love Will Keep Us Together" (a hit for Captain & Tennille).

Sedaka's current popularity can only be called a comeback in that he hadn't been performing in this country for years, although he was active in England. Still, during that time, he managed to turn out hits for The Fifth Dimension, Tom Jones, Johnny Mathis and Peggy Lee, including "Working On A Groovy Thing," "Puppet Man," "One Day of Your Life" and "Rainy Jane."

LAST YEAR, Sedaka had two tremendous albums, "Sedaka's Back" and "The Hungry Years," and his new album, "Steppin' Out" (Rocket records), is every bit as good. The first side alone contains five potential hit singles. One would discount only the moody, talkative "Cardboard California," which was written in 1971.

The side opens with "Sing Me," which has the sound of a standard (as does "Here We Are Falling In Love Again" from the second side). "You Gotta Make Your Own Sunshine" is a bright, horn-punctuated tune.

The title song is another romp, like "Bad Blood," with Elton John helping out vocally. "Love In the Shadows," Sedaka's new single, is his first disco effort, which is easy going and has a good lyric. "No. 1 With A Heartache" is countryish and features Sneaky Pete's steel guitar, David Lindley's fiddle and Davey Johnstone's mandolin.

THE SECOND SIDE is generally softer, with a light, breezy sound, and "Here We Are Falling In Love Again" is the only standout.

Collectors should note that RCA has issued "Neil Sedaka Pure Gold" a budget-priced companion to "Oh Carol and Other Big Hits." The sound is somewhat tinny and the writing primitive compared with his new songs, but it has "Happy Birthday, Sweet Sixteen," "The Diary," "Run Samson Run" and "Stairway to Heaven."

"This Is It" by Melba Moore (Buddah). The addition of producer-arranger-songwriter Van McCoy makes this her best album to date. The title song has an excellent dance beat and a fine, wide-ranging vocal.

Playback

by Tom Von Malder

There is a good version of Curtis Mayfield's "Make Me Believe In You," and "Free" and "Lean On Me" are pretty ballads. This is recommended.

• "Full of Fire" by Al Green (Hi). Green breaks out of his "soft balladry rut" on side two, and the title song is one you immediately want to sing and dance along with. There is a good version of Buck Owens' "Together Again." Side one is pleasant although undistinguished.

• "Wilderness" by C. W. McCall (Polydor). Fame and the effort of maintaining new-found appeal with a wide audience has hurt McCall. The humor in past albums is diluted on "Wilderness" (with attempts, like "Crispy Critters" missing). There is even less country to the music, with big, lush John Denverish orchestrations creeping in. But, his recent single, "There Won't Be No Country Music," "Four Wheel Cowboy" and the clear sound of the recording are effective.

Soundings:

C. W. McCALL'S "Convoy" will be made into a movie by United Artists, with McCall writing several new songs for it.

The main theme from the movie "Taxi Driver" has just been released as a single.

ALAN LONGMUIR, at 28 the oldest member of the Bay City Rollers, has left the group to settle down. While Longmuir breeds horses on his Scottish farm, IAN MITCHELL, 17, will join the group.

LEONARD NIMOY will do an album of readings from "War of the Worlds," "Gentlemen Be Seated" and "Green Earth" for Caedmon. SHIRLEY Mac LAINE will have a live album soon. TINA ALLEN has made a single about the $50 million offered the Beatles for a reunion concert.

In the area: BAD COMPANY and KANSAS, tonight, Chicago Stadium; SANTANA and HOT TUNA, tonight, Aragon; RUFUS with CHAKA KHAN, Sunday, International Amphitheatre.

Book has all the answers on patients' legal rights

"THE RIGHTS OF HOSPITAL PATIENTS"

by George J. Annas

E. P. Dutton & Co. $9.95

The American Civil Liberties Union has published a new and apparently authoritative book on "The Rights of Hospital Patients."

Written by George J. Annas, director of Boston University law school's center for law and health sciences, the book answers virtually every question a patient might have about his legal rights in simple, straightforward terms.

"Does a hospitalized patient have the right to refuse treatment?" "Who may read the patient's hospital record?" "Has there been any centralized computer storage of medical records?" Dozens of such questions are answered.

Some 34 million Americans will be hospitalized this year — often without any thought about their legal rights.

THE BLIND assumption that hospitals and the doctors who staff them always act with regard for the patient's rights and in his best interest is not warranted, the author says.

On the contrary, "most hospitals fail to recognize the existence of these interests and rights, fail to provide for their protection and assertion, and frequently limit their exercise without recourse for the patient," Annas says.

Each chapter in the book is extensively footnoted with references to precedent cases, public laws and other books that bear on the subject of patients' rights.

The book stall

"The Rights of Hospital Patients" cannot take the place of an attorney in a legal dispute between a patient and a hospital; nor can it account for continuous changes in law and judicial opinion.

BUT IT CAN serve as an informative guide to a subject that too many people think too little about.

Kurt Beer

"BEGINNINGS"

by Ellen Galsky

Houghton Mifflin, $6.95

This is a sometimes good, sometimes tedious book about the birth of premature children. Ms. Galsky drones on too much about her health troubles, like most people who insist on telling you about their operations.

But she hit some of the inadequacies of hospitals and doctors that deserve airing — the unwillingness of doctors to be honest and open about medical problems and the horrors of uncaring hospital workers.

The book is worth the effort but be prepared to wade through dull spots.

Matthau needed no gin

He managed 'Bears' well

By VERNON SCOTT

Walter Matthau in "The Bad News Bears" proves conclusively a star need have no fear of child actors in movies.

Matthau courageously co-stars with Tatum O'Neal and a dozen assorted kids in this story of a juvenile baseball team and its drunken manager.

Rather, it is the kids who should file a complaint with the Screen Actors Guild. Matthau's elastic face and Silly Putty nose flit more footage alone than the combined antics of the mop-tops.

W. C. Fields, credited with spiking Baby LeRoy's orange juice with gin to tranquilize the infant, would have suffered spasmodic agony working with so many kids.

Matthau, unlike the late W. C., loves kids. It shows in his performance which surpasses the Fields' broad farce in many respects.

"I ENJOYED that picture as much as any I've ever done," he said. "We had to work four months in 106-degree heat in the San Fernando Valley. But I made it by pouring water over myself every few minutes."

Walter was seated in the dining room of the Beverly Hills Tennis Club. He is a member in good standing but has never played a game of tennis there. He has not even stepped on one of the courts.

"I like the food," he explained. As the father of three children and two stepchildren, Matthau got along with his small fry co-stars without a hitch.

"The kids had been cast in their parts for six weeks and worked out together while Paramount tried to get a star to play the part of the manager," he said.

"When I reported to the set, the kids applauded and gave me a teddy bear with a cigar. They'd been waiting all that time for a coach."

"AT FIRST I didn't know whether to be a camp counselor or a monitor or what. How can an actor be in charge of his fellow actors?"

Michael Ritchie, our director, asked me to help keep the kids quiet. But I told him to go to hell. As a fellow actor I had a different relationship with them than the director.

"I decided to become one of 'em. I blended in. I never tried to make myself a corporal. I was just a more experienced private. And they accepted that."

"God knows they had plenty of energy. And sometimes their language surprised me. I'd work on their sympathy, asking them to help an old actor get the job done so I could get home and rest."

Matthau grinned, satisfied that his decision to join the kids was a wise move.

Tatum, daughter of Actor Ryan O'Neal and winner of an Academy Award for best supporting actress ("Paper Moon"), had a problem of her own. As kid actors go, she was a superstar among the ragtag boys who played members of the baseball team.

"THE BOYS made a mistake with Tatum at first," Matthau said. "They treated her like a star who was earning $350,000 for the picture. It didn't work at all."

"It wasn't long before their attitudes changed and she became just another 12-year-old kid. After that they got along fine."

"Tatum loved the game and she liked to hear me tell stories."

"Sometimes the kids played each other off to gain my favor. And once in a while they'd try to get me to take sides in gags they played on one another. But I discouraged that."

Asked why he accepted a role most actors would shun, Matthau shrugged. "I turned down $2 million from Carlo Ponti to co-star with his wife, Sophia Loren, because I didn't like the script. And I turned down $1 million plus 10 per cent of the profits for another picture."

"WHEN I FIRST read this script, I turned it down. But then I said no to 'The Sunshine Boys' the first time around because I thought it was thin and depressing."

"But on my second reading of 'The Bad News Bears' I liked the idea of me watching kids play ball, fighting with them and cursing them. And the thought of working with youngsters appealed to me."

Matthau, moreover, gives his word of honor he didn't spike a single drink with gin throughout the picture (United Press International)

...But diamond play, swearing unrealistic in kids' movie

by DAVID DUGAS
(A Review)

It sounded like a great idea: a Little League baseball team coached by over-the-hill minor leaguer Walter Matthau can't get a hit, let alone a run, until a socko 12-year-old girl steps in and practically wins the pennant.

Protests from a certain organization reportedly account for the words "Little League" never being mentioned in "The Bad News Bears." Maybe it was felt the movie doesn't take the sport seriously enough.

Actually "The Bad News Bears," while it offers some very funny moments, takes baseball too seriously. After the first reel, it seldom leaves its San Fernando Valley diamond (where for some reason moments of joy and despair are highlighted by excerpts from Bizet's "Carmen"). After an inning or two, those flubbed plays seem as repetitive as the scoreboard and dugout shots and eventual homers.

AS THE beer-guzzling coach, Matthau gives a one-dimensional performance. And Tatum O'Neal, billed as his co-star for the marquee value of her first film since "Paper Moon" won her an Oscar, has far less to do than the story line suggests.

The youngsters perform beautifully. But in their midst Tatum already seems too mature, occasionally giving the odd impression her role was written for Jennifer O'Neill.

Director Michael Ritchie's talent for dissecting the American scene with style and wit is well established by such films as "The Candidate" (politics) and "Smile" (teenage beauty contests). They viewed their subjects from a variety of angles for dramatic and comic effect. "Bears" casts adults as child-exploiting villains but hardly shows them.

The script by Burt Lancaster's son Bill has the kids swearing as if they'd just come out of Marine boot camp. That might be realistic, but as a comedy device the cussing wears mighty thin.

The Paramount Pictures release, rated (PG) despite the language, is playing in area theaters (United Press International)

WE WELCOME MASTER CHARGE AND AMERICAN EXPRESS

Landmark now a fine restaurant

Already well established for fine dining in downtown Chicago, Cafe Angelo recently opened a branch at 124 S. Milwaukee Rd. in Wheeling, just one-half mile south of Dundee Road.

Not familiar with the address? Angelo's took an old landmark, originally the Union Hotel that in past years has housed a variety of entertainment and restaurant ventures including, most recently, the discotheque Hooligans.

But this time it's undergone a refined, elegant, face lift, one that I'm noodles with cream and Parmesan cheese. It's my downfall and Cafe Angelo prepares one of the finest I've tasted. It would be easy to consume a whole order, but most upsetting calorie-wise.

FOLLOWING A DELICIOUS fresh spinach salad with sweet and sour dressing, $1.25, in place of the regular Boston butter lettuce salad that is included with dinner, we were ready for the main entrees. And the selection is staggering both to the seafood and meat eater alike.

It was a difficult choice, but I finally selected filets de sole "Monte Carlo," scampi wrapped with filets of sole and served in a generous lobster sauce. It was excellent. But equally tempting was a casserole of fish and shellfish labeled the bouillabaisse of La Costa Azzura; or truite de Riviere farcie, brook trout stuffed with shrimp and crab meat in a white wine sauce.

Dinner entrees (including the brook trout) begin at $6.25. The scampi was one of the more expensive at $9. Full orders of pasta are $4 - $4.75.

ALSO TRIED AT our table was the caneton Madagascar au poivre verte in a sauce of green peppercorns, $8. It's a great way to prepare roast duckling and most appealing to diners who usually overlook duck because it is often served with a sweet, overpowering glaze.

Also highly recommended is Beef Wellington in a light flaky pastry shell, $8.50; and two preparations of loin of veal: Veal Oscar with a topping of crab legs, and cote de veau, creme et chanterelles, which is served with a cream sauce and imported mushrooms. Both are $8.

Vegetables served with main entrees included deep-fat fried cauliflower, broccoli and potatoes.

But what would a superb gourmet meal be without dessert? Cafe Angelo has one to top them all, batter-fried fresh strawberries in a zabaglione sauce. It's a specialty of the house, and I'm told the two restaurants are presently in hot competition as to which one turns out the better. I could never complain.

ANOTHER TIME out, however, I'd like to sample the next item down, marinated strawberries with lemon ice topped with a chestnut glaze.

A lounge adjacent to the dining room, Le Club, will soon be featuring live entertainment, sentimental "torchy" female singers, so I'm told. That should be interesting in itself to suburbia.

sure is going to last, particularly if the food and service are any indication.

EXCELLENT NORTHERN Italian and French cuisine are featured and the waiters, many of them carry-overs from the closed Empire Room of the Palmer House, need no rehearsing. They already know it all.

For sure, Cafe Angelo adds to the growing list of Northwest suburban gourmet restaurants.

On a first visit we chose to begin our meal with an appetizer tray: baked clams reganate, bread tarts filled with chopped mushroom mixture, batter-fried shrimp, and most unusual and tasty, square pieces of deep fat-fried cheese.

And we couldn't resist side orders of fettucini al panne, homemade egg BREMEN TOWN Musicians, basis for "Story Theatre I" to be staged Sunday by The Players of Schaumburg, features Nina Leone (top), Jamie Hammer, Ken Freehill and Lisa Hammer. The audience will be invited to participate in the show which takes place in Schaumburg Library, 32 W. Library Ln. Tickets will be sold 15 minutes before curtain times of 1, 2:30 and 4 p.m. Admission 75 cents children under 10, $1 others.

"COCA COLA" by Hadden Sundblom is one of 80 illustrations by 43 great 20th Century American artists that are on display through May 21 at Continental Bank, 231 S. LaSalle St., Chicago. The exhibit, on the second floor, is free to the public from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Artists include Al Capp, Norman Rockwell, Frederic Remington, Joe Bowler and Paul Calle.

Super bomb in Super Bowl plot for 'Black Sunday'

by VERNON SCOTT

A blimp settles down toward the field in Miami's Orange Bowl loaded with explosives that will kill the President of the United States and 85,000 spectators at the Super Bowl.

The voice of producer Robert Evans is heard above the action: "More paperback copies of 'Black Sunday' have been printed by the publishers than were ordered for the paperback of 'Jaws'."

The film clip is a 10-minute sales reel for "Black Sunday," the suspenseful novel being filmed at Paramount Pictures.

Evans' message is clear. If one great white shark can intimidate a few hundred bathers on a New England beach, just imagine the horror of a thousand pounds of explosives in the middle of a Super Bowl game.

Footage of the blimp gives the airship's rounded snout the same menacing dimensions of the shark in "Jaws."

IT REMAINS to be seen whether audiences will flock like lemmings to "Black Sunday" as they did to "Jaws," financially the most successful picture ever produced.

Perhaps as interesting as the film itself is the story behind "Black Sunday" and director John Frankenheimer's efforts to shoot actual footage during the course of this year's Jan. 18 Super Bowl game between Pittsburgh and Dallas.

Not only did Frankenheimer shoot the Steelers-Cowboys game, he shot the entire Miami-Baltimore game Nov. 23 as insurance in the event the Super Bowl turned up rainy.

Frankenheimer, whose credits include "French Connection II," "Grand Prix," "The Train" and "The Manchurian Candidate," is a master of action films dedicated to realism.

"I wouldn't have made this picture without the cooperation of the National Football League and the Orange Bowl people and permission to film the Super Bowl game itself," he said.

"I saw the difficulties of making the film when I read the book. But I loved the idea, the drama and the suspense.

"WITHOUT THE cooperation of the NFL this would have become just another movie of the week, cheating with long shots of crowds, then close-ups of the actors."

Frankenheimer, using long lenses, filmed his hero, Robert Shaw, running through the crowded stadium to the field. The blimp is seen almost plunging into the huge bowl. The footage is spectacular.

"Joe Robbie, president of the Miami Dolphins, was a tremendous help to us," Frankenheimer said. "He and our executive producer, Bob Rosen, got everyone to cooperate with us."

"I was thrilled with the footage we made of the game and the crowds, thanks to the greatest cinematographer in the business, John Alonzo."

"He is getting exactly the sort of look I want this picture to have — almost a true documentary. I'd like to achieve the style of 'Battle of Algiers,' if such a thing is possible."

"I WANT EVERYTHING to look unstaged although, of course, everything will be staged. Nothing is being done to accommodate the camera. That means we won't have a perfect film. I don't want anyone to say, 'What a great shot that was!'"

"My function is to tell the story so the public understands it. It should have the look of the documentary, same as on the 7 o'clock news."

Perfectionist Frankenheimer will have devoted a year and a half to "Black Sunday" from preproduction

Entries welcome for mall shows

Area artists and craftsmen are invited to apply for entry in one or more of a series of shopping mall shows arranged for spring, summer and early fall by Irene "Rae" Partridge of Barrington.

The first, an indoor show, is May 22-23 at Hillside Shopping Center. This is strictly a craft show, with closing date for entries May 12.

The first outdoor show is July 18, an arts and crafts festival at Northpoint Shopping Center, Arlington Heights.

TWO OUTDOOR MALL shows in August are the Woodfield Commons show Aug. 21 and the Deerfield Commons exhibit Aug. 28. The final in the series is Sept. 19 at Northpoint in Arlington Heights.

The five shows are pre-juried and strictly invitational. Those who have not shown before with Irene Partridge must submit five slides or photographs of work representative of what they wish to exhibit. These should be sent, along with a resume, past show listings and a self-addressed stamped envelope, to Irene Partridge, Rt. 1, 146 Park Ave., Barrington 60010.

last April until final editing later this year.

Frankenheimer would prefer to make two pictures a year, but it is unlikely he will.

"I like to take chances and experiment as I did in the old days of live television drama," he said wistfully. "But when you make only one picture every year or two they count too much. There are limitations."

"When you are confronted with only one time at bat over a long stretch there is a tendency to become rigid. A director isn't doing his best work if he always plays it safe."

"I'm taking some chances with 'Black Sunday' and I'm confident they're going to pay off."

Mall movie set

Documentary for students being shot at Woodfield

by GENIE CAMPBELL

If Woodfield is able to turn into a music hall for the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, a gallery for huge art shows, then why not also a movie set? That's exactly what's been happening this week. But it didn't come easy. Lighting the mammoth, indoor mall is a feat in itself, and curious shoppers can inadvertently get in the way. Goodness knows, enough of them turn out each day.

But cameramen for Donald B. Klugman Films have been shooting scenes all week long for the first of a three-part documentary series to explain consumer economics.

COMMISSIONED BY Encyclopedia Britannica Educational Corp., "Consumer Economics and You" was written and is being directed and produced by Donald Klugman of Chicago with collaboration by Michael A. MacDowell, executive director of the Illinois Council on Economic Education. He approved the script for validity.

Working with seven young Chicago area actors, Klugman will complete filming at Woodfield today for part one, "Consumers in a Changing World."

Once set to music, the entire series will be made available to high schools as a teaching aid. Possibly it might also appear next year on educational television.

"We'll be using fast attention-getting techniques to teach students economics," said Klugman, who likens his approach to methods successfully applied by Zoom and The Electric Company.

Concepts in the educational series include laws of supply and demand, income and spending, scarcity, inflation and economic change.

"ONE OF THE most important topics today is economics," said Klugman, who noted there is a big demand for educational-related economic materials.

"A concern of all educators, particularly on the junior high and high school levels, is that young people learn more and better understand the principles of economics."

Klugman chose to do part of the filming at Woodfield because "it's beautiful, the most attractive and modern shopping center I've seen. There's nothing quite like Woodfield, wouldn't you agree?"

But the giant mall has both its advantages and disadvantages when it comes to movie sets. Climate control is very helpful. Weather will not interfere with shooting schedules. But lighting the shopping center is "difficult, time consuming and costly," said Klugman.

All week long Klugman and his crew have been putting in 16-hour days, beginning each morning hours before the shopping center even opens. And that's a treat in itself — seeing Woodfield when only the gardener is up and about quietly nurturing his plants.

Kurtz curtsies

Broadway's Swoosie Kurtz will make her movie debut in "Slap Shot," starring Paul Newman. (UPI)

Players to open in adult comedy

The adult comedy "The Mind With the Dirty Man" will open Friday, May 7, at Lighthouse Theatre, 1165 Tower Rd., Schaumburg. Presented by The Players of Schaumburg, it is a departure from the group's usual family entertainment because of its appeal to mature audiences.

The play will be presented three weekends, Friday through Sunday, with the final performance May 23.

Sonja Leraas, Schaumburg, is the producer and also appears in the play. Larry Etten, Mount Prospect, is director.

Others from the area who are in the cast are Ken Freehill, Schaumburg, and Nina Leone, Des Plaines. John Hickman and Monti Leraas, both of Schaumburg, are among those on the production staff.

Tickets, at $2.75 for students and senior citizens and $3.50 for adults, can be reserved by calling 695-3237.

rights, and women's lib expects everyone else to sacrifice all their rights for them.

"I often thank my husband for being able to stay home. If he wasn't doing his job, I couldn't be doing what I am."

JOAN AND ANN chose a soft cover for their book specifically to keep down the price. They are not interested in profit. "Housewives can't spend $10-$12 on a book. And we wrote this to share with other homemakers."

The two are just as adamant about traveling to promote their book. They refused offers to appear on several nationwide talk shows.

"How phony would that be, for two women to travel around the country telling other women how nice it is to be a mother when someone else is taking care of their kids."

Earnings? Joan calls them "a drop in the bucket." They go toward family luxuries — "orthodontia, school supplies and meat," she quotes a friend.

But Joan and Ann aren't waiting for another blue Monday to launch their second book.

"Our children are moving into teenage years, and as they get older there's a whole new flavor to the house."

THEY PLAN TO submit a second collaboration next March, on the first anniversary of "Love, Lollipops and Laundry," which is a very symbolic title if you haven't already guessed. Homemakers would know best.

"Love represents our husbands, lollipops our children, and laundry is a woman's lot in life, and that's in order of priority, too." Joan explained, following it with a quiet smile.

A likeable but too long 'Pioneer'

I couldn't imagine at first why the word portable was inserted in "THE PORTABLE PIONEER AND PRAIRIE SHOW" currently at FIRST CHICAGO CENTER. But after seeing the production it's all perfectly clear.

The musical, historical revue that follows 19th Century Swedish immigrants as they chart their destiny in colonial America unfolds with the aid of primitive scenery that doubles as props.

A covered wagon comes apart to become, in the course of the evening, everything from a sea crossing vessel to a log cabin and even a burial plot. That part of the show is ingenious. We too often forget that creativity, particularly in the theater, is not measured by expense.

Yet, though "Portable Pioneer," a charming likeable story (based, we're told, on a compilation of true facts), is a worthy outpouring of the Bicentennial fever, it will be lucky to outlast the 17th hoopla. The lyrics and music are endearing but certainly not everlasting.

Americans today, unfortunately, are much more impatient and antsy than their long-suffering ancestors. But the times can't be helped, and three hours of sitting in one seat is just too long. The added melodramatics and mentalist foolery are not only superfluous, but taint the meaning of the rest of the production.

Yet "Portable Pioneer" is a mid-western saga appropriate for the whole family. So take it from there.

The dominant characters, Karin and Paul Andersson, are actually the offspring, though they often depict their parents as they retell the story of how their mother and father in the 1860's braved the elements to come and settle in Minnesota.

Relying on faith and their music whenever disaster or disappointment struck, the Anderssons finally forsook the land altogether when wiped out by a blight of locusts. They took up what they knew and did best, singing, joining a troupe of entertainers.

Heralding the cast is MARY WRIGHT in the role of the eldest daughter portraying her mother. Her wide-eyed expressions tell it all, both the undue stress and joy of moving to America.

Looking and acting very much the part of her mate is ROBERT SEVRA. And very amusing and convincing is BRENT SPINER as a hustler.

The show was originally produced by the Guthrie Theatre of Minneapolis in 1974 and appeared for six weeks in the spring of 1975 in Washington D.C.'s Ford Theatre. It's the creation of David Chambers and Mel Marvin.

It would be easy to sit back and listen to DELLA REESE sing all night and all day long. But, of course, that's impossible. And, unfortunately for us, she's only booked in the BLUE MAX of HYATT REGENCY O'HARE through Sunday.

It's that deep, booming voice that gets to me. It makes lyrics chilling, her delivery alive. There's nothing that Della can't sing, though I like her best doing a slow ballad like her new one, "I've Got the Blues, What Can I Do."

It's when she chooses to sing a contemporary number like "Love Will Keep Us Together" that one realizes the power of Della. The arrangement is much too simple for her. Her class and ability outrank the usual nightclub entertainer.

Appearing with Miss Reese is HERB JUBERT who would be funnier if he cut his show in half. Opening Monday is comedian PAT COOPER, followed by PHYLLIS DILLER May 10-22.

Because of illness, JOAN BLONDELL has been forced to leave the cast of "FALLEN ANGELS" at PHEASANT RUN PLAYHOUSE. English actress, EMMA TREKMAN is replacing her in the Noel Coward comedy.

Russian couple dance with ballet

Valery and Galina Panov, who won fame through their fight to emigrate from Russia, will dance in Chicago this weekend with the Eglevsky Ballet Company.

Performances begin at 8:30 tonight and Saturday night and at 8 p.m. Sunday at the Arie Crown Theatre in McCormick Place.

Trained by Leningrad's Kirov Ballet, which also produced Baryshnikov, Mureyev and Makarova, Valery is known as a great character dancer. Several of his new works will be presented this weekend, and he will partner Galina in traditional pas de deux.

Ticket prices range from $10 to $6.50 and are available at the box office.

Chemicals make fireflies glow

Andy sends the Encyclopedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Geri Lambson, 14, of Kearns, Utah, for her question: WHAT MAKES A FIREFLY OR GLOWWORM GLOW?

Wet meadows and swampy woods will sometimes teem with thousands of tiny lights twinkling and blinking off and on. Although the light produced is not as long-lasting or as bright as a light bulb, it does something a light bulb cannot — it produces a cool light with little energy wasted in heat. No wonder scientists study the source of this amazing light — the firefly.

Dozens of different fireflies flash their fairy lamps in different parts of the world. They are often called lightning bugs or lightning beetles. But whatever you call them, they have one thing in common — a taillight that winks off and on, off and on.

Actually, fireflies are not really flies at all. They belong to the beetle clan in the Lampyridae family. The larger fireflies are found in the tropical countries, but members of this group live in the United States and are very common east of the Rocky Mountains.

Fireflies have long, flat bodies and range in length from one-half to three-quarters of an inch. They are usually pale shades of brown or black, although some of them wear sporty stripes of pale green or yellow. Their light-producing organs are located in their abdomens. In many species, the larvae and pupae also produce light. Their light, however, is a continuous glow and not an off-on flash. For this reason, they are often called glowworms.

Scientists use fireflies to study bioluminescence — the heartless light given off by certain animals and plants. They have discovered that six chemicals are necessary to produce this cool light. Five of the chemicals — adenosine triphosphate, luciferin, magnesium, oxygen and luciferase — are contained in the firefly's abdomen. Although the complete biochemical reaction is not entirely understood, it is known that the insect can release a sixth chemical — inorganic pyrophosphate — to produce the glow.

Several families of beetles are capable of producing light in this manner. Bioluminescence, however, is not restricted to beetles or even to insects. Many creatures that inhabit the seas can produce this eerie glow as can certain bacteria and fungi.

Most fireflies have wings, but not all. The common glowworm in Europe is actually a wingless female. The railway beetle of Paraguay also has no wings. He has red lights on both his ends, and a series of green lights in between. When he lights up, he looks like a miniature train.

In different firefly species, the color, brightness and duration of the flashes vary. For this reason, scientists believe the firefly uses its light to attract a mate. If this is true, then the interesting firefly is one of the few insects to use vision to find a mate.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Jonnae Limbrici, 12, of Saugus, N. Y., for her question: WHY DO PEOPLE AND ANIMALS BLINK?

You may not always be aware of it, but chances are you blink about 25 times a minute. Sometimes you blink to protect your eyes from injury or harsh sunlight. Most of the time, however, you blink without realizing it. This involuntary blinking wipes the surface of the eyes clean, and keeps a layer of slightly salty fluid over the front of the eyes. This fluid is made in the lacrimal, or tear, glands that lie under the outer part of the upper eyelid. Two small tubes, called the lacrimal ducts, open at the inner corner of each eyelid. These ducts continually drain the tears from the eyes into the nose.

Although many animals have blinking mechanisms similar to those of humans, some have unusual eyelids. Snakes have lower eyelid windows which are renewed when the snake sheds his skin. Birds have an eyelid called the nictitans which glides sideways over the eyeball. On its way over it carries a soothing oil; on its way back it washes away irritating grit. Water birds that catch fish for food have clear third eyelids that serve as waterproof goggles. And birds that hunt in rapid flight use their nictitans as wind goggles.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Avocado considered mostly a fat food

I have been watching the statements you have made about diet and atherosclerosis prevention and have found them to be helpful. However, I have some questions of importance to my own diet which you have not touched upon.

What about avocados? The avocado industry would have us believe that avocados are great because there are only 264 calories per avocado with not a smidgen of cholesterol. They say nothing, however, about saturated fats, and somehow I find it hard to believe that anything so tasty could be good for my coronary arteries.

Also what do you think of creamy salad dressings made with half safflower mayonnaise and half yogurt?

The U.S. Department of Agriculture states that a California avocado, about 3 and one-eighth inches in diameter, weighs 284 grams and provides 370 calories. About 37 grams of the entire weight (seeds, skin and all) is fat. This means that more than 300 of the total 370 calories in the avocado is fat. I believe it's fair to say then that you could consider that an avocado is mostly a fat food since 85 per cent of its calories are fat. The avocado association is correct in saying that it contains no cholesterol — no plant foods do. Cholesterol is strictly an animal product.

The primary concern then about the use of avocados in the diet is their high fat content and the amount of saturated fat they contain. The Inter-Society Commission For Heart Disease Resources recommends limiting your total fat intake in the diet to no more than 35 per cent of your total calories. That means you can't eat very many avocados if you eat any other foods that contain any moderate amount of fat. The Commission also recommends that you limit your saturated fat intake to 10 per cent of your total calories.

THIS DOES NOT mean that you can't eat avocados, but it does mean that when you use avocados, you should further restrict the other fat containing foods in your diet. That means that you would need to rely on fortified skim milk, very lean meats, lean fish and prepare foods without adding fats to them. An avocado begins to fall into the category of a vegetable margarine.

Creamy salad dressings are one of the major sources of increased calories in the diet. Since none of the dietary principles are very important unless you restrict your calories sufficiently to avoid obesity, this becomes important. A good leafy salad that would be good for your diet is often a disaster because people add high calorie dressings to it. Remember that there is a restriction on the total calories of any type if you are going to meet the dietary goals to prevent heart and vascular disease. For this reason I am more inclined to recommend one of the low calorie salad dressings that are commercially available.

For more information on the principals of a diet to prevent heart disease send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 2-3, Diet Preventing Atherosclerosis. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Unmatched tools are easier to identify

Dear Dorothy: As an old hand in the kitchen, may I offer a bit of time-saving advice to those just acquiring their equipment? Never buy matched sets of small tools — spatula, turner, slotted spoon and other small things reached for frequently. With handles of different colors they are so much easier to identify, especially in crowded drawers. I grab for the green-handled spatula, yellow-handled plate scraper or blue-handled pancake turner, and in the long pull it makes for greater efficiency to identify by color as well as shape. — Lydia Taylor

Never crossed my mind, but it's a great idea.

Dear Dorothy: Others might get in the same fix and thus know what can be done. The flush handle of our toilet got so stiff it was almost impossible to move. We have a retired, handy neighbor. He took a look and when he went out next day came back with a new chain and tank ball. He turned off the water and exchanged the old ball and chain for the new one. He showed how soft the tank ball had become and this had made the chain loose. — Timothy Nissen

Dear Dorothy: Any rule on whether mushrooms should be peeled before using? — Helga von Hassell

If the mushrooms are white and fresh-looking, just rinse them and blot dry. Some clean them with a damp towel. And when you rinse them, just jiggle them up and down.

Dear Dorothy: Hot weather's coming and a lot of drawers are going to stick. Pass along the tip that rubbing a bar of soap along the top edges of the drawers will solve the problem. — Joe Hess Strong field ready for Palatine Relays

Illinois' oldest outdoor meet attracts 44 squads

by ART MUGALIAN

Track and Field Editor

They could hold the Palatine Relays in a cow pasture at midnight in the dead of winter, and still track teams from around the state would be clamoring to get in.

The Relays hold a very special place in the world of track and field, a position of respect and prominence unrivaled in high school sports. It's not unusual for a team to wait several years before being accepted to the large and prestigious field of entries.

As it is, meet director Chic Anderson and Palatine coach Jeff Teach have their hands full coordinating the oldest and probably the biggest outdoor track meet in Illinois, which will celebrate its 44th running this Saturday. A total of 44 teams — 24 boys teams and 20 girls squads — will compete this year.

The meet is getting better every year, too. The centennial year for Palatine High School promises to be a great year for the Relays, also.

Anderson and his crew don't have to go out of their way to improve the meet, but they do it anyway. Last year they added the girls' division and the 3,000-meter steeplechase to the card.

This year, in addition to defending boys' champion Addison Trail and girls' champ Libertyville, the field includes awesome Maine West and perennial powerhouse York, a Palatine Relays champion the last time the Dukes appeared in 1966.

York's premier runner is defending state two-mile and cross country champ Ron Craker, who ran a 9:05 two-mile at Arlington two weeks ago. Craker will run the mile and the two-mile at Palatine, according to his coach, Joe Newton.

Craker, who has already accepted an invitation to compete in the International Prep Meet at Dyche Stadium

In June, will be challenged by several outstanding distance runners including Maine West's Brian Tolan and Palatine's Tony Vargas and Chuck Elliott, but no one is likely to catch Craker in either race.

Area schools sending boys and girls teams to the Relays are Arlington, Hersey, Conant, Fremd, Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg, Buffalo Grove and Palatine. Maine West and St. Victor are entered in the boys division only, while Wheeling is competing in the girls division only.

The meet is scheduled to begin Saturday morning at 8:45 with the grade school 440-relay.

Field events will begin at 9:00. Among the team favorites will be Maine West, Wendell Phillips of Chicago and LaGrange-Lyon, the Class A champion in 1973 and 1974. The Palatine Relays abolished the class setup in 1975.

Phillips has one of the state's best mile relay teams and their 440-relay squad isn't too bad, either. Maine West, LaGrange and Palatine have decent relay teams, also.

It will be difficult to approach the excitement of last year's Palatine Relays when Schaumburg pole vaulter Bruce Mahlig broke the meet record with 15-6 1/2. Mahlig now vaults at the University of Illinois.

But with athletes like Craker and his York teammate Tom Garafolo, who is one of the top seeds in a strong high jump field, the meet is bound to produce its share of thrills.

Among the returning champs are Fremd long jumper Lawson England and Schaumburg high jumper Scott Mielke, who is a two-time winner in

J'bl'n's'i was the losing pitcher

The baseball box score is a marvel. For the true fan, it's something beautiful.

Gr'b'r'w'tz 2b 4-1-3-2.

It's all there in a small, printed box, producing hope, dread, joy and depression, depending where the heart of the reader is.

Cn'd'l'ria W 2-1 9-6-1-2-6.

That's not a secret code. That's just baseball's way of telling us what happened in a game.

I mean, it should be obvious that second baseman Billy Grabarkewitz had three hits in four trips to the plate, scored one run and drove in two.

It should be even more obvious that pitcher John Candelaria went nine innings in picking up his second victory, allowing six hits, one run and one earned run, walking two and striking out six.

That obvious, right?

The Herald started printing the Cubs and White Sox box scores last week, and now I find myself carefully examining those each morning before I settle into the rest of the paper. I may have processed the box score myself the previous night, but I still check them out each morning.

Bob Frisk
Sports Editor

Once a box score freak, always a box score freak.

The box score is something you wake up to. You read to see who did what, how the game went. It can be savored all day long. Without even being at the ballpark, you can understand the tempo from these dry rows of type.

Baseball lends itself more readily to statistics than any other sport. It is arithmetical and highly individual.

It took a prolonged New York newspaper strike to convince writer Roger Angell that the thing he missed most at his breakfast table was the box score. The heck with the front page or the stock tables. He wanted to devour those box scores.

"The box score, being modestly arcane, is a matter of intense indifference, if not irritation, to the non-fan," Angell wrote in "The Summer Game," a superb book on the sport. "To the baseball-bitten, it is not only informative, pictorial, and gossipy but lovely in aesthetic structure."

Angell did get a little flowery at times, but he also helped pinpoint some of the real beauty of that box of names and numbers, lined up in columns, sprinkled with apostrophes and dots and commas and fractions.

"It's totals — batters' credit vs. pitchers' debit — balance as exactly as those in an accountant's ledger," Angell continued. "The box score is more than a capsule archive. It is a precisely etched miniature of the sport itself, for baseball, in spite of its grassy spaciousness and apparent unpredictability, is the most intensely and satisfyingly mathematical of all our outdoor sports."

Angell is right. Every player in every game is subjected to an accounting. No ball is thrown and no base is gained without an ensuing statistic.

"We Americans," said author James T. Farrell, "are a nation of frustrated baseball players and the literature of our childhood was play-by-play, morning-after stories and box scores. These box scores, in the days of our boyhood, read like documents of history."

"It's an exact science, as opposed to the game," said Seymour Swoff of the Elias Statistical Bureau of New York. "It's a kind of black art."

There once was a pitcher for the New York Yankees named Pete Jablonowski. He disappeared from New York after several seasons of inept relief work with various clubs.

Presumably disheartened by seeing the losing pitcher listed as J'bl'n's'i in the box scores of his day, he changed his name to Pete Appleton in the semi-privacy of the minors.

I wonder how major leaguers Ossee Schreckengost and Elwood Poffenberger reacted when their names popped up in box scores across the country?

The box score itself was created by a man known only from his initials, "F.W.T." In 1853 he sent a numerical account of a game to a paper in New York, and from this grew what we now know as our box score.

By 1880 there were 11 columns in the box score, and one bookkeeper in Brooklyn had as many as 70 items, from the number of hits to number of linear feet run on those hits.

Changes have developed through the years and with so many new teams and new sports, some editors felt the box scores were taking up too much space in their newspapers. This infuriated the baseball fanatics, who would sooner see the game stories eliminated than their beloved box scores.

Today, the type is so small in some papers yet almost need a magnifying glass. But newspapers continue to run box scores, even if they're only for the local professional teams.

Is the future of the box score at stake? Will it be a victim of the times?

"People must realize," said Swoff of the Elias Bureau, "that the box score is immortal. Oh, what a treasure would be lost."

MONEY golf meet lacks just about everything

CARLSBAD Calif.—Don (Ho Hum) January won the (yawn) MONY Tournament of Champions down here last (zzz-z-z-z) weekend. It was the first time anyone ever walked 72 holes in his sleep. He had a dozen birdies, a few bodeys, and a whole lot of snores.

Don January is the tour equivalent of a Valium, 6 feet 1 inch of tranquilizer. He is the pro from Ennui. He walks a course like a guy going to the electric chair. His swing is so slow, pictures of it have to be serialized.

You watch Don January play golf and you have to conclude the reports of his birth were greatly exaggerated. He makes Calvin Coolidge look like a nervous wreck. The tour joke has it that they have to stop every three holes and wind Don up again. His watch stops every half-hour. So does his heart.

When Don January gets up in the morning, he treats life as if it were a marathon, and he had a one-lap lead. His swing looks as if it were dipped in molasses and honey. Hibernating animals move faster. His pulse rate is a nice, steady 12. He is the original Slow-Walking, Slow-Talking Jones. His speech would have to speed up to be described as a drawl.

Tom Weiskopf and Roger Maltbie played the final 18 holes Sunday in a little under two hours. January takes longer than that to get out of bed. They looked like two guys making a getaway from a bank heist. January looked like he was floating around the course, if they ever put January and Julius Boros in a twosome together, they'd cobweb by the third hole. January wouldn't hurry to get out of a forest fire.

He got $45,000 for beating 21 golfers, most of whom obliged by beating themselves. It was hardly a vintage year for the T of C although it was the second time January has won it.

With Nicklaus, Trevino, Palmer and Player not on hand, most players seemed to think they could win if they left their swing in the room. But La Costa is too tough a course to respond to looped spasms for backswings, or hurried putts, or two guys playing as if they were on roller skates.

Even the ultimate winner gave some thought to skipping the tournament. In effect, Weiskopf did skip it. And he was not alone.

The future of the event is causing some concern anyway after a year in which the tour had more multiple winners and more first-time winners than it has in decades.

The trick of course, is to get around the format which decrees that only four winners from the previous 12 months be admitted. With names of limited marquee value, not only is the live gate affected, but the numbers in the television game have to be taken into consideration. I mean, if the public just wants to see anybody play golf, they can always pack a lunch and go over to Griffith Park for the afternoon.

What's needed are some rule-benders to put some bright lights up on the tube, and the suggestions here are furnished gratis to the promoters. Next year, they should expand the eligible list to include most or all of the following:

- 1—Any blond.
- 2—Anyone named Tom, Ben, or Hale.
- 3—Any Mormon.
- 4—Any Mexican with a tattoo on his left forearm.
- 5—Anybody named Arnold.
- 6—Any South African.
- 7—Anybody from Ohio State.
- 8—Anybody from LaTrobe, Pa.

We will exclude anybody who hasn't done at least 20 TV commercials in the past 12 months, anybody wearing an Amarna cap, or wearing glasses, and maybe anybody whose tour victories have all come in Arizona. We will also throw out all scores made by guys sinking putts of over 30 feet, and give anybody named Arnold or Lee or Gary three shots a side. Only this way can we restore luster to the field again and win back the audience from Bowling For Dollars, or trick skiing in Aspen.

Cubs leave town for Los Angeles after 5-4 victory

It was not a home stand worth remembering, but at least it ended on a bright note Thursday afternoon.

The Cubs departed for Los Angeles and a lengthy road trip after pulling out a 5-4 victory over Montreal that snapped a five-game Wrigley Field losing streak.

Chicago will battle Los Angeles tonight at 9:30 while the White Sox return to the city for a home game with Boston at 8:00.

Mike Adams' single with two out in the 11th inning scored Jerry Morales from third base and gave the Cubs a one-run victory over the Expos.

The Expos won the completion of Wednesday's suspended game 12-6 with the two teams playing the final three innings before Thursday's regularly scheduled contest.

Morales, whose homer had tied the game in the fifth, doubled with one out in the 11th for the Cubs and after Andy Thornton was walked intentionally, Manny Trillo advanced both of them with an infield out. Adams, making only his fourth plate appearance of the season, then singled home Morales.

Starting pitcher Clay Kirby, who couldn't survive the second inning, delivered a bases-loaded double to drive in three Montreal runs in the second inning and the Expos scored their fourth run in the third on singles by Larry Blittner and Mike Jorgensen and a double by Larry Parrish.

Back-to-back home runs in the fifth by Bill Madlock and Morales — on consecutive pitches by reliever Fred Scherman — tied the game for the Cubs.

Chicago's first two runs came in the second on a triple by Steve Swisher and singles by Rick Monday and Jose Cardenal.

In the completion of the suspended game, Tim Lincecum homered for the Expos in the seventh inning to hit for the cycle. He became the first Montreal player ever to perform the feat and the 71st in National League history.

Woody Fryman got the victory in the first game while Geoff Zahn, optioned to Wichita Wednesday night, took the loss.

The Cubs optioned left-handed pitcher Zahn to Wichita on 24-hour recall and asked waivers for unconditional release of right-hander Tom Dettore.

The changes were made to make room on the roster for two right-handers, Oscar Zamora and Ken Crosby, who were recalled from Wichita and reported in time for Thursday's game.

Dettore has an 0-1 record on 7 innings pitched, and Zahn has an 0-1 record for 8-1/3 innings.

Sittler ties two NHL playoff marks

Darryl Sittler tied two National Hockey League playoff scoring records with five goals and an assist Thursday night to lead the Toronto Maple Leafs to an 8-5 victory over the Philadelphia Flyers, tying their best-of-seven quarterfinal series at three games apiece.

The 25-year-old Sittler, who set an NHL one-game record of six goals and four assists against the Boston Bruins Feb. 7 of this season, began the assault on Montreal's Rocket Richard's 1944 record of five goals in one playoff game at 10:42 of the first period when Flyer goalie Bernie Parent stopped his first shot but fell back into the net with the puck.

The 140 penalty minutes assessed in the wide open game made it a total of 466 in the series between the two clubs, eclipsing the previous NHL playoff mark between Philadelphia and Montreal in 1974. Sittler also tied Dickie Moore's record of six points in a playoff game, set by the Montreal winger against Boston March 25, 1954.

In other action Clark Gillies, a former professional baseball player, batted home a 15-foot rebound at 5:58 of the third period Thursday night to give the New York Islanders a 3-2 victory over the Buffalo Sabres and a berth in the Stanley Cup semifinal round for the second consecutive year.

Cleveland nips Bullets, 92-91

Jimmy Clemons laid in a rebound shot at the buzzer Thursday night to give the Cleveland Cavaliers a 92-91 victory over the Washington Bullets for a 3-2 lead in their best-of-seven NBA playoff series.

An NBA playoff record crowd of 21,312 watched the Cavs take over the ball with five seconds left and pull out the victory. It was the third straight record crowd and gave the Cavs a total of 62,347 fans to attend the three playoff games in Cleveland. The Cavs took over the lead at 11:35 of the third period and held on until 1:12 left in the game when a three-point play by Elvin Hayes put the Bullets ahead 89-88.

Dick Snyder, who topped the Cavs with 26 points, dropped in a 20-footer with 54 seconds left, but Phil Chenier put Washington back on top, 91-90, with a turn-around 10-foot jumper with 37 seconds showing on the clock.

Reasor takes early New Orleans lead

Mike Reasor, who has spent seven obscure years on the PGA tour, outshot some of golf's most glamorous names Thursday with a seven-under-par 65 and seized the first-round lead in the $175,000 New Orleans Open.

Reasor's round was one shot off the record and good for a two-shot lead over defending champion Billy Casper and two lesser lights of the tour — Monty Kaser and Wally Armstrong. Casper, Kaser and Armstrong managed 67s over the dry and fast par-72 Lakewood Country Club course.

Another stroke back at 68 was a huge crowd headed by Nicklaus, British Open winner Tom Watson, leading money winner Hubert Green, John Mahaffey and Lee Elder. Former Masters champion Tommy Aaron and one-time U.S. Open king Ken Venturi were among another large group at 69. Don January, who won last week at the Tournament of Champions, fired a 70.

Honest Pleasure captures Bluegrass

Bertram Firestone's Honest Pleasure, heavily favored for the 1976 Kentucky Derby, scored his ninth straight victory Thursday by winning the $112,350 Bluegrass Stakes by a length and a half at Keeneland.

Under tight rein by jockey Braulio Baeza most of the 1-1/8-mile distance, Honest Pleasure led the entire race as the 1-9 favorite and easily held off Certain Roman in the stretch. Trainer LeRoy Jolley wanted his 3-year-old colt to run slower in the earlier stages of the race than in his previous performances, and the result was a lackluster time of 1:49 2/5. Despite the field of seven, the son of What a Pleasure — Tularia was so heavily favored there was win betting only on the Bluegrass and the $2.20 payoff created a minus pool of $41,876.20.

Certain Roman, ridden by Larry Melancon, made a move at Honest Pleasure entering the stretch, but Baeza urged his charge into a comfortable margin for the win. Inca Roc finished third, three lengths behind Certain Roman, and probable Kentucky Derby starter Proud Birdie was fourth.

Jenner wins Drake decathlon

World record holder Bruce Jenner of San Jose, Calif., won the decathlon at the 67th Drake Relays Thursday, compiling a record 8,260 points.

Jenner won three of the five events contested Thursday and broke his own Drake Relays record of 8,138 points set last year. Bill Hancock of the University of Chicago Track Club, the leader after the first five events Wednesday, was second with 7,261 points and John Warkentin of Alta Vista, Calif., was third with 7,261.

Jenner tied Hancock for first in the 110-meter high hurdles in 14.5 seconds, won the discus with a toss of 157-0 and finished first in the javelin, his specialty, with a throw of 232-2. The former Graceland College star finished second in the pole vault and 1,500 meters.

The main track and field competition of the Relays will begin Friday. Dozens of world class performers will compete at the two-day event. The highlight Friday will be the special 600 meters, which features three of the top four ranked half-milers in the world. Kenyan Mike Bolt of Eastern New Mexico is favored to win, but he'll be challenged by Rick Wohluter and Mark Eneart. Bolt, the national collegiate record holder at 880 yards, is ranked first in the world, Wohluter is second and Eneart fourth.

And in other sports news...

The Chicago Bears have signed Dan Jiggetts, 6-4, 255-pound Harvard offensive tackle and their sixth-round draft choice, and eight free agents including Dan Devine, Jr. Milton College wide receiver and the son of Notre Dame's coach... Margaret Court, who in 1970 became the first female player to win the Grand Slam of tennis has retired from competition to end a 17-year career.

Princess Anne suffered a mild concussion from a horse riding fall but the 25-year-old daughter of Queen Elizabeth is recovering quickly at London's King Edward VII hospital and is expected to continue as a competitive rider... Recently traded outfielder Reggie Jackson says he will play for the Baltimore Orioles without a contract providing that they afford some guarantee in case he is injured.

John Havlicek, the heart of the Boston Celtic offense, suffered a torn tissue in the arch of his left foot during his team's opening quarterfinal playoff game with Buffalo and will sit out Friday's contest... Fred Samara won the decathlon at the 62nd Annual Penn Relays for the fourth time in five years while Marti Liquori continued his comeback bid with a victory in the 5,000 meter run.

St. Louis Cardinal pitcher Lynn McGlothen has been slapped with a $300 fine and suspended five days by National League President Chub Feeney after initiating a beanball battle with the New York Mets Tuesday... Cale Yarborough led Thursday's Martinsville Speedway practice session as NASCAR's grand national drivers warmed up for Sunday's $92,000 Virginia 500.

Hoffman wins to share lead; Cards coast, 9-0

A Herald Staff Report

Joe Parille broke up a 3-3 ball game with a grand slam in leading the Hoffman Estates Hawks to a 9-5 victory over hosting Palatine in the Mid-Suburban League.

The win gave the Hawks a share of first place with Prospect in the MSL's South Division. Both are 3-0.

Singles by Rick Lindow and Randy Brown sandwiched a walk to Joe Gajewski, setting the fifth-inning stage for Parille. The Hawks' shortstop followed with a line drive over the right-center field fence.

A two-run single by Wayne Jackson in the seventh provided the insurance runs at wind-blown Palatine field.

A two-run single by Palatine starting pitcher Kevin McKenna gave the Pirates, now 0-3, a brief 2-1 lead in the first inning. RBI hits by Joe Gajewski and Brown, who had accounted for the first Hoffman RBI, put the Hawks up 3-2 in the third. Dan McSweeney's double deadlocked the game in the bottom of the inning.

Ken Krawczyk doubled in two in the sixth off relief pitcher Paul South. Then the Hoffman hurler settled down to preserve the victory for starter Jim Chamberlain. Tony Zara took the loss.

Brown paced the Hawks' 10-hit attack with 3-for-4. Bill Odell did the same for Palatine.

HARTH BLANKS GRENS

Arlington sophomore Doug Harth fanned 10 batters and allowed just two hits as the Cardinals ran their Mid-Suburban League record to 4-0 with a 9-0 gem against the Elk Grove Grenadiers.

Working with speed and precision, Harth allowed just two singles as the Cardinals jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first inning and were never threatened the rest of the way.

Harth was backed by a solid 11-hit Arlington offense, keyed by shortstop Frank DeSimone, who was 3-for-3 and drove on four runs.

DeSimone pumped a triple off the fence in rightfield to produce two runs in the three-run Arlington third inning.

He also tripled and scored in the fifth inning and drove in two more runs in the sixth with a bloop single to left.

John Vukovich, the Cardinals' second baseman, was 3-for-4 with two RBIs.

Harth's emergence as a strong starting pitcher will help Arlington in their fight for the MSL title.

Along with Craig Kennedy and John Mertins, Harth will make a big difference as the Cardinals attempt to hold

Harper pounds Triton

Led by the 3-for-4 performances of three Hawk batters, Harper College pounded hosting Triton Thursday, 18-11.

Gary Osance did the most damage of the trio, ripping Triton pitching for two homers and a double and driving in five runs. The latter hit smashed off the fence.

His slugging helped starting and winning pitcher Dave Patterson to go the distance. Patterson struck out nine and walked just three. Six Hawk errors contributed to Triton's total.

Patterson also had three hits, including a double, as the Hawks hammered out 17. Steve Raccuglia homered, doubled and singled.

Harper twice failed to score with the bases loaded or the outcome would have really been lopsided against the league leading Warriors (4-2). In all, Triton pitchers walked 14. The Hawks are now 3-3 in the N4C and 12-4 over-all.

'CATS WIN FIRST
Wheeling bats, and namely that one used by Rick Heredia, finally sprang to life and the Wildcats chalked up their first win of the conference campaign at the expense of visiting Schaumburg, 5-3.

Heredia exploded for a pair of homers — one of them a grand slammer — and the 'Cats collected ten hits totally in dealing the Saxons their second setback in five loop tries. Wheeling had produced only ten hits totally in three previous conference defeats and had been blanked twice.

Jon Konuk, with relief help from John Miller, notched the winning decision for the hosts. Konuk had a shut-out going until the sixth when Schaumburg also joined the home run parade.

Heredia laced his first circuit shot to left field to lead off the second inning. In the third singles by Rick Reese, Bob Terberry and Miller, coupled with a fielder's choice brought the stocky junior veteran to the plate again with two away and he promptly deposited a Mike Orlovicz pitch over the fence in center.

Schaumburg struck back on a walk to Bob Connell, a single by Russ Zouca and Rick Baker's subsequent round tripper. That chased Konuk but Miller came on to put down the next five Saxons in order, four by strikeout, to preserve the win.

MUSTANGS WIN 1ST
The Rolling Meadows Mustangs stole seven bases and pounded out eight hits as chunky righthander John Igrasek pitched them to their first baseball victory of the young season, 7-3, over Hersey. Meadows has lost three times.

The Mustangs, preseason favorites in the South division of the Mid-Suburban League, took a 3-0 lead in the top of the first. Paul Marsillo walked to start the inning, stole second, then came home on a double to center by Guy Tenuta. After a walk to Mike Bramlett and a double steal, Dave Bell blasted a long two-base hit to send in two more runs.

Igrasek struck out six and coasted along with a shutout until the sixth when a walk to Bobby Frye and a single by Mark Kauttel put runners at first and third. Frye scored a moment later on a ground out by Tom Barnard.

Rolling Meadows scored single runs in the third and sixth, driven in on base hits by Dennis Drolet and Jim Broderick. Two unearned runs crossed the plate in the seventh after a leadoff single by Marsillo, another stolen base, an error, and a sacrifice fly by Tenuta. Two more errors produced the final run.

A walk and an error preceded Frye's two-run triple in the bottom of the seventh after two were out. Igrasek got Joe Pusatera to ground out to Noe Nunez at third for the final out.

The Huskies are now 1-2 in the MSL.

Doroskin scatters three hits in Warrior victory

Buddy Doroskin scattered three hits and fanned nine while leading Maine West to a 2-0 triumph over hosting Maine East Thursday.

The lanky Warrior hurler almost had his shutout ruined early but some defensive support behind him averted a Blue Demon inside-the-park homer and West went on to post their second Central Suburban League triumph to go with a loss and a tie.

Maine West had jumped on the board first in the top half of the opening frame. Tim Platek singled, stole second, and was doubled home by Glen Watson.

James Altman then led off East's half of the inning with a slam to deep left field. It was retrieved by Bob Anderson, who relayed to Watson, who gunned down Altman with a peg to Wayne Wisniew at the plate.

For insurance, Rob Earhart tripled off the top of the fence in right field 385 feet away in the fourth inning and raced home on a bungled pickoff play at first. The triumph upped Maine West's over-all record to 4-2-2.

Logan series on women in sports draws praise

Dear Mr. Logan,
Just a brief note to let you know how much I enjoyed your recent series on "Women in Sports."

I have four daughters, all grown now, and feel they were cheated very much in the way of sports. But then, we can't look back. I know there is great hope for my granddaughters! The progress being made and the changes in attitudes are important indicators of what the future holds.

It's people like you, Mr. Logan, who help bring the facts to the people and increase their awareness. It was a most enjoyable and informative series.

Mrs. Diane Evans
Arlington Heights

To Fans Forum:

I have recently returned from a vacation. So I just had the chance to read and enjoy your paper's articles on sportswomen.

Some people seem to think that women are receiving too much too soon. Your writer, Mr. Logan, hit the nail on the head with the points he made. Like other minorities, women have been taken advantage of and are finally receiving what they've deserved all along! I just wish that more articles by journalists would be printed saying what Mr. Logan said. When it comes from a gentleman it means a lot, too. It tells me there are some men who are standing up to be counted. I wonder how many of your women readers really appreciate such commentary.

I am glad my neighbor saved my papers for me. Again, a big thank you for those articles. Your paper has always been in the forefront in suburban issues and this is just another instance of this.

Mrs. Anne Sorensen Prospect Heights

To Fans Forum—

I wanted to express my thanks to Paul Logan for his series on Sportswomen. I found his articles interesting and informative. I especially got a kick out of the myths that have been perpetuated throughout the years.

I am a history teacher and I find a great deal of facts pertaining to women have been left out of the history books. I think education and re-education play a major role in reshaping minds and your series, Mr. Logan, has helped to broaden one's perspective on women in sports. Thanks.

CUBS NEED PITCHING

Fans Forum:

I think it's incredible that the Cubs haven't gone out and done everything possible to land a major-league caliber pitcher or two. The top Cub brass always gives excuses like "there isn't anything available" or "the people other teams want from us are not on the trading block," but I didn't see the Cubs making any special effort to get Andy Messersmith, or for that matter, Catfish Hunter.

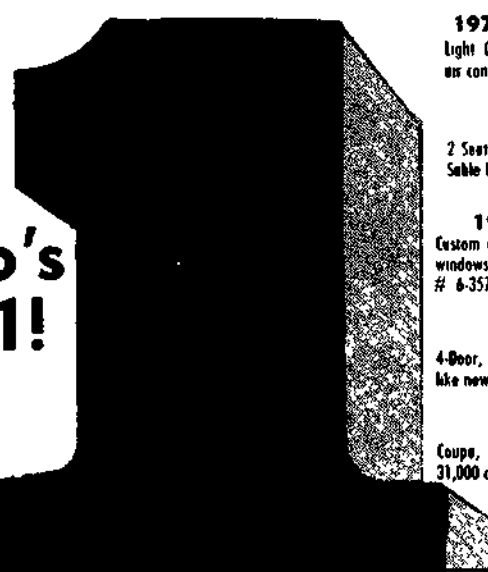

But still I feel that the Cubs are probably the only team in baseball that thinks you can get something for nothing on the major league market. Ever since the Cubs traded away Jenkins, it seems they have felt it was undesirable to give away any more of their top players. When will the Cubs' brass learn that you have to give something up to get something? Maybe trading Madlock or Monday or Cardenal is necessary.

Major league trading is a give-and-take proposition.

Romack at Hilldale

On Saturday, May 15 the Hilldale Country Club will host Ms. Barbara Romack, a member of the MacGregor Advisory Staff, for a golf exhibition at 8:30 a.m.

The public is invited to this informal session that will include golf instruction, a playing demonstration as well as a question and answer period. Sidewinders host invite 1-14 it

The Chicago Sidewinders wheelchair basketball team will host the National Invitational Wheelchair Basketball Tournament at Hoffman Estates today through Sunday.

The participating teams are the Sidewinders, the Twin cities Rolling Gophers, the Kankakee Krusiers and the Canadian All-Stars.

The round-robin tournament will feature two games tonight at 7 and 9 p.m. and two games both Saturday and Sunday at 1 and 3 p.m.

The Hoffman Estates Loyal Parents (HELP) will assist in sponsoring the tournament and hopes to raise money for a sign for the school.

Tickets are available at the door or by calling HELP president Pete Smith at 865-1304.

Finis going two ways

Jerry Finis, a 6-4, 250-pound graduate at Fremd, is dividing his time this spring between track and spring football practice at the University of Illinois.

Finis is the Illini's best discus thrower on the track team and also hopes to star at right tackle for the football team next fall.

He attends football workouts on Monday and Tuesday and competes with the track team the rest of the week. The varied diet of sports hinders Finis a little.

"It does hurt me a little for track because I can't work as much as I'd like to," he said. "I miss a little bit of throwing but that's not one of the major problems now."

Assistant track coach Tom Pagani agrees. "I'm sure if he were just a one-sport athlete he'd be much better in the sport he chose. I'm sure the football coaches feel the same way."

"He does as much in a short period of time as possible but when you split seasons, it's difficult."

But, for now, Finis has the best of both worlds. His pedigree includes all-state recognition in both track and football while at Fremd and he is proving how two sports can work together and help each other instead of being in competition with each other.

Soccer club holds dance

The Third Annual Celtic Soccer Club Dance will be held at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, May 15 at St. Thomas Hall, 1141 E. Anderson Dr., Palatine.

Tickets are available from all team mothers through May 4. No tickets will be sold at the door.

For further information contact Ann Marsland, publicity director, at 359-6348.

Sting invite youngsters to opening home contest

Soccer teams from park districts and youth leagues with their banners flying will be out in full force at Soldier Field next Friday night, April 30, when the Chicago Sting opens its 1976 home schedule against Toronto Metros in the North American Soccer League, largest professional soccer league in the country.

The Sting has designated opening night, April 30, as Youth Night. All youngsters appearing in their soccer uniforms will be admitted free along with their manager and coach. Over 2000 young soccer players are expected to cheer the Sting to victory.

Teams from more than 80 park districts have been invited to participate in the Sting Youth Night.

Adding to the opening night festivities will be an exhibition soccer game between halves of the Sting-Toronto game, featuring sports celebrities such as Bobby Douglass, Bob Thomas, John Pont, Ray Meyer, Milt Pappas and others against members of the Press, radio and TV including Roy Leonard and his son Kent, Brian Hewitt, Alan Burns and Jules Furth.

Managers are requested to prepare their team roster with names and addresses to be eligible for free chances on adult season tickets to be drawn at half-time.

Advance tickets for the youngsters will not be necessary. Youth teams in uniform will be admitted free through Gate 15 on the west side of Soldier Field between 6:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. on opening night only.

Palatine Relays

the Palatine Relays.

Fremd finished second last year to Addison Trail in the boys division, the Vikings' strongest showing ever. Coach Pat Brogan's team should be in the running again this year with good balance and depth in every event.

The host Pirates, who had their streak of eight straight titles broken in 1974, will also be looking to make a strong effort Saturday.

In other meets Saturday, Mid-Suburban League indoor champion Forest View joins Rolling Meadows in the Lake Forest Invitational beginning at 10 a.m. Elk Grove competes at the Wheaton Relays. Wheeling is at the Glenbrook North Relays on Friday night.

"We're just going to see if we can get some good individual efforts," said Forest View coach Bill Mohrmann, who will take only a fraction of his team to Lake Forest, due to spring vacations which find several Falcons out of town.

"We'll run (Steve) Schollenberger in the 220, the 440 and the 880," said Mohrmann. "Darryl Robinson will run the mile and the two-mile and Jimmy Vartanian will run the high hurdles and maybe a couple of relays."

Mohrmann is already gearing his team for the 11th running of the Falcon Invite, which Forest View will host May 7.

Arlington takes three and moves within two

by CHARLIE DICKINSON
Tennis Editor

With 96 down and two to go, the Arlington Cardinals need only dual meet wins over Wheeling and Prospect to clinch their 100th straight Mid-Suburban League dual meet.

It was business as usual for Arlington as they won three more against Elk Grove, Buffalo Grove and Schaumburg in their conference quadrangular Thursday.

The Cardinals ripped through their opponents by 5-0 scores and never went into three sets in any of their 15 matches.

Buffalo Grove got the best of both Elk Grove and Schaumburg, winning both matches 3-2.

Tim Kane won two points for the Bison at No. 2 singles, topping Elk Grove's Bob Kinn 6-2, 6-4 and Schaumburg's Ron Dudley 6-3, 6-7, 6-4.

The two wins evened Buffalo

Grove's MSL scale at 4-4 and left them in fourth place in the rain-fouled league standings.

Elk Grove dumped Schaumburg 3-2 in their match as Bob Kinn and Gary Christensen picked up points at singles for the Greys.

Palatine ran their MSL record to 4-1 and moved into third place with a 5-0 win over last place Rolling Meadows.

The Pirates won every match in straight sets and head coach John Carlson was especially taken with the play of his No. 2 doubles team, senior Jim Lillibridge and sophomore Mike Franzen.

"I was worried about that team earlier in the year," Carlson said, "but they're really starting to play some nice tennis."

"The senior has taken over and helped to settle the sophomore down and it's starting to pay off."

Maine West opened their Central

Suburban League tennis season with a 3-2 loss to Maine South.

The Demons only singles point came from sophomore Tom Gebhardt at No. 3.

Gebhardt is 11-1 for the season, his only loss coming from Deerfield's Cort Lewis.

He hammered out a 6-2, 6-1 victory in his match Thursday.

Prospect had a day off from conference play and whipped Lake Park 4-1 in what Knight head coach Jim Gelhaar called "the best win of the year for us."

Prospect's Dan Hanson, playing at No. 1 singles, soundly defeated Lake Park's Tom Pauly 6-3, 6-4.

"Pauly was seeded above Hanson in the state meet last year," Gelhaar remarked, "but Dan handled him well today."

Of the matches the Knights won, only one was forced into three sets.

Western champ could repeat

Based on performance on this year's pro golf tour, Hale Irwin rates an excellent chance of successfully defending his Western Open Championship when that fairway classic is held for the 73rd time June 24-27 at Butler National Golf Club in suburban Oak Brook.

The one-time Colorado football star, who earned $205,390 last year to rank No. 4 in pro earnings, has visited the bank regularly this season. His last trip was with a check for $11,166, earned for a fine tie for fourth in the 1976 Masters. Before that classic, he had won some $121,000 to rank high among 1976 money winners, his victories including the Los Angeles Open and the Florida Citrus Open.

All grade school boys between the ages of eight and fourteen by Dec. 1, 1975, who live in the village or Park District of Mount Prospect are eligible to register. All new applicants must be accompanied by a parent and must present proof of age. Those who participated last fall may register in person or by mail.

'Bevo' was robbed!

Clarence "Bevo" Francis holds the one-game mark when he tallied 116 for his Rio Grande (Ohio) College in a game against Ashland Junior College. However, his outburst along with his 50-point season average weren't recognized as official marks because he played some of his games against two-year schools.

Scholarships available for hockey registration

A small number of scholarships remain available to the third annual Stan Mikita Hockey School for hearing impaired boys which will be conducted from June 13-19 at the Randhurst Twin Ice Arena in Mount Prospect.

More than 65 youngsters are expected to enroll in the clinic, fulltime project of the American Hearing Impaired Hockey Assoc., Inc. (AHIHA).

Each scholarship pays all clinic-related costs. No student makes any payment to the AHIHA or Mikita Hockey School. All students must be at least 12 years old, have their own hockey equipment and possess good skating ability.

Mikita, the veteran Chicago Black Hawk center, will again be assisted by former teammates Elmer "Moose" Vasko and Gene Ubriaco plus other current Black Hawks.

Also returning for his third clinic is David Sparks, director of hearing research at the University of Washington in Seattle.

Sparks played collegiate hockey at the University of Massachusetts and still competes semi-professionally on the West Coast.

The entirely volunteer instructional staff will also include other players from throughout the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association.

Instruction will be held from 8:30 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. on weekdays, June 14-18. Students will compete in special evening hockey games. A dinner party is scheduled for Wednesday evening, June 16.

The clinic will conclude with a Saturday morning game pitting the Hearing Impaired Varsity against the Mikita All-Stars, who are primarily Black Hawk players.

For additional information, call the Stan Mikita Hockey School at 829-2250 days or 537-9484 evenings. Or write the clinic at 1143 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill. 60607.

American Academy returns with gymnastics trophies

This past weekend the American Academy of Gymnastics, Inc. of Des Plaines found their girls and boys teams bringing home several trophies.

The Academy girls 11-and-under score of 105.70 was good enough to take the first place trophy at the 11th Annual Elche Invitational held in Olympia Fields. In second place was Gymnastics Unlimited of Addison with 104.45.

The boys team 12-to-14 brought home the second place trophy with a score of 94.10 being outdistanced by the sensational performances of the boys team from Gymnastrom in Reading, Pa. with a score of 112.20.

The Academy girls found their teammate Erin Tanner of Arlington Heights taking the second trophy in

Stevenson High selects three to Hall of Fame

Three Adlai Stevenson High School athletes have been inducted into the newly-formed Athletic Hall of Fame, it was announced this week by Athletic Director Hank Andrew.

The new honorary was established by the coaching faculty to honor seniors or graduates who have been outstanding athletes at Stevenson.

Selected for the first honors were Don Bevers, 1968 track star, who now works for the first department in Normal, Ill.; Greg Mercier, four-year letterman in three sports, who now is attending the F.B.I. Academy in Quantico, Va.; and Gene McIntosh, a 1968 all-county football player who now works in landscaping in Lake Zurich.

HOME IMPROVEMENT

14 ways to simplify remodeling

Listed are 14 points to help you get the most — and easiest satisfaction when embarking on a remodeling project.

1. Put your ideas on paper. Keep a file of ideas from advertisements as well as editorial material.

2. Engage an architect if your remodeling involves any structural alterations. He can provide you with rough sketches or working drawings and also provide on-the-job supervision.

3. Don't rush when selecting a contractor. Take time to check a man's bank references, talk with some of his former customers and personally look at a few of his completed projects. Investigate at least three contractors and invite each to submit a bid.

4. Let each contractor know you're considering other bids and give each candidate the same specifications. Name exact models, product types.

5. Make certain the contractor you hire carries adequate insurance: workmen's compensation, property damage and personal liability coverage.

6. Ask your contractor if he complies with the Code of Ethics of the National Home Improvement Council.

7. Don't automatically snap up the lowest bid for your remodeling project. Consider the interest and professional attitude an individual contractor shows toward your project.

8. Make absolutely certain your remodeling plans are not at odds with any building codes or zoning regulations.

9. Don't try to handle a job yourself unless you're fairly knowledgeable about building materials. This is especially true with plumbing and electrical work.

10. Don't introduce a lot of work changes once the remodeling is under way. These can be costly, will slow up time schedule and cause unnecessary friction between you and your contractor or architect.

11. Insist that the contract include exact date work is to begin, a schedule of step-by-step proceedings and an approximate completion date. If delays seem unreasonable and unnecessary, you have right to take action.

12. Don't sign a completion certificate (if work is financed) or make final payment until the contractor gives you a release from liens and you're 100 per cent satisfied.

13. Ask for a contractor's guarantee (usually for one year).

14. Finally, ask for a clean-up provision in your contract so your house will be returned to its original condition after the work is completed — at the contractor's expense.

A CHILD'S bedroom is his kingdom. For younger children there are scrubbable wallcoverings with a child's favorite characters, nursery rhymes or make-believe animals. For older children there are more sophisticated plaids or checks, or pop art. This cheerful bedroom is papered in Fresno, a Sunworthy Wallcovering available at Maloney's Wallcoverings and Paint, Surrey Ridge Shopping Center, Arlington Heights.

Change your bathroom's decor by using color, imagination

The bathroom is much more important than just a place to shave, wash, etc. The bathroom has taken on great appeal for designers and decorators alike — and it is getting its fair share of attention ... with brightly colored fixtures, elaborate wall coverings and dazzling accessories.

Even if you don't have an ultra-modern, all-new bathroom, there are numerous ways in which to rejuvenate the existing room without the costly expense of complete remodeling.

If the floor and fixtures in the bathroom are basically in good condition, a new vanity for the sink would be a welcome addition. There are several types of vanities on the market that combine serviceability and low costs all in one.

Select a vanity that will work well with the mood and color scheme. Some vanities are like small dressing tables — complete with drawers for make-up and hidden shelves for cosmetics and medicines.

One good way to brighten up the bathroom and add a bit of instant color is by changing the shower curtain and towels. If you can sew, there are basic shower and window curtain patterns available for easy stitching. All it takes is some straight seam sewing — nothing fancy or tricky.

If you do sew a shower curtain, consider taking one flower or geometric design from the fabric and applying it on hand and bath towels. This little decorator touch will make your bathroom look like the fancy ones that are photographed for the home magazines — at a fraction of the cost. And make a laundry bag or lid cover of the same fabric.

If your creativity lies in gardening, bring part of the garden inside. Plants make a wonderful addition to any bathroom.

Hints for wallpapering

More do-it-yourself projects are being "liberated." Today, in fact, there might be more women putting up wallcoverings in the home than men. Dealers across the country report a big jump in inquiries about wallcovering projects from women.

"It's not a difficult project," notes one expert. "It's work, naturally, but it can also be rewarding when the kitchen or bathroom takes on a fresh new look." He recommends starting at your wallcovering dealer, the best source for information. "Your dealer can explain how to simplify the job, he can recommend the right wallcovering for your room, and he can supply step-by-step booklets on what to do," he says.

When buying wallcoverings, remember that quality varies with price. The more expensive types wear longer and better. They are also easier to clean and will be a long-term plus for your home. "Washable" coverings are intended for a damp sponge or cloth. "Scrubable" can take heavy cleaning, such as removing crayon or water paint.

Types of wall coverings include standard wallpaper (with coating of vinyl plastic), fabric-backed vinyl, self-adhesive paper and fabric paper.

It is very important to think, plan and lay out all tools and implements before beginning. A few extra minutes of planning can mean that sections will hang straight, that patterns will match, and that the wallcoverings stay in place.

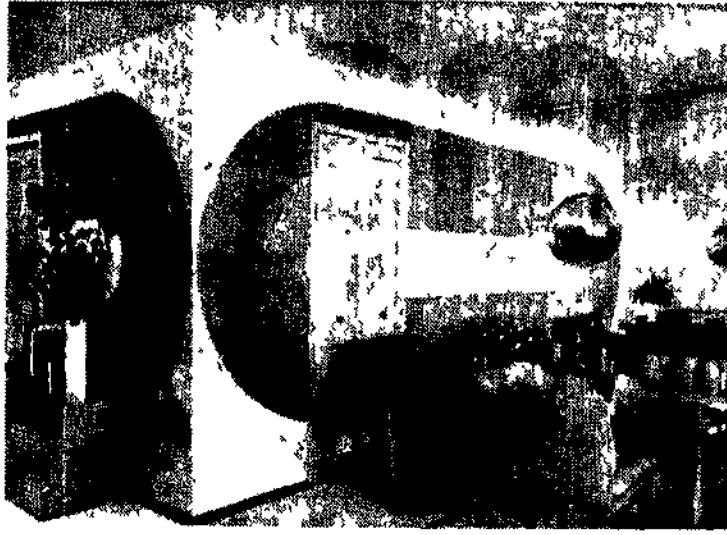

Get everything your dealer specifies. Visualize patterns and plan cut-outs for windows and doors. Then go to work.

You should start working near a window, central wall or fireplace, so the pattern will be complete and uninterrupted where it is most visible. First, fasten a plumb line (a string with a lead weight attached to the bottom) to the ceiling, and let it hang straight down to the floor. Using a pencil or chalk, trace the plumb line onto the wall.

Next, apply the adhesive, following instructions on the package. Line the paper up smoothly at the ceiling, leaving a few inches excess. Brush outward and down, fixing the paper to the wall. This motion will eliminate bubbles and keep the paper straight. Using a razor knife and ruler, trim excess paper from the top and bottom, and from the sides if the paper is not pre-trimmed.

Work your way around the room, keeping wallpaper edges smooth and tight against each other. Plan to use new plumb lines whenever starting new walls. For door openings and windows, first apply the full sheet of wallpaper. Then, scissor material away from the opening. Using a knife razor and straight edge, carefully trim around the opening. Go over the section one more time, making sure that everything is smooth, trim and tightly fitting.

THE GREAT NEW decorating idea for any room is the new Super-graphic System, available at Webber Paint Co., Arlington Heights. It's simple and a lot of fun to turn an ordinary room into an exciting one. The kit makes it simple to draw a Supergraphic design on a wall, ready to paint. There are eight, easy-to-draw designs and a Supergraphic to fit any wall size. If you are renting, you can paint your Supergraphic on Super-Strippable, the perfect painting surface for the graphics; when you move, you simply strip it off. Super-Pad, the paint applicator, makes painting lines and curves easy.

Stencil Your Floor How To's For Homeowners

Design and cut out a pattern. Coat it with lacquer to stiffen it. With masking tape, secure stencil to floor. Protect nearby areas with newspapers.

With aerosol paint, spray the cut-out area. Let dry, then remove the stencil. Repeat this technique until pattern is complete.

After you've finished and the paint has dried, protect and shine the surface with a coat of clear floor finish.

How to correct blistering paint problem

Many modern homeowners with tightly sealed homes will encounter a peeling problem, a condition in which the paint becomes detached and raises up to form blisters or bubbles. This generally results because a "house has to breathe."

It is said a family of four will generate six gallons of moisture within the home daily from routine baths, showers, cooking, washers, dryers and other appliances. The water must escape through the interior walls, through exterior siding, and then through the exterior paint.

Most paint, particularly flat paint, will permit moisture to pass through. A heavy build-up, however, will act as a barrier. Moisture that is trapped in the siding under the paint film and then heated by the sun, turns to vapor which forces paint blistering.

If blistering is minimal, scrape all loosely adhering paint down to the surface, spot prime and re-coat. When a severe condition is evident, caused by trapped moisture and a build-up of paint, paint dealers suggest one of two procedures:

1. Best and immediate correction — Remove all paint, re-prime and finish. For permanent correction, insert small metal wedges or shims under each board where it is nailed to a stud. This will pry boards away from siding about 1/16 of an inch and allows sufficient back ventilation to relieve even severe moisture accumulation.

2. Long-term correction — If removal of all paint is impractical, shim the boards as described in "1" to break the paint seal between overlapping boards and allow ventilation. Scrape and remove all loose paint down to bare wood.

Spot prime scraped area and then apply a finish coat. While this does not immediately correct all areas, any further peeling will be limited to areas not scraped. With each repainting, the condition will improve.

Exterior moisture can also cause blistering. Many persons do not readily recognize that moisture laden objects contacting the siding such as bushes, vegetation, the ground, cold water pipes (condensation), melting ice in gutters and excessive sprinkling can be major contributors to peeling and blistering.

Another precaution is to flash or caulk doors and windows properly. This not only prevents moisture from spreading to adjoining paint but also provides a plus for energy, since it prevents heat from escaping to the outside.

Driveways go colorful

Choosing the same color of paint for your garage as your house helps achieve a balanced, coordinated effect. Now, it's possible to have your driveway become part of your outdoor decorating scheme — with new colored asphalt coatings for driveways.

This coating requires the same surface preparation as regular driveway coatings. The surface must be dry, clean, and free from all foreign matter and grease. Brush it briskly with a stiff broom. Do not wash the surface with water or any liquid cleaners.

Since the coating will not seal cracks larger than hairline size, fill substantial cracks with a crack filler and let dry for five days before beginning.

To begin, stir the material slightly to insure uniform color distribution. Be sure that there is no likelihood of rain, and that the temperature is not below 50 degrees Fahrenheit or above 90 degrees Fahrenheit. Pour the coating onto the pavement in spots and spread evenly using a brush or long nap roller. Work the coating into all pores. Do not allow the material to puddle.

It will dry to the touch in two hours and may be driven on in 24 hours.

Wasted space becomes bath

In one-bath families, there's probably more bickering about who gets to use the bathroom during morning and evening "rush" hours than there is about which TV program to watch.

If yours is a one-bath house, you might consider adding a full bath or using "wasted" space to install one or more "compact" baths. Areas to consider include (1) your attic, (2) a part of the utility room, (3) a large closet, (4) an old pantry, (5) under the stairs, (6) your basement, (7) a corner of your family room and (8) a section of the garage.

Many areas, such as the utility room or basement, often already have plumbing in or near them, thereby simplifying the installation of a bathroom.

Fixtures for compact bathrooms come in the standard colors and styles of many manufacturers. Where space is awkwardly shaped, you can get water closets and lavatories for corner installation. The right choice of faucets and medicine cabinets can add greatly to the room's attractiveness.

A note of caution: Don't let the idea of a compact bath lull you into buying cheap fixtures. Your bathroom fixtures take a lot of hard use, so it pays to buy the best. The better water closets are quieter too, an important plus feature.

Build family room in the back

The ideal place for a recreation or family room is at the rear of the house.

In most cases, if the family room is added at the back of the house, it is separated from the sleeping area and can double with the existing living room as an entertainment area.

Many families prefer to have their new room addition open off the kitchen or dining room.

In any case, the addition of a room at the rear of the house will create an "L" shaped structure.

The sheltered area between the arms of the "L" makes an excellent spot for a screened patio or terrace, and this outdoor living space often can be arranged so that it connects with the rest of the house with a sliding door.

Planning a project? Before you start, make a simple scale drawing of the area where the work is to be done. "One inch equals one foot" is a good working scale for designing built-in furniture, and for details, "one-quarter inch equals one foot" is good for designing entire rooms and additions.

The sketch should indicate the location and dimensions of such things as doors, water pipes and fixtures that will necessitate special fittings of the materials to be used.

Determine the square footage or running footage of the area and divide by the unit measurement of the material to be used.

MORE THAN ANY other room in the home, the living room should show off your flair for self-expression. The mood you wish to create will be uppermost in your selection, whether it be formal or informal. If you veer towards the modern or contemporary, look for bold, bright contemporary geometrics such as Candida from Sunworthy Wallcoverings. Available at Maloney's Wallcoverings and Paint, Surrey Ridge Shopping Center, Arlington Heights.

The basics behind paneling

One of the most effective "tools" for remodelers is also one of the easiest — prefinished interior paneling. It can cover unsightly or cracked walls; provide new storage or work space; unite or divide living space — and wherever it goes, create a brand new environment rich with the warmth of wood.

The standard 4'x8' panels go up easily, require no special skill. There are three basics to consider: your budget, your long-range purpose and the performance needs of the job.

Consider purpose: are you upgrading the house, perhaps doing a loving restoration — or just trying to make it more livable? Do you plan to stay, or are you looking ahead to resale? Are you re-doing the kitchen, or building a new wing? All these purposes will affect the kind of price decision you make.

Then too, consider the performance you need. If the project is a child's room, you'll want to choose a panel that can take hard wear. But if you're refurbishing the foyer or re-doing the living room, then you might consider one of the choice hardwoods.

The range of styles is so great that there is virtually a panel to suit any personality or decorating scheme. Textures are available with the look and feel of hand-hewn or weathered wood. There are panels that look antique, contemporary or rustic. Selection depends on purpose and budget.

There is one other consideration basic to selecting paneling over perhaps a wallpaper or paint finish. Architects and builders call it "value analysis." It is a consideration underlying every product choice by professionals today.

Plainly put, "value analysis" is the cost of a product over its life cycle. Paint and wallpaper cost less to apply but their life cycle is much shorter. Panels, properly installed and maintained, last indefinitely. In a few short years, the initial cost of paneling will be far less than three or four applications of a less substantial product.

Finally, one of the most important incentives to remodeling has become the need for insulation. Attic insulation especially pays for itself many times over in energy conservation and for little added expense, homeowners are converting this traditionally wasted area to an extra guest bedroom or kids' playroom for rainy days.

Where to go for money

When you are planning important renovations to your house there are several sources for loans. Your local bank or savings & loan association is probably a good place to start, but don't overlook other good sources.

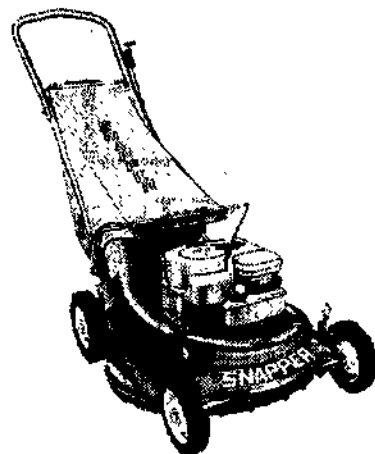

The Federal Housing Administration, the Farm Home Loan Administration, as well as state agencies may be worth investigating, as many of them have active loan programs for home improvements.

And don't overlook your contractor. If you are getting bids for $2,000 or $3,000 worth of plumbing and heating work, ask the bidders what assistance they can give you in obtaining a loan. Experienced contractors know their way around the home-loan market; they know which lending institutions are pushing out the money for this work, and where the lowest interest is obtainable. The contractor often has the necessary forms available, and will help you fill them in. It is standard practice for them, so don't be bashful about asking for their help.

Business booms

Energy shortages and high travel costs are causing more families to plan stay-at-home vacations. The trend has led to a definite upsurge in home improvement activity.

A recent study of the home improvement market by the Bureau of Building Marketing Research indicates that remodeling and modernization activity will constitute a $28-billion business in 1976.

Furthermore, when consumers were asked what activities their families will spend more time with, lawn and garden projects ranked first (62 per cent) and home improvement projects second (32 per cent).

Lawn is framework for garden

One of the most important features of every home's landscaping is the lawn. A velvety green lawn makes a lovely framework for your garden and sets off the front of your home to great advantage.

For best results when planning your lawn, choose a grass that is climatically suited to your area. Long winters with cool spring and fall seasons call for grasses such as Kentucky bluegrass or fine fescues.

Climates with long, warm summers call for such grasses as zoysia, bermuda, or St. Augustine. Your local nursery can advise you as to the best type for your locale.

Lawns can be achieved by sowing seeds, laying turf, planting small pieces of turf, planting rooted shoots, or by planting fragments of creeping stem.

Regardless of the method employed, be sure and prepare the ground first. You will need to loosen the ground deeply, adding decayed organic matter, fertilizer and perhaps conditions; consult your nurseryman for his recommendation.

Make sure the area is as free of weeds and weed seeds as possible before putting in your lawn.

Choose an open, sunny area for your lawn for best results. Check the area for drainage, as good drainage is essential to a healthy lawn.

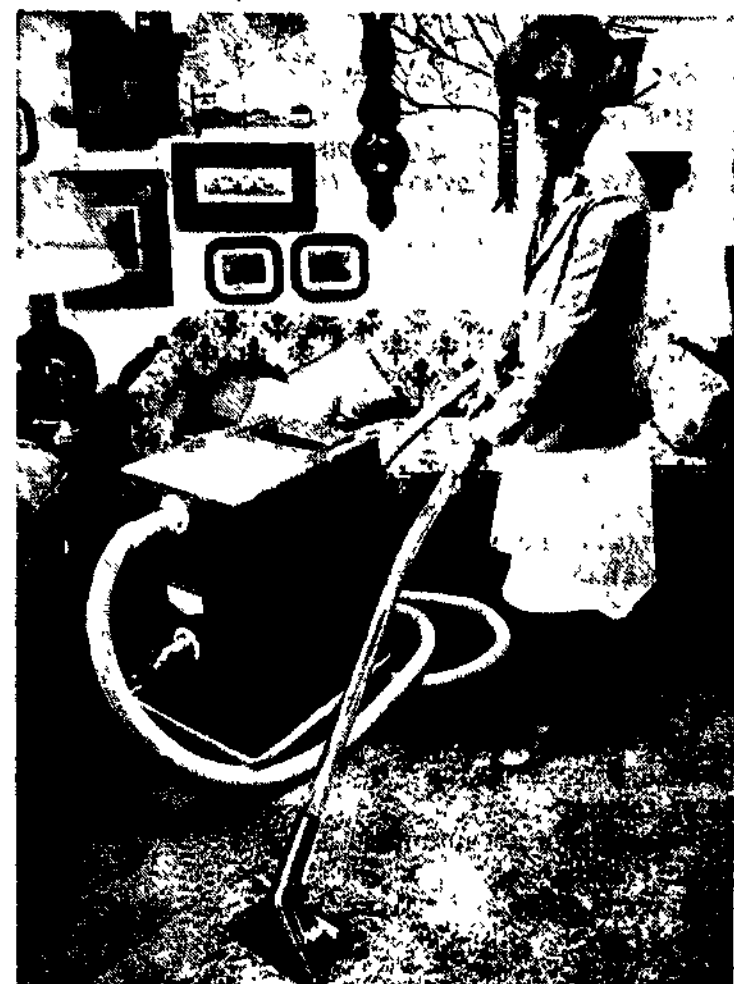

After seed has been sown, keep planted area damp for a period of three weeks.

Once your lawn is established, proper care must be taken to maintain its beauty. Watering is essential, of course. Soak your lawn thoroughly for around three hours every two weeks. Don't water at night; it's best to water early in the morning or at midday.

As your lawn grows ... and grows ... you'll have to think about mowing. There are several types of mowers available and experts recommend purchasing one that can handle your area in minimum time. Hand-pushed mowers can handle smaller areas, and push-type or self-propelled power mowers, larger areas.

To make mowing easier, install brick borders flush with the ground along walls, fences or flower beds. A good way to control grass growth around trees is also with bricks, laid in a circle to provide a neat edge and attractive design.

Weeds are the pestiest problem when it comes to lawns ... fortunately, there are selective weed killers available to help in the battle. When all else fails, remove weeds with a knife that has a curved blade. Pull out weeds while they are still small, before they have an opportunity to set seeds.

A STEAMEX carpet cleaner can add years of life to your carpets by keeping them clean and fresh. As easy to use as a vacuum cleaner, it can be rented by the hour or by the day at Prim Cleaners, Palatine and Windsor Shopping Center, Arlington Heights.

How to plan color change

You don't have to be an artist to use colors expertly. Once you learn a few simple color facts, you can apply them to your decorating scheme of things — creating dramatic and tasteful color changes throughout your house.

Nothing sets a mood or catches the eye faster than color. The minute you walk into a room, whether you're aware of it or not, color creates an impression. Dark, warmer colors give a room a cozy, intimate feeling; a light color gives the impression of more space. Likewise, specific colors create special effects of their own.

Keep in mind that when selecting colors, a large area of color (like a wall or ceiling) will look more intense than what you see in a small sample. Bring the color sample or chip into your home, where you can see it in the right lighting.

To help you in your quest for the right color, The National Paint and Coatings Association suggests that you refer to the all-time color-choice favorite, the basic color wheel. The color wheel is based on three primary colors: red, yellow and blue. Secondary colors are created by mixing equal amounts of two primary colors. The secondary colors include orange (a combination of red and yellow); green (a yellow and blue mixture); and violet (composed of red and blue). Intermediate colors are produced by mixing each primary color with its secondary color neighbor. There are six of these: yellow-orange, yellow-green, red-orange, red-violet, blue-violet and blue-green.

The red, orange and yellow family of color are the "warm" colors — friendly and stimulating. These colors will enhance rooms with northern or eastern exposures. The "cool" colors include blue, green and violet. They are soothing and quieting.

Louvers becoming 'in' doors

Homeowners often overlook the decorative possibilities of interior doors. Among the most decorative styles for closet doors, for instance, are wood sliding or folding louver doors. These doors can just as easily be used to enhance room decor as the ceiling, walls or floor.

Louver doors are popular. They go well with just about any interior design ranging from Colonial to modern. They provide the depth and dimension that is missing with ordinary doors.

Since they either fold back against each other or slide open and closed, they can be used in areas with limited floor clearance, such as shallow closets, small bathrooms, kitchens, pantries or laundry rooms.

Louver doors, besides hiding what might be unsightly storage, help prevent mildew. The louvers also allow the free circulation of air to dispel stale odors that could build up in an airtight closet.

Wood louvers can be stained to bring out the rich natural grain or they can be painted to blend or contrast with room colors.

Stock wood louver doors in a variety of sizes are available at building supply stores or local lumber dealers. They can be purchased either fully louvered or with louvers in the top half and wood panels in the lower half.

Using door knobs to reflect the decor of the room can give the wood louver doors an additional decorative touch. Black, wrought-iron knobs go well with Early American decor while bronze or brass can be used with modern.

Rent a steam carpet cleaner

Now you can "steam clean" your own rugs the professional way by renting a Trewax Hydro-Mist Steam Carpet Cleaner. The Hydro-Mist system is an effective, thorough method for removing harmful dirt. It loosens and removes dirt, previous shampoo residue and up to 90 per cent of the moisture — in one step.

The Trewax Up & Out "Steam" system is easy to operate. Basically there are two combined steps. As you pull the lightweight wand across the carpet, you release the hot shampoo mist. The mist effectively dislodges dirt and residue build-up. At the same time the vacuum head lifts out the embedded dirt and nearly all of the moisture (for rapid drying). This system avoids unsightly napping of pile and excessive soaking, eliminating the possibilities of shrinkage and "brown-out."

The Trewax Hydro-Mist system can be rented from Mobile Vacuum Sales & Service Center, 127 Wing St., Arlington Heights. The center offers something new for the area — free delivery, set-up and pick-up of the cleaner. Mobile Vacuum is also a vacuum repair center.

Pots, pans can decorate kitchen

Hanging pots and pans used to be a device for dealing with space problems in small, cramped city-apartment kitchens. But the current popularity of gourmet utensils brings more and more beautiful cooking equipment out from storage under the counter and onto display on kitchen walls.

Shining copper cookware, gleaming aluminum and stainless steel pans, and porcelain or ceramic casseroles in myriad fashion colors and designs are now as decorative as they are functional.

Attractive kitchenware is inspirational — the food seems to taste better, and cooking and serving it in beautiful cookware increases the enjoyment of the meal.

Keeping fine cookware on display, however, requires a firm commitment to keep it sparkling.

Most food residue left in pots and pans made of aluminum, stainless steel, Teflon, ceramic and porcelain can usually be washed away with a good liquid detergent and the swish of a sponge. But when the mess is greasy, more than soap and water is needed to prevent a build-up of the sticky stuff. A squirt of degreaser and a swish of a sponge can solve greasy food cleaning problems and leave your pots and pans "squeaky" clean.

Other cleaning problems require various treatments:

To eliminate the black discoloration that builds up on an aluminum pot, simmer it in a solution of vinegar and water for 10 to 15 minutes.

If food sticks to a pot or pan, fill it with cold water and let stand until the food is soft. If the food is burned-on, boil water in the pan and add about two teaspoons of baking powder per quart of water (except for aluminum pots, which baking powder darkens).

Corrosion spots on copper pans can be removed by rubbing with hot vinegar and salt, lemon juice and salt, or with buttermilk.

Aside from routine cookware cleaning problems, people who cook with gas rather than electricity also have to contend with the filmy residue left by the gas. This will respond to normal cleaning with the degreaser and a sponge, as long as it's not permitted to build up.

To get your revamped kitchen project rolling, start with sparkling pots and pans hanging decoratively from a wall. Other props are easy to add — try a hanging plant over the sink, or perhaps a miniature herb garden on the windowsill.

From there you can add other items, such as a butcher-block worktable or cobblestone-patterned tile floors for extra warmth and color.

Aluminum siding offers advantages

by SAM ROMANO of Romano Construction
 Over two or three decades ago many homeowners would never consider using siding. Today, however, it is a new story. Due to the high cost of energy and maintenance more and more people are looking to the carefree beauty and protection of aluminum siding.

There are many types of siding. The large companies back up their material with 20 to 30 year guarantees depending on the grade you select. The vinyl covered aluminum, although slightly higher bears a 30 year guarantee.

Both aluminum and vinyl aluminum add a certain amount of insulation, but it is the insulation backing that gives you the true insulation and real savings on fuel costs. This firing out as it is referred to, also assures a smooth and beautiful appearance to your siding. Good workmanship is important and you will find the better contractors will include a workmanship guarantee.

You may want to use aluminum only on those hard to get at areas such as soffit and fascia or window trim. There are many colors to choose from that will blend with your brick or roof.

In many cases the labor for siding is the same or slightly higher than the labor for painting. The initial cost of installation may be several times higher than painting. But when you consider approximately one-half of the cost of the installation is for labor on siding and about 90 per cent of the cost of painting is for labor, you realize a loss on your material. Paint cannot be fully guaranteed against chipping, cracking or peeling for one year.

Aluminum siding comes with many attractive accessories such as shutters, canopies, and pillars.

Homeowners who may want to finance their home improvements will be protected by a new ruling set by the Federal Trade Commission. The rule forces the banks and finance companies to police the activities of contractors and merchants. The FCC feels that financial institutions are in a much better position to uphold obligations than are the consumers. Most reputable dealers have financing from a bank which has F.H.A.

Whatever you may decide always be sure you are contracting with a company that is well known and who is willing to furnish you with addresses of completed work.

Prevent flooding with sump pump

Emergency Sump Pump, Arlington Heights, now offers emergency sump pumps in one-third and one-half horsepower units. The high-performance sump pump in one-third and one-half horsepower motor units is designed to operate along side your present sump pump system.

The unit prevents flooding, resulting from power or pump failure. If the main sump pump burns out, becomes clogged or blows a fuse, the unit reacts to the high water level and automatically begins pumping in excess of 3,300 gallons per hour.

Each unit is self-cleaning and operates from a 12-volt, automotive type battery. The sump pump system makes it possible for residential dwellings to have the same protection of two-system commercial structures.

Size up recliner before buying

Have you ever considered trying a chair on for size when shopping as you would a pair of shoes? Strange as it may seem proper 'fit' is just as important to your seating comfort as it is to walking!

Most people don't think of seating 'fit' as a criteria for selecting a chair — particularly a reclining chair. Style is usually the main consideration — a chair that matches the room's color scheme and is generally appealing to the eye. Aesthetic qualities are important — you're going to have to look at it every day, live with it, and love it. But if the chair's proportions are not matched to your size, weight, height, and body proportions, you can't expect great comfort.

Think about it. A chair that is high and deep enough to be comfortable for a 6'2" man, will leave the legs of the lady-of-the-house dangling. Conversely, a small petite low-backed chair will leave the average man's back and head without support, and his legs awkwardly jutting out into the middle of the floor.

1. Back of the Knee — in the upright as well as reclining positions, this hook at the back of the knee should meet the top seam of the seat cushion. If it doesn't, leg muscles will be strained.

2. Lower Back — should have the firm support of the back cushion resting against it.

3. Head — if the head is unnaturally pushed forward or strained too far back by the headrest when in both upright and especially the reclining positions, the chair is not for you.

In addition to these three checkpoints, there is a quick and easy way to tell if the chair will fit you properly the moment you sit down. When sitting upright, feet should be firmly planted on the floor. There should be no need to extend legs too far forward to avoid cramping. This indicates that the seat depth and height are just right, the backs of your knees are meeting the seat cushion's top seam, and the lower back is being properly supported.

When reclining, feet should rest centered on, and heels should not fall short of, or be extended from the raised footrest. Make sure knees are bent — not flat. This position will prevent any strain to the muscles and tendons between the calf and the thigh.

Obviously it would be improbable and impractical to buy a recliner for every member of the family. So, when you go shopping consider the person who will be sitting in it most often.

Decorating? Plan before purchasing

by CARYN FRIEDMAN
How to successfully furnish a home without really trying? If you've ever wanted to do it, you've probably found out it can't be done.

"When furnishing any room it's always best to work with a floor plan so that the room can be scaled to proportion," says Larry Heyman, A.S.I.D. for Lynell Furniture in Rolling Meadows.

Heyman recently designed the model apartments at the Chanticleer Condominiums in Hinsdale. A floor plan is important to determine the size of the furniture before you buy so you don't end up with an oversized table or chair that just doesn't fit in the room.

OR HOW DO you deal with a long wall? Your first thought might be to use a long sofa to fill the entire wall. But Heyman points out that this can be very awkward because, for one thing, it's very difficult for a line-up of people to sit comfortably and talk. And sitting down and getting up can be a nuisance when you have to step over two or three other people. Heyman suggests using a pair of sofas or a sofa and chair as a solution to the problem.

According to Heyman, there are many things to keep in mind when furnishing a home. If you're working with a designer, you should sit down and discuss the things you like to do and your overall lifestyle. "I'd want to know if my client liked to entertain and what kind of entertaining she did — small parties, informal gatherings or formal dinners — because this would influence the kinds of furniture I'd select," said Heyman.

"Working on the Chanticleer models, I had a little more freedom because I didn't have to worry about anyone's particular lifestyle," Heyman explained.

There aren't any set rules to follow when selecting furniture, but it is important to first decide what it is you want to accomplish. It's perfectly alright to mix furniture styles, and in fact, it's becoming increasingly popular.

AS AN EXAMPLE of what can be done, Heyman selected a contemporary butcher block table for the kitchen in the model. Instead of selecting contemporary style chairs, he opted for country style ones.

In the Chanticleer living room, Heyman chose a sofa with slight tones of Spain but he also selected a country style quilted patchwork fabric in a blend of colors — soft orange, black, browns and golds. He used a chestnut brown carpeting and painted the walls an orange sherbet color.

"It's no longer necessary to buy a complete bedroom or dining room set. Choosing pieces in different styles can make for a very exciting room," Heyman said.

After deciding what specific pieces of furniture you want, it's important to keep in mind the different textures and fabrics available.

IN THE MODEL, Heyman selected a sofa and loveseat in a cotton print and used velvet for one chair. A brass and glass cocktail table as well as a wooden table and plant stand in tones ranging from light to dark give the room a variety of different textures.

Aside from the texture of a fabric, you should also be sure that the fabric selected is practical for the room being furnished. Silk in a rec. room? Not a very good choice! Heyman also suggests checking the tightness of the fabric. A loosely woven fabric will snag easier and again wouldn't be a good choice for a room with a lot of traffic.

Space must also be considered when furnishing a home. Even if you think you know exactly what kind of furniture you want, a designer can sometimes show you a piece of furniture that you didn't even know was available to you.

"MANY TIMES furniture can be custom-made at a minimal increase in cost. And when you're dealing with space problems it can often be helpful to consider designing a piece of furniture that will best use the space you have to work with," said Heyman.

Although it would be nice to furnish a home in its entirety as Heyman did with the Chanticleer model, it just isn't always financially feasible. As long as the floor plan is made in advance, it's very easy to buy piece by piece when the budget allows for it.

When you're renting or buying a home, Heyman suggests checking to see whether it was built by a builder or an architect. He points out that many times architects will have designers on their staff.

Many times, problems are built into the home. A thermostat in the middle of a wall, misplaced vents and lighting fixtures and awkward doorways are some examples of poor planning. "Working with a designer before you buy your home can sometimes eliminate problems before they result," said Heyman.

Finally, once you have purchased all your furniture, it's time to accessorize. "Accessories should be the final touches tying together all loose ends. They should reflect you and your home even more than the furniture. After all, it's possible that your neighbor may have the same sofa and chair but the accessories you choose will bring out your personal tastes," explained Heyman.

The Chanticleer models are located at County Line Road at 57th St. in Hinsdale. For more information call 887-1349.

A MORE CONTEMPORARY look for the den in the Chanticleer model. Larry Heyman, A.S.I.D. for Lynell Furniture in the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center, chose a plush upholstered sofa, a mirrored cocktail table and earthy tones to make this a room you'd want to spend lots of time in.

WHEN THREE'S A crowd — the setting needs to be just as intriguing as the mood. And these are the times when indoors just doesn't suit your style, so let "The Sun Set" from Wall Tube and Metal Products Co. move the occasion outdoors into a romantic spot for just the two of you. A cafe table for an intimate tete-a-tete is the focal point for this outdoor group. Chairs for "The Sun Set" are fashioned of heavy steel frames welded for strength and then cloaked in a seamless Vinyclad finish to make them durable and comfortable to touch — whatever the weather.

Redwood garden shelter serves many purposes

Saving money and saving energy may find you and your family "back in your own backyard" this year. You can bring vacation living to your own everyday surroundings with a multi-purpose redwood garden shelter that gives your backyard both glamour and graciousness, and it won't cost as much as you think.

A redwood garden shelter can be many things — an overhead shade structure, a setting for relaxing and entertaining, a hard-working potting and gardening area, and a valuable storage area.

And a garden shelter can come in many shapes — a simple trellis, a gazebo, a greenhouse, a potting enclosure with storage facilities, or an elaborate multi-functioning structure. Combinations and uses are almost limitless.

The enjoyment and performance a family can derive from a redwood garden shelter is enhanced by the quality and beauty of the material itself. There is a grade for every job, ranging from the architectural or clear grades to the knotty and/or sapstreaked redwood garden grades. And because of redwood's inherent weather resistance, sturdiness and workability, building and living with the wood can be a satisfying experience.

California Redwood Association recommends the garden grades of redwood, Construction Heart, Construction Common and Merchantable, for outdoor applications. All redwood heartwood, including Construction Heart, is impervious to insects and decay. Heartwood grades only should be used for posts, skirtboards and anything in direct contact with the ground.

Other garden grades are fine for trellises, decks and all above ground uses. The texture of these grades add a lively, natural feeling to a backyard structure, blending with plants and outdoor amenities to create rustic charm and beauty. Best of all, they combine redwood's famous quality and performance with lower cost for home improvements.

To get started on your own redwood garden shelter, send 35 cents for California Redwood Association's new 12-page color idea booklet "Redwood Garden Shelters." This book contains many photographs, drawings and suggestions on how to create a garden shelter tailored to your own needs and surroundings.

Write California Redwood Association, Department HTS, 617 Montgomery Street, San Francisco, California 94111.

DECORATING is most fun when you use furnishings and accessories that reflect your personal interests and favorite extra-curricular activities — whether you're a collector, horticulturist, or sports enthusiast. This room was designed to create the ambience of a ski lodge. It is accessorized inexpensively with colorful action posters from the local travel agent, gold-toned 18-inch high wooden S-K-I letters from the local lumberyard, and a prefabricated wood-burning fireplace. An unusual wall sculpture was created by bracketing a pair of skis and poles to the wall, easily removable for next weekend's jaunt to the slopes.

YOU'LL WANT to see the large selection of hand-made imported rugs from India such as the one pictured above. Vartanian Carpets in Palatine has carpeting for all your needs and also carries a wide variety of no-wax vinyl floors.

Furniture goes flexible

As manufacturers create more flexible furniture styles to meet the needs of today's more mobile families and smaller living spaces, it's next to impossible to categorize, define, or speak in stereotypes.

All kinds of seating pieces, for instance, are used in mix and match combinations to create continuous modular areas that make conversation pits. There are armless sofas, love seats, and chairs that all go together and so give the home decorator a limitless number of combinations that fit into present homes and apartments, can move easily when the family does, and be sure to fit into any space at all.

Style names are hard to pin down this year, too. Traditional furniture is going to be much less formal. Stiff looking boxed seat cushions have given way to softer, more casual styles in casual look fabrics like easy-care Hercules.

The contemporary look is getting thicker and softer too. Tuxedo styling continues in popularity and some fabrics formerly thought of as more traditional, like jacquards and velvets, are being seen on more and more contemporary style seating pieces.

Family room groupings are making their own home fashion statement now too, with more weighty woods and natural, light finishes.

As if all that weren't enough confusion, you can't even tell the living room from the bedroom from the guest room now. You'd never guess some sofas open up into sleepers.

Use hobby to decorate

There's just no way you can get enough storage space. Pre-war apartments and houses have high ceilings and big rooms but closets are tiny and lots of windows put wall space at a premium. Newer construction features walk-in closets but the room sizes have shrunk and the ample attic has given way to the claustrophobic crawl space.

Even those collectors who have copped out and stashed all that stuff in Grandma's attic are caught when the dear lady announces that it's time to clear the stuff out — she's moving to Florida and her own tiny flat.

So what are you going to do with all those collectibles? That sports gear? The flea market finds and family heirlooms? The answer is simple and money-saving — use it all to decorate. It's the best way to save money on accessories and at the same time create rooms that really reflect you, your interests, and your lifestyle.

For example, a couple of young ski buffs who want to decorate a city apartment imaginatively and still leave some cash for weekend excursions on the slopes can bracket pairs of skis and poles to the walls or between corner shelving units to create avant-garde wall sculpture that comes off easily for use and solves the problem of storing such awkward size paraphernalia.

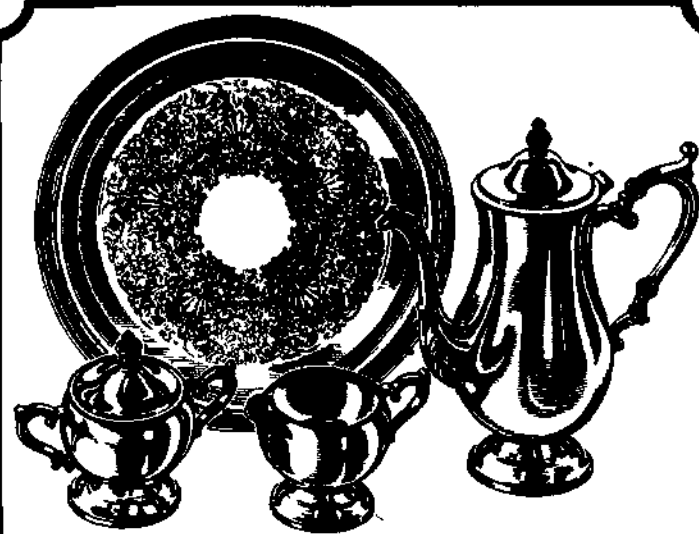

The rest of the room can reflect that cozy ski lodge ambience at a low price if the couple use free ski action posters from a travel agent, a prefabricated wood burning fireplace, and inexpensive seating pieces.

Much-loved foliage makes for endless decorative possibilities for the indoor gardener. A plexiglass stepstool or bleached wood ladder can make a plant stand for a bare corner. Houseplants on a windowsill can be combined with plants suspended with plastic monofilament wire or macrame hangers from the ceiling above to create a screen of greenery that replaces expensive blinds, shades, or draperies.

Favorite music styles can set the theme for a small den. The country-western fan can use natural wood floors and paneling, Aztec print area rugs, cane or wicker tables, and small potted cacti for a Southwestern feeling. Inexpensive wall decorations can include a do-it-yourself supergraphic painted sunrise and a framed outline rope sculpture of desert cactus. The small-space seating problem is solved with two recliners. The total effect is one of a quiet oasis for listening, reading and conversation.

For the movie buff, a photographer's "dinkie" light can be both a practical tool and an inexpensive way of providing general room lighting. The picture is completed with carpet and upholstered pieces of stain-resistant Hercules in blue, white, and rust. A rust-toned indoor-outdoor carpet is laid wall to wall and out on to the terrace. Antique photo equipment and old cinema stills provide great conversation pieces.

Decorate with plants

by ED FINK
of Klehm's Nursery

There is the mistaken idea that decorating with house plants is a relatively new idea. Far from it, for the Egyptians and even the Greeks and Romans, had plants growing in containers that were used outdoors as well as indoors. Mohammed taught that Heaven, as part of its many delights, would have beautiful, fragrant gardens. This belief was made a part of daily living so that gardens could be a joy even before one went to enjoy the rewards of the hereafter. So, in walled areas and in covered pavilions, beautiful gardens were created and plantings so mingled that it could hardly be told where the outdoor left off and the indoors began.

The use of house plants for decorating, as we know them today, is a comparatively recent thing. Victorian homes, kept shaded to keep the carpets from fading, were limited to plants that could survive with little light. Standards then were Rubber Plants, Ferns and the Aspidistra or Cast-iron plant. As more lighting was introduced into the home and new plants were brought into the market a much wider choice made indoor gardening easier and more exciting.

Today, whatever light is available, there are plants that can add a garden look to every room in the house. Plants can help the decorator get away from the cluttered look by using plants instead of dust gathering non-essential furniture. Using plants, especially hanging baskets, instead of drapes adds a whole new dimension to a room. Plant arrangements can be used as dividers. Even in the bathroom, where there is an abundance of humidity, there are plants that will flourish.

The important consideration in selecting plants is to consider the light that can be furnished. Perhaps the most common mistake indoor gardeners make is to expect a plant to survive on less light than is healthy for the plant. It is easy to fall in love with a plant at the greenhouse, take it home, submit it to less than needed light and have the plant slowly, but surely, perish. Not only do you lose a plant but you usually falsely accuse yourself of having a "black" thumb.

Take the advice of an experienced nurseryman. Tell him about the available light and how large a plant your space can accommodate. That space is important for you don't want the plant to outgrow the allowable space. True, you can cut it back but have you ever tried to cut back a plant that has been a friend for years? It isn't easy to do. Take the advice of the nurseryman, treat the plant as is recommended (especially about watering) and you'll have a friend as well as a beautiful addition to your home. One thing is sure — you'll get hooked on plants and you'll make room for an ever-growing indoor garden.

A HANGING plant such as this Piggy Back can add a whole new dimension to your room. Talk to an experienced nurseryman before selecting plants so that you can give them the proper care.

CALICO TULIPS and Calico Buds in shades of pink and yellow decorate coordinated wallcoverings designed by Gloria Vanderbilt for James Seeman Studios. Plants and a scallop of the Calico Tulip pattern are all that are needed to dress the window. Gingham checks cover the table and pillows to complete the fresh, country look. Gloria Vanderbilt-designed wallcoverings are available at The Paint Spot, downtown Arlington Heights.

THIS IS JUST one of the many wall groupings that the Art & Book Galerie features. You'll receive free decorator advice on how to hang pictures and arrange gallery walls with oil paintings, lithographs, enameled on copper, etchings, etc. The brand new store is located in Plaza Verde, Buffalo Grove.

Go from spool to table

After you manage to acquire one of these spools of wood that are often used by construction and electric companies, you'll probably wonder what to do with it! Here are some suggestions on how to turn a raw wood spool into a shiny decorator table.

First of all, make sure the wood is dry, clean, sanded smooth and free of grease and wax. To produce more such as polyurethane varnish or an alkyd varnish, should be applied. Sand the surface lightly between coats to produce better adhesion.

Once the final coat has dried thoroughly, it's ready for a special place on your balcony, in the dining room, or kitchen!

uniform staining, it is recommended that, initially, a coat of clear sealer be applied.

Next apply a thin paste wood filler combined with the first coat of wood stain and wipe it across the grain of the wood with a soft brush. Allow it to set for 5 to 20 minutes, depending on the depth of stain color desired.

Wipe this coat off lightly with a clean, absorbent cloth, wiping with the grain. If a richer color is desired, apply a second coat according to directions. Allow the stain coats to dry for at least 8 hours before applying the final clear finish.

At least two coats of a clear finish,

THE INCOMPARABLE English countryside, extolled in song and verse down through the centuries, has set the design theme for Thomasville's new collection, aptly named Country Manor. This broad collection evokes the quiet elegance of a bygone era, a period when the distinctive English style was evolving. Country motifs, Tudor turnings, deeply framed moldings and overlays of early English paneling, rich carvings slightly worn away, leaded glass and gothic tracery effects all tell of a glorious English past. Country Manor is on display at Schneller Furniture, downtown Arlington Heights.

FOUR SEASONS Rattan Furniture, Inc. suggests an oriental flavor for the dining room. This oak and rattan suite features popular scorched finish and Mica table top. Notable features of the Chinese styling on the four-chair dining ensemble are the slant back with cane center panel and heavy hardware yet modern cushioned comfort of the seating — accents that blend easily with many other formal styles of furniture.

Dining room shortcut

Putting your money into the home furnishing item which will make the biggest impression is one of the "secrets" of decorating. The dining-room lends itself to this clever shortcut even more so than other rooms of the house.

Be inclined to spend a little extra on an eye-catching chandelier that will be admired and will become the center of attention. Its twinkling lights can magically transform — even glamorize — your other furniture. And a new chandelier often is the lowest cost and easiest way to improve the look of a room.

Don't be afraid of size either when making your selection. Today's average 9x11-foot room can take a chandelier with a 24 to 28-inch diameter. Even if your breakfast or dining-table is only a 44-inch round, it usually will need a 24-inch chandelier to achieve the correct sense of proportion. Be sure to hang this important piece of furnishing close enough to the table. It should be at eye level when a person enters the room. A good measure is about 30 to 36 inches from the top of the table.

Is mattress ready to retire

That beautifully furnished and decorated bedroom of yours can be a flop as a sleep-inducer. What you sleep on is a greater contributing factor than you think. A mattress that is too old, or too small, or too soft is a sleep detractor. An old mattress can be too lumpy. A too small one doesn't give you room to stretch and turn. A soft mattress sags with too little support.

How can you tell when your mattress is ready for retirement? The National Association of Bedding Manufacturers has developed a simple examination you can perform.

First, consider age. When did you purchase your present bed? Was it a hand-me-down? Did you buy it in your newlywed days when your budget didn't permit quality bedding? Look first at the cover. If it is faded or ripped or torn or if there are hanging threads, your mattress has probably had too many birthdays.

Has the surface of the mattress become lumpy? Sit on the edge; when you get up does the vertical border seem reluctant to spring back into shape? These are sure signs of advanced age.

Now, let's talk about size. There should be plenty of length for you and your pillow and some room between your feet and the end of the mattress when you're fully stretched out. If not, your mattress isn't providing the space required for satisfactory sleep.

Width is important, too. In an old-fashioned double bed, two adults each have about as much sleeping width as they would in a baby crib.

Since the measurements for the old double bed were set a hundred years ago, men have added more than three inches in height and an average of 26 pounds. Women, too, have grown three inches and added 14 pounds. Yet, these bigger Americans insist on sleeping in a bed designed for their 19th Century ancestors.

Movement is restricted in a too small bed. Sleep research shows that sleepers move frequently and need room to shift position or turn over unhampered. Sleepers have been found to move an average of 40 to 60 times a night — with as many as 12 full body turns — and need space to keep from bumping or awakening each other.

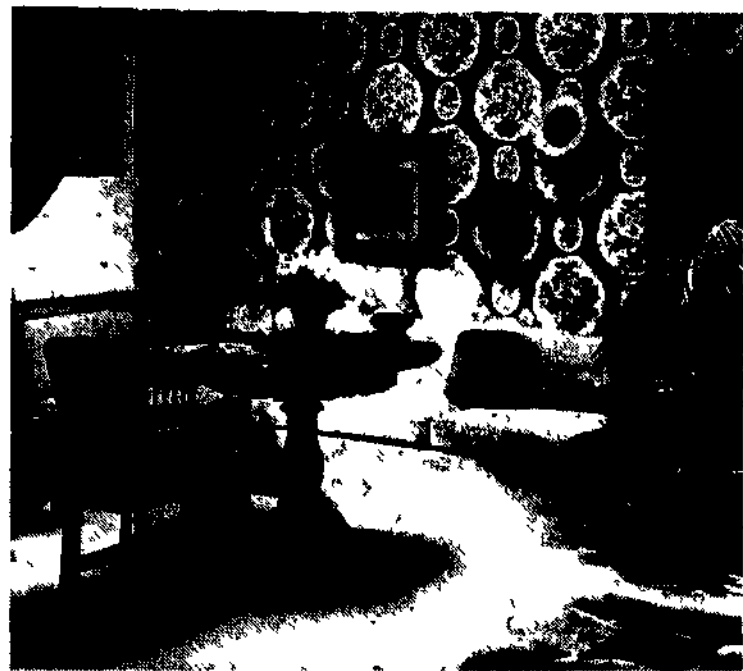

A good mattress gives firm support at vital pressure points and keeps the spine straight. Does yours? Is the surface soft enough to cradle the body and soothe tired muscles? It is the combination of firm support and surface softness that produces a restful, and healthful, night's sleep.

Lie down on your old mattress and turn from side to side. Is there a valley in the center into which both sleepers roll, colliding with each other and interrupting sleep? Can you roll all the way to the edge without the borders collapsing, dumping you onto the floor? Quality mattresses with reinforced borders give you every inch of sleeping width you pay for.

A final step: look at the foundation (the boxspring). Is it sagging at the center? Is the underlining torn away? Is it beginning to bulge outward along the borders?

After this critical examination of your mattress and foundation, you have probably reached the conclusion that it's time to shop for a new set. To aid you in selecting a set that best fits your needs, the National Association of Bedding Manufacturers has prepared a 20-page book, "A Guide to the Wise Purchase of Mattresses and Foundations."

This colorful guide tells you what to look for when you shop for a quality mattress set. It's available by sending 50 cents to NAAB; Box 1844; New York, N.Y. 10001.

THIS BEAUTIFUL room is shown in the book "Our Heritage Is Color," available free at Webber Paint Company, Arlington Heights. The wall-covering is a modern interpretation, by Imperial, of an 18th century Chinoiserie pattern, popular in Europe and the Colonies after trade with the Orient began.

CORNER PLUS... Trend Line Furniture's new concept in sectional seating. It all begins with a corner unit featuring solid oak frame in a handsome chevron design. From there it can grow into a multitude of seating arrangements — complete with upholstered lamp tables with solid oak tops and reversible cushioned ottomans. Shown in an attractive tie-dyed cotton blended velvet fabric in earthy tones which complements the oak background from all angles.

Give dog Bicentennial home

Liven up your repainting job this spring — to the tune of the red, white and blue. Give your dog a Bicentennial home!

Prepare the surface thoroughly before you begin painting. Make sure it is clean and dry. First, scrape and sand all loose and flaking paint. Sand spots over and around nail heads also, to rid them of rust. Then, remove the dust with a cloth or dry brush. Apply a rust-inhibitor primer to seal the nail heads. The last step is to prime the spots where scraping and sanding have exposed the bare wood.

With a quality paint and paint brush, paint the two sides of your doghouse white. Start at the top and paint down. After the sides dry completely, stencil in 1776 on one side and 1976 on the other side. Using masking tape or your stencil sheets, cover all areas outside of the numbers and spray paint them a bright red. When the paint feels tacky (not quite dry) remove the tape or stencils. Over the door, stencil in stars in a decorative pattern and paint blue.

For variations, you can paint the numbers on one side red and the numbers on the other side blue. A time consuming but more colorful tip is to paint one half of each letter red and the other half of each letter blue.

FROM: PETERSEN Interiors, Arlington Heights, "Modular" storage furniture is becoming more and more popular with "shrinking" bedroom sizes. They fill in those unused corners, make the most of your available space. This system also has optional lighted shelves which mount on the chests to give dramatic lighting and extra storage. See this and many other modular storage systems at Petersen Interiors (The Designer's Shop) in Arlington Heights.

First aid for furniture

That scratch of mysterious origin? The burned surface from a hot serving tray? Or the white spot from spilled drinks? Your occasional furniture sometimes needs first aid. And spring fix-up season is the ideal time to do it.

Here are some fix-up suggestions: Scratches. A lemon wedge rubbed across a mark just could remove it altogether.

A child's crayon can hide a blemish. Choose a color close to the original stain, draw along the scratch, rub in wax with your finger. Other blemish-hiders: shoe polish, nut meats, linseed oil, iodine, and felt tip pens.

For more serious scratches that actually penetrate the surface, use a shellac stick — available at any hardware store. Select one that matches the finish of the damaged piece. Melt the stick over alcohol flame (it leaves no carbon trace). Apply molten shellac with pallet knife.

Burns. Use sharp curved-blade knife to scrape away charred material. When you reach solid wood, smooth area with sandpaper or steel wool. Clean away debris and stain. Use stick shellac to build up burn hole that results from scraping.

White spots. Rub mixture of fine abrasive and lubricant along wood grain. Fine steel wool, powdered pumice, rottenstone, cigar ashes, table salt, sink scouring powder qualify as abrasives. Possible lubricants: machine or linseed oil, olive oil, mayonnaise, lard, cooking oil, salad oil, petroleum jelly paste wax.

If you know the white spot is from water, place clean ink blotter over it and press on blotter with warm (not hot) iron. If spot's from alcohol, wipe with ammonia-damp rag. (Rag should be almost dry.)

Surface dents. Place wet pad over dent and press on it with hot iron. Moisture will penetrate wood and cause it to swell, removing dent.

Cracking and checking. Apply paste wax with fine steel wool. Rub gently with grain and buff immediately.

Candle Wax. Hold ice cube against wax to make it brittle. Chip it away with your fingernails or a spatula. Another approach: place ink blotter over wax and apply warm iron. Keep moving blotter so iron doesn't remelt wax.

PLANNING the interior landscape for your available light and space is the key to successful plant care. The plant grouping pictured is ideal for those problem low-light areas. The grape ivy basket, with supplemented light from a grow bulb in the hanging lamp, will thrive forever in a poorly-lit corner. The plumele honorei, dieffenbachia and Chinese evergreen are colorful, decorative accents to brighten any dull area. From Interior Landscapes, newly opened at 23 W. Thoughts on a Mattress A one act play.

Time: 11:30 P.M.

Place: Someone's bedroom.

Mabel: John, are you awake?

John: Naturally I'm awake. Who could sleep on this mattress?

Mabel: My right arm is paralyzed.

John: Then sleep on your left arm.

Mabel: I can't keep turning over every five minutes. Why did you buy a mattress like this?

John: The doctor said I needed an Orthopedic mattress for my back.

Mabel: Is that why it took you an hour to stand up this morning?

John: The salesman said this is the firmest Orthopedic type mattress made—it's supposed to be the best—I paid enough for it.

Mabel: Why didn't you buy a couple of boards and save all that money?

John: Don't be funny—all the mattress ads say this is what you are supposed to sleep on.

Mabel: Why didn't you go to the Schaumburg Mattress Factory?

John: That's where Marge and Hank got their bed last month and she said they sleep like babies now. Why don't you go right now?

Mabel: Then where are you going now?

John: I'm going to sleep on the floor—it's softer.

Mabel: Move over—you had all the floor last night.

A "SNUG AND warm" effect was wanted in this bay. It's achieved by the repeated use of a small patterned "friendly" fabric. The top tier of curtains and sheers is hung on a cut-to-measure double curtain rod and the lower tier on a cut-to-measure single curtain rod. This style was suggested by Arlington Drapery, a division of Arlington Carpet & Tile, Arlington Market, Arlington Heights.

COUNTRY ENGLISH at its best is seen in this dining room with its solid ash, white oak and English brown oak veneered table and upholstered chairs of solid ash. They are from Henredon's "Folie Twelve" collection.

Color it bright

The "contemporary color" look, with its emphasis on color for the sake of color, provides an inexpensive way to unite antiques, junk shop finds and attic hand-me-downs, with new furnishings.

Showing the way are bold geometrics and brilliant combinations of primary colors: sun yellow, blues, greens, and red with a dash of black.

Decorate apartment within limits

Oh, the limits of apartment living: stark white walls with no architectural interest; small rooms that must accommodate entertaining as well as day-to-day living; windows that offer lots of light and a ringside seat for the neighbors, and never, but never enough closet space. Typical decorating problems all, but with a little ingenuity, not unresolvable.

A good starting point in decorating, whether in an apartment or house, is to create a focal point of interest.

In many apartments that have neither dramatic views or a striking element like a fireplace, this center of interest must be created. It might be an imposing piece of furniture, a spectacular piece of artwork or simply a clever arrangement of furnishings.

An around-the-corner grouping of seating pieces, for example, will direct visual attention into the main conversation area — a natural center of interest.

Nothing helps eke out the most use from apartment-size spaces like dual-purpose furniture. One of the newest ideas in this category is a matching convertible sofa and loveseat. The two pieces give the effect of a "seating pit" for plenty of comfortable living and seating for guests. When the sofa is pulled out to a bed, the living room becomes a guest room.

But oh, those bland, white walls, those small windows facing into another building. Although most landlords strictly forbid wallpaper, pattern interest can be achieved with fabrics. To assure simple removal, strips of molding should be nailed around the edges of the walls and the fabric stapled to the molding.

The challenge of apartment windows is to let in the light and still provide privacy. One solution is shutters used on the lower portion of the window only. Full-length sheer draperies will also do the trick.

The trick to easing the apartment closet squeeze? Supplement them with furnishings chosen for storage capabilities, as well as good looks: armchairs that stow clothing or even stereo equipment; hutches and sideboards for linens, even a hat rack helps.

Finally, apartments accommodate a lot of living in small spaces, so durability and easy-care are keys to success, and upholstery fabrics and carpeting of stain-resistant, man-made fibers are a special boon.

Reserve play area for children

There's no question that small children, much as we may love them, can be hard on both a home and its furnishings.

How to keep a living room or family room from becoming a "disaster area" when it's too cold, too wet, or too dark for outdoor play is a real challenge, agrees home service advisor Pauline Church.

The answer is to make sure children have some indoor area reserved and ready to accommodate their activities. While the child's own room may seem like an obvious choice for such a play area, it's not always the best solution, according to Ms. Church.

"Until they're old enough to keep themselves entertained longer than 10 minutes at a time, smaller children are usually happier — and better off — within earshot of one or both parents," she pointed out.

This is why she suggests planning for some play space in a breakfast room, utility room, or first floor family room, if at all possible.

Easy maintenance should be high on the list of requirements for outfitting such an area. All surfaces should be washable, for example, not only to cut cleaning time, but to safeguard children's health as well.

For the floor, Ms. Church suggests either utility-type carpeting or a tough resilient covering plus a washable area rug with non-skid backing. A rug is important, she emphasized, to protect against chills when children play on the floor. And the non-skid feature is a must, to prevent falls and needless injuries to youngsters, and adults, too.

PANEL SHIRVAN: The boldness of the Caucasian designs is very apparent in this pattern from Karastan's new Oriental style rug collection called "Eastern Primitives." Rust, blue and ivory tones are mixed in this primitive tribal design featuring stylized motifs of peacocks, tarantulas, trees and other objects of nature plus strong geometrics in the borders. How well these primitive patterns live with modern furnishings is shown in this contemporary setting which includes a brick red tone in the couch and walls. All furnishings are from Selig, including the super-comfortable chair and ottoman. Karastan's Eastern Primitives are woven of pure wool face and fringed on the ends. The 6 foot by 9 foot size will retail for $275. Available at Padian Rug in downtown Arlington Heights.

THIS SERVING cart/bar from Peters-Revington Furniture's Plaza 9 Collection mixes a rich walnut finish with V-matched select walnut veneers and chrome accents — strictly in a new modern mood. Perfectly matched Formica tops in a walnut finish adds another practical note to this smaller-scaled entertaining piece — complete with two serving shelves and interior storage space.

SO VERY ELEGANT in crescent shape styling is this new sofa with matching love seat by Flexsteel Industries. Both have the graceful channel roll arms, loose pillow backs and loose, reversible seat cushions. Traditional in mood, the tailoring on sofa, love seat and companion chairs includes the popular single welt seam on seat cushions and kick pleating along the bases. Ideal to use in combination as shown, sofas and matching love seats can also be used in U or L shaped arrangements to visually expand smaller rooms.

TOTAL LIVING. "Go 'N Up" modular units by Lea Industries represent the epitome of multi-functional furnishings... just right for any living center in the home. Their outstanding design is not the only contemporary facet of "Go 'N Up." Their materials are also brand new — MCP melamine components by Formica. Stronger than wood or vinyl, MCP's prolactive properties make the units ultra-durable and care a breeze. They wipe clean with a damp cloth, resist warping, heat, stains and the wear and tear of an active family. Ideal for apartment or condominium dwellers, these vertical space-savers offer maximum storage in a minimum of space.

AN EXAMPLE of a charming country chair done in a crown pattern. There are many styles and designs of furniture, as well as unusual accessories, available at Something Special, with locations in Arlington Heights and Barrington.

Accent indoors with accessories

"Accessories are like fingerprints, they're very individual, very personal and no two people have the same ones." According to Elroy Edson, ASID, they're a signature that sets your home apart from every other one.

Edson, who is a designer with a manufacturer of contemporary upholstered furniture, feels that you, rather than a designer, should pick the accessories for your home. To help make the proper selection, he gives the following guidelines:

1. Plants belong in every room, no matter what the period, no matter how much sunshine! There are plants, like fern, that are typical of traditional interiors, and those like cacti that give sculptural qualities to modern.

Edson, who uses plants in every room he designs, feels that they're especially important in temperate climates, as a way of easing the seasonal changes. By keeping greenery indoors — even when there is none outside — gives welcome cheer and a promise of spring during the cold winter months.

2. If you have a green thumb and love plants, they're the perfect way to plan a color scheme for your living room. Pick a fabric or rug or wall covering that uses green so the plants will be completely at home with your color palette. Then the plants, green throw pillows and perhaps lamp bases become the accent color in the room. Another color scheme Edson suggests is a monochromatic one, where green plants and other accessories are the brilliant counterpoint to just one other color in the room.

3. Everyone is a collector — be it shells, eggs, candle holders, books, medals or china. These collections should be grouped together to form a family of objects, rather than scattered about on walls and table tops and shelves. Edson, who believes that personal photos of family and friends should be restricted to the private bedrooms of the home, feels that accessories of all periods go together no matter what period the room's decor. It's these personal touches of an eighteenth-century brass candlestick next to a chunky glass modern one and a spooned wooden renaissance candle that makes your home so strikingly different than anyone else's.

4. Choose furniture that will accommodate your accessories. Book lovers will, of course, select lengths of shelfspace. But collectors of other objects will also find furniture that suits their purpose.

For those with traditional furnishings, there is the classic lidded, glass-topped table for keeping treasures out-of-the-way but always in view. Or obelisk-shaped etageres that spotlight collections.

Modernists, too, will find furniture that groups their collections. For example, a chrome-and-glass console table with shelves can be clustered with souvenirs. Or a handsome wicker coffee table that's commodious enough to take a try or shells. Or, perhaps a lofty open etagere that adds interest to a dining area but needs only a few inches of space.

5. Accessories should be varied throughout the year. Edson suggests that serving accessories can come down from the kitchen shelves and change the entire mood of a room. A salad bowl, for example, holds balls of yarn, while a soup tureen serves as a vase for flowers, and a breadbasket is a summertime refreshment for tiny pots of plants on the living room table. In that way, your home is constantly changing, constantly new, as accessories move from place to place, changing their relationship with the other furnishings in the room.

THE WETHERSFIELD Lowboy, a part of Statton Furniture Company's collection to honor the nation's Bicentennial and its own 50th year, is worked in solid cherry in low-shine Oxford antique cherry finish. The gracefully slender qualities and intricate fan carving are indicative of the Connecticut Queen Anne style, particularly in the Wethersfield area. Suggested by interior designers for placement in foyer, living room, bedroom, or upstairs hallway, it can show off a lovely vase or statuary and, in addition, has drawer space for storage.

CALIFORNIA FIESTA — An aristocratic Spanish grouping in redwood by John Hancock. Note the detailed edging featured on refectory table, benches, and coffee table. It's Hancock's exclusive Custom-Crafted Styling — the look of handcrafted elegance. Club chair and ottoman offer an irresistible invitation for solid, sit-back, feet-up lounging. All pieces are treated with the new protective Climagard — a baked-in polymeric elastomer stain that assures greater uniformity and durability of rich, cinnamon brown color.

LEAVE THE DRIVING to Robert's Textile Center. Robert Byers, owner of Robert's Textile Center in Mt. Prospect, shows off his motor home which is equipped with drapery samples, window shades and window treatments. It's easy to find what you want and it's convenient — just call the store for an appointment and Byers will bring his self-contained motor home complete with samples to your door.

CHROMCRAFT'S NEW Centurian collection is a totally new approach to leisure living furnishings. New elements include the blending of bold wood turnings with chrome collars and glass. This fresh modern mood also includes solid oak table tops or a natural-looking rustic elm laminate. Coordinated lounge and dining chairs are covered in a handsome wide wale cotton corduroy in earthy tones. Even the occasional tables carry out this same theme. New pieces added to the Centurian Collection include practical ottoman on casters, etagere, serving cabinet, bar and stools, sofa table and a lower-styled party table and chairs.

PLAIDS AND PRINTS can be coordinated with discretion and imagination. The chairs and table are upholstered in shades of gray and charcoal, the wallcovering is a charcoal and silver textured look and the drapery print is in gray, charcoal and an accent color of deep gold. Use of the drapery fabric as a wallhanging is one way to carry through a bold print and not have it dominate an entire room. All from Final Touch, Ltd. Interior Design Studio in downtown Arlington Heights.

AUTHENTIC stained glass and lead tiffany lamps will surely brighten any room. One of many that will be on display at Bright Lights in the Plaza Verde Shopping Center in Buffalo Grove during the store's grand opening May 1.

Cat burglar, kidnap suspect, same man

by JOHN MAES

A former Elk Grove Village resident, the subject of a nationwide manhunt for the kidnappings of a Glencoe woman and a California woman earlier this month, is the same man known as the "Northwest suburban cat burglar" who terrorized dozens of area residents in 1974.

Authorities said they are seeking Robert Edward Williams Jr., 23, formerly of 29 Grange Pl., Elk Grove Village. Williams is suspected of the two abductions and possibly a third that occurred April 12 in the Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has said Williams' fingerprints have been found on the autos belonging to both abduction victims, Muriel Fulton of north suburban Glencoe, and Evelyn Axlerod of Sherman Oaks, Calif.

THE FBI ALSO said blood stains found in Mrs. Axlerod's car and those found on a spent bullet casing in the auto match her blood type. Mrs. Axlerod's abandoned auto was found April 12 by police in Rolling Meadows. Police fear the woman has been slain.

Williams has been listed as an escapee from a Chicago prison work release center since March 1, about three weeks before he was due to be paroled following his conviction for a string of burglaries in 1974 in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Mount Prospect police arrested Williams in June 1974, shortly after he burglarized an apartment at 1101 Hunt Club Dr. An investigation later tied Williams to a number of home and apartment burglaries in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Williams specialized in burglarizing apartments and stealing purses and wallets containing cash, often entering while residents slept, police said.

IN ONE INSTANCE, Williams successfully burglarized an Elk Grove Village apartment where 12 persons and a dog were sleeping.

Another time, an Elk Grove Village man told police he was awakened by a noise in the middle of the night and found a man kneeling at the foot of his bed. The burglar, realizing he had been spotted, bolted from the bedroom and out the front door, escaping with the resident's wallet.

Police said the wallet burglary was the first of 22 Elk Grove Village burglaries in which the burglar had been spotted.

Elk Grove Village police in 1974 said physical evidence and questioning linked Williams to 22 burglaries and attempts in the village in a span of seven weeks.

SIX BURGLARIES occurred in one apartment complex, the Eagles on Tonne Road in Elk Grove Village, and were attributed by police to Williams.

Of a string of burglary charges later brought against Williams, four involved break-ins to the Huntington Commons complex, Mount Prospect.

Elk Grove Village police Lt. William Kohnke said Williams' identity as the kidnap suspect came to light three days ago.

Kohnke said Patrolman Jeff Jenkins, son of Police Chief Harry Jenkins, saw a composite sketch of Mrs. Fulton's kidnaper on the department's bulletin board, noticing it was similar to Williams' picture.

"IT JUST STRUCK a familiar note

with him," Kohnke said. Jenkins alerted local investigators to the similarity and a file containing Williams' photo and fingerprints were later turned over to Glencoe police.

A clerk at Globe Hoppers, a store at Woodfield Shopping Center, Thursday identified Williams as the same man who attempted to rob the store April 12, Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy said.

Schaumburg police suspect Williams abducted an Itasca woman from the parking lot of the center the same day. Mrs. Dale C. Fridlund was forced at gunpoint to drive to Wood Dale where she was released unharmed. The kidnaper stole her car, which has not been found. Conroy said police expect to show Mrs. Fridlund a photo of Williams within the next several days.

Mike Klein's people

Beer can buff wants containers not contents

Some people are continually saying they're bored, that life just does not mean anything.

You can generally pick out those people easily. When they describe weekend plans, the discussion begins with a yawn and ends with a nap.

This behavior is not for Bill Wishart. His mother, Virginia, says that Bill is always into something.

Bill's day starts each morning. He slides out of bed, places one soft contact lens in each eye and hustles off to learn eighth grade at Iroquois Junior High School in Des Plaines.

There are dozens of ways to keep busy after school.

BILL LOVES sports. He wants to compete in athletics beginning next year at Maine West High School.

For his more creative moments, there's a set of drums which crowds one corner of his bedroom. And then there are the beer cans. Hundreds and hundreds of beer cans.

It all began about three years ago with Jim Holm, Bill's good friend from down the street who saved cans. Bill thought that might be interesting, even though his mother was not entirely convinced.

Virginia Wishart thought, "Oh, my God, beer cans! He's going into dumps... how unsanitary! Who needs them?"

Bill was not deterred.

"We started by going to flea markets, looking for cans, trading and buying the good cans," said Bill.

"Then we joined a few clubs and saw what they wanted in to trade cans. When you're a beginner..."

Boy, 15, killed when commuter train hits bike

by DIANE MERMIGAS

A 15-year-old Des Plaines youth was killed early Thursday when he was struck by a Chicago and North Western Ry. train while crossing an unguarded stretch of track on his bicycle.

Ronald P. Bahr, 444 N. Sixth Ave., was seen by the train engineer sitting on his bike next to the tracks at Seegers Road and Northwest Highway, about 100 yards east of the Cumberland station, shortly before he was struck by the westbound train at 7 a.m., said Des Plaines Patrolman Ronald Diehl.

The train, traveling about 45 m.p.h., was unable to make an emergency stop before striking the boy "who apparently ignored the warnings sounded by the engineer," Diehl said.

BAHR WAS APPARENTLY on his way to school at Maine West High School, Des Plaines, where he was a junior. He was killed instantly and was taken to Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, Diehl said.

Bahr is survived by his parents, Donald and Irene, and two brothers, David and Steven.

The train, headed into Mount Prospect on the southern tracks, was delayed about 40 minutes and no passengers were injured during the emergency stop, Diehl said.

Morning rush-hour traffic reportedly was backed up for a while on Golf and Wolf roads which intersect just west of where the accident occurred.

THE GRAVEL AND dirt pathway leading upward to the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks at Seegers Road is in an older, residential area of Des Plaines and directly faces Pace Auto, 600 E. Northwest Hwy.

Ronald P. Bahr

Mel Ahrens, a sales manager at the dealership, said he was not around at the time of the accident, but often sees children on bicycles crossing the tracks at that point.

The gravel pathway is lined on both sides by high grass and shrubs, blinding the view of youngsters who ride their bikes there.

"You can't fence all of the railroad in, it's just impossible. And it's tragic when something like this happens," said James McDonald, public relations director for the Chicago and North Western Ry.

"If residents would only try and police these kind of pathways themselves and keep the children away from the tracks, there'd be less of a chance of this happening. We do all that we can to prevent it," he said.

Elderly remember panic, fear of 1918 flu epidemic

by KURT BAER

(Last of a three-part series)

For those old enough to remember, the 1918 flu epidemic was a fearsome thing.

"One morning we sat at the window and counted 18 funerals pass our house before noon," 81-year-old Olga Bardinet recalled Thursday in her room at the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, Arlington Heights.

Her neighbor, 70-year-old Esther Rauscher, also has vivid memories of the influenza attack that killed 548,000 persons in the United States, 21 million worldwide.

"We lived in Bellwood and there was only one doctor for the area and he just couldn't take care of all the cases. My dad was a pastor, and he would go call on the people and pass out medicine," she said.

"MY MOTHER MADE asafetida bags that people wore around their neck. Quite a few died, although I don't know how many. (I was only 12 years old at the time.) Dad had to take care of the funerals. The people had to have tickets, pieces of paper, that said they could be allowed in to the funeral. We tried to do the best we could," Esther Rauscher remembers.

Health officials fear that a strain of so-called swine influenza isolated in February at Fort Dix, N.J., is similar to the killer 1918 flu. A national vaccination program is planned this summer and fall to head off another possible epidemic.

But in 1918 there was no vaccine. Influenza was not even known as a virus. Sulphur drugs and quinine were used to combat the disease, according to those who remember. And certain preventive measures sound almost primitive by contemporary standards.

MARTHA REITER, 78, remembers that the doctor told her to put camphor in her nostrils as a way to keep out flu germs. And 82-year-old Carl Schmiedke recalls the words of his doctor.

"We didn't have (paper) tissues then. And the doctor told us, 'Don't reuse handkerchiefs. Use old rags. Then wrap them up in newspaper and burn them.'"

World health organizations around the world have been waiting for several years for evidence of a major shift in the flu bug — a signal that another epidemic may be on the way.

For the first time in history, it looks as though there will be time to take steps against a new flu, Dr. Edwin Kilbourne, head of the nation's first flu task force, told President Gerald Ford. The result is the $135 million national immunization plan.

Four drug companies already have begun mass production of what will amount to 200 million doses of vaccine — each about one-half cubic centimeter of clear liquid.

MANY OF THE INJECTIONS will be given by a high-pressure gun that forces the shot through the skin at very high pressure. This painless method of immunization eliminates

Goll elected president of Dist. 207 board

Donald Goll has been elected president of the High School Dist. 207 Board of Education by a 6-to-1 vote.

Thomas Rueckert, who was elected to the board April 16, nominated Robert Cornelisen for the position and voted against Goll during Monday night's board meeting.

Goll, 115 Columbia, Park Ridge, has served on the board for two years and is beginning the third year of a 3-year term.

Rueckert, Anne Evans and Arlynn Warmack also were seated to the new board Monday following the canvassing of votes in the election. Mrs. Evans was reelected to the board for a 3-year term and Rueckert and Mrs. Warmack are beginning their first year on the board.

THE BOARD ALSO NAMED Donald Kenney as assistant superintendent for business to replace Harold Markworth, current business manager retiring in June.

Kenney currently is the assistant superintendent for business affairs and treasurer for Unit School Dist. 1 in Charleston, Ill. He has held the position for three years and was business manager for the Barrington schools for six years.

The board also appointed Richard Carlini as athletic director and chairman of the boys' physical education department at Maine West High School beginning next fall. He will replace Kenneth Olson who is retiring in June.

Carlini has been a physical education teacher in Dist. 207 for 26 years and currently is the varsity wrestling coach.

County mulls courts facility in area

by JOE SWICKARD

A site near Arlington Park Race Track is under consideration by Cook County officials as a Circuit Court mini-center, the Herald has learned.

Officials of Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights are actively promoting the site, 10 acres of vacant land at the southwest corner of Euclid Avenue and Wilke Road in Rolling Meadows.

The property is owned by the Madison Square Garden Corp., owners of the race track-Arlington Park Hilton Hotel complex.

COUNTY OFFICIALS said it is one of five or six possible locations in the area worthy of a "second look." About 20 possible locations were originally considered by the county last August and September.

Donald O'Connell, administrative director of the Circuit Court, said the sites will be reconsidered "within the next few weeks or about 30 days."

However, O'Connell said any locations being studied are "tentative" now and subject to final approval by the Cook County Board of Commissioners.

Arlington Heights Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the Rolling Meadows site is "perfect."

"We've been months now," Hanson said.

JOINING WITH Hanson have been Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer and Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, he said. Meyer and Ryan were not available for comment Thursday.

Advocates of the Rolling Meadows site say it is large enough to accommodate the building and necessary parking facilities in addition to its central location in the area and access by several major highways and the Chicago and North Western Ry. However, it is smaller than sites for two similar facilities, O'Connell said.

A court facility would be similar to ones planned in Maywood and Markham, he said.

If those plans were followed in the Northwest suburban facility, it would have about six to 10 court rooms and offices to house county and court clerks, probation officers and assistant state's attorneys. The courts would be able to handle probate and divorce actions in addition to criminal and traffic cases now dealt with in the branch courts, such as the one in the Arlington Heights municipal building.

DESPITE CONCERNS in some quarters that the county board may be hesitant about building another facility soon, O'Connell said plans for one in the area are "absolutely" still alive.

"We need more court space. We need more court space in northern Cook County. But when this might come to fruition, I really couldn't say," O'Connell said.

Among staunch supporters for enlarged court facilities have been local police officials. They have said recently in the past that their men lose time traveling to the branches, which are often overcrowded.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case said, "I have no objection to it here. Any court facility moving closer to being a centralized location that would save our men time and travel, I would have no objections to."

ARLINGTON Heights Police Capt. Maurice J. English said, "It's (a) logical (location). It has the area for parking, it's centrally located, and it would be accessible. The site has a great deal of potential."

If the court facility is built, it might figure into a suggested reorganization of the district court boundaries. One suggested realignment calls for using the Tri-State Tollway as an east-west border, which would place most Northwest suburbs within the proposed facility's jurisdiction.

Circuit Court Judge Harold Sullivan, presiding judge of the 2nd District, said he would favor a new facility, but said "the big problem" is whether the county board will be able to continue to provide funds for the facility.

O'Connell said the inspection of the five or six sites still under consideration will begin after construction of the Markham facility is underway. He said he could not speculate when a final decision might be reached.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has said Williams' fingerprints have been found on the autos belonging to both abduction victims, Muriel Fulton of north suburban Glencoe, and Evelyn Axlerod of Sherman Oaks, Calif.

THE FBI ALSO said blood stains found in Mrs. Axlerod's car and those found on a spent bullet casing in the auto match her blood type. Mrs. Axlerod's abandoned auto was found April 12 by police in Rolling Meadows. Police fear the woman has been slain.

Williams has been listed as an escapee from a Chicago prison work release center since March 1, about three weeks before he was due to be paroled following his conviction for a string of burglaries in 1974 in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Mount Prospect police arrested Williams in June 1974, shortly after he burglarized an apartment at 1101 Hunt Club Dr. An investigation later tied Williams to a number of home and apartment burglaries in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Williams specialized in burglarizing apartments and stealing purses and wallets containing cash, often entering while residents slept, police said.

IN ONE INSTANCE, Williams successfully burglarized an Elk Grove Village apartment where 12 persons and a dog were sleeping.

Another time, an Elk Grove Village man told police he was awakened by a noise in the middle of the night and found a man kneeling at the foot of his bed. The burglar, realizing he had been spotted, bolted from the bedroom and out the front door, escaping with the resident's wallet.

Police said the wallet burglary was the first of 22 Elk Grove Village burglaries in which the burglar had been spotted.

Elk Grove Village police in 1974 said physical evidence and questioning linked Williams to 22 burglaries and attempts in the village in a span of seven weeks.

SIX BURGLARIES occurred in one apartment complex, the Eagles on Tonne Road in Elk Grove Village, and were attributed by police to Williams.

Of a string of burglary charges later brought against Williams, four involved break-ins to the Huntington Commons complex, Mount Prospect.

Elk Grove Village police Lt. William Kohnke said Williams' identity as the kidnap suspect came to light three days ago.

Kohnke said Patrolman Jeff Jenkins, son of Police Chief Harry Jenkins, saw a composite sketch of Mrs. Fulton's kidnaper on the department's bulletin board, noticing it was similar to Williams' picture.

"IT JUST STRUCK a familiar note

with him," Kohnke said. Jenkins alerted local investigators to the similarity and a file containing Williams' photo and fingerprints were later turned over to Glencoe police.

A clerk at Globe Hoppers, a store at Woodfield Shopping Center, Thursday identified Williams as the same man who attempted to rob the store April 12, Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy said.

Schaumburg police suspect Williams abducted an Itasca woman from the parking lot of the center the same day. Mrs. Dale C. Fridlund was forced at gunpoint to drive to Wood Dale where she was released unharmed. The kidnaper stole her car, which has not been found. Conroy said police expect to show Mrs. Fridlund a photo of Williams within the next several days.

Wooden decks at Whipple Tree OK'd by village

Wheeling officials will permit construction of wooden decks in the Whipple Tree Village mobile home park, 525 N. McHenry Rd., under a proposed mobile home ordinance.

Village officials last month said they would allow the wooden decks if Cook County officials did not object. County ordinance prohibits such structures in mobile home parks. Village Atty. John Burke Wednesday said Cook County Health Dept. officials will allow the decks if they are treated with a fire-resistant substance.

Wooden decks, porches and enclosed garages were among safety and building code violations cited by county health department officials during an inspection of Whipple Tree last year. Village officials have been meeting with Whipple Tree residents in an attempt to resolve the dispute over the structures.

THE VILLAGE is trying to find a solution because residents believed they were within the law when they built the decks and garages. Fast village administrations did not cite the residents for the violations.

The proposed village mobile home ordinance would allow the construction of enclosed garages only if they are detached, temporary and made of fire-resistant materials. There also must be a 10-foot space between the trailer and an enclosed garage. The ordinance also would require a 3-foot space between canopies.

Burke said residents with existing illegal structures will have 25 years to comply with the village ordinance.

Village officials said residents who have contracted to build structures that would be in violation of the county code should come to the village zoning board for a variation.

Burke said the county has no objections to the village's proposed ordinance.

Joey the Llama a favorite at area day camp

by LINDA PUNCH

Joey the Llama looks a little dazed as he wanders around the animal pen at Kelly's Day Camp in Wheeling.

After a peaceful winter, Joey is back at the grind of greeting children and taking handouts. He strolls around the pen, nudging humans, nibbling at corn and occasionally stopping to mutter a comment to passing adults.

Joey and his companions, including assorted goats, ponies and ducks, are a regular summer attraction at the day camp, 78 W. Hintz Rd. They serve not only as entertainment, but also as instructors in the camp's school program. The camp gets the animals from a Mundelein farmer who raises them as pets.

Elderly remember panic, fear of 1918 flu epidemic

by KURT BAER

(Last of a three-part series)

For those old enough to remember, the 1918 flu epidemic was a fearsome thing.

"One morning we sat at the window and counted 18 funerals pass our house before noon," 91-year-old Olga Bardinet recalled Thursday in her room at the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, Arlington Heights.

Her neighbor, 70-year-old Esther Rauscher, also has vivid memories of the influenza attack that killed 549,000 persons in the United States. 21 million worldwide.

"We lived in Bellwood and there was only one doctor for the area and he just couldn't take care of all the cases. My dad was a pastor, and he would go call on the people and pass out medicine," she said.

"MY MOTHER MADE asafetida bags that people wore around their neck. Quite a few died, although I don't know how many. (I was only 12 years old at the time.) Dad had to take care of the funerals. The people had to have tickets, pieces of paper, that said they could be allowed in to the funeral. We tried to do the best we could," Esther Rauscher remembers.

Health officials fear that a strain of so-called swine influenza isolated in February at Fort Dix, N.J., is similar to the killer 1918 flu. A national vaccination program is planned this summer and fall to head off another possible epidemic.

But in 1918 there was no vaccine. Influenza was not even known as a virus. Sulphur drugs and quinine were used to combat the disease, according to those who remember. And certain preventive measures sound almost primitive by contemporary standards.

MARTHA REITER, 78, remembers that the doctor told her to put camphor in her nostrils as a way to keep out flu germs. And 82-year-old Carl Schmidke recalls the words of his doctor.

"We didn't have (paper) tissues then. And the doctor told us, 'Don't reuse handkerchiefs. Use old rags. Then wrap them up in newspaper and burn them.'"

World health organizations around the world have been waiting for several years for evidence of a major shift in the flu bug — a signal that another epidemic may be on the way.

For the first time in history, it looks as though there will be time to take steps against a new flu, Dr. Edwin Kilbourne, head of the nation's first flu task force, told President Gerald Ford. The result is the $135 million national immunization plan.

Four drug companies already have begun mass production of what will amount to 200 million doses of vaccine — each about one-half cubic centimeter of clear liquid.

MANY OF THE INJECTIONS will be given by a high-pressure gun that forces the shot through the skin at very high pressure. This painless method of immunization eliminates said the animals are part of the school's social science program.

"It's interesting for the children to watch how the seasons affect the animals and their coats. It helps the children to be a little more aware of the world around them," she said.

Joey is a favorite of the youngsters and acts as an unofficial mascot for the camp. Robert Atterbury, operations director said the llama is often led around the campgrounds on a leash.

"The children are constantly stopping their games to pet him. They bring apples and pears and fruit from their lunches to feed him," Atterbury said.

ANOTHER POPULAR character is Billy the Pygmy Goat, who will arrive at the camp within the next few weeks.

"We aren't quite ready for him yet. He likes to belly out under the fence, and the pen isn't set to hold him yet," Atterbury said.

The day-camp will have an open house from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday for interested families.

Correction

An article in Wednesday's Herald incorrectly reported that Wheeling Trustee Otis L. Hedlund said Village Mgr. George Passolt will not be retained until his replacement is hired. Hedlund said Passolt is scheduled to leave April 30, but the board may decide to retain him until a new village manager is hired.

County mulls courts facility in area

by JOE SWICKARD

A site near Arlington Park Race Track is under consideration by Cook County officials as a Circuit Court mini-center, the Herald has learned.

Officials of Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights are actively promoting the site, 10 acres of vacant land at the southwest corner of Euclid Avenue and Wilke Road in Rolling Meadows.

The property is owned by the Madison Square Garden Corp., owners of the race track-Arlington Park Hilton Hotel complex.

COUNTY OFFICIALS said it is one of five or six possible locations in the area worthy of a "second look." About 20 possible locations were originally considered by the county last August and September.

Donald O'Connell, administrative director of the Circuit Court, said the sites will be reconsidered "within the next few weeks or about 30 days."

However, O'Connell said any locations being studied are "tentative" now and subject to final approval by the Cook County Board of Commissioners.

Arlington Heights Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the Rolling Meadows site is "perfect."

"We've been months now," Hanson said.

JOINING WITH Hanson have been Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer and Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, he said. Meyer and Ryan were not available for comment Thursday.

Advocates of the Rolling Meadows site say it is large enough to accommodate the building and necessary parking facilities in addition to its central location in the area and access by several major highways and the Chicago and North Western Ry. However, it is smaller than sites for two similar facilities, O'Connell said.

A court facility would be similar to ones planned in Maywood and Markham, he said.

If those plans were followed in the Northwest suburban facility, it would have about six to 10 court rooms and offices to house county and court clerks, probation officers and assistant state's attorneys. The courts would be able to handle probate and divorce actions in addition to criminal and traffic cases now dealt with in the branch courts, such as the one in the Arlington Heights municipal building.

DESPITE CONCERNS in some quarters that the county board may be hesitant about building another facility soon, O'Connell said plans for one in the area are "absolutely" still alive.

"We need more court space. We need more court space in northern Cook County. But when this might come to fruition, I really couldn't say," O'Connell said.

Among staunch supporters for enlarged court facilities have been local police officials. They have said lately in the past that their men lose time traveling to the branches, which are often overcrowded.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case said, "I have no objection to it here. Any court facility moving closer to being a centralized location that would save our men time and travel, I would have no objections to."

ARLINGTON Heights Police Capt. Maurice J. English said, "It's (a) logical (location). It has the area for parking, it's centrally located, and it would be accessible. The site has a great deal of potential."

If the court facility is built, it might figure into a suggested reorganization of the district court boundaries. One suggested realignment calls for using the Tri-State Tollway as an east-west border, which would place most Northwest suburbs within the proposed facility's jurisdiction.

Circuit Court Judge Harold Sullivan, presiding judge of the 2nd District, said he would favor a new facility, but said "the big problem" is whether the county board will be able to continue to provide funds for the facility.

O'Connell said the inspection of the five or six sites still under consideration will begin after construction of the Markham facility is underway. He said he could not speculate when a final decision might be reached.

Cat burglar, kidnap suspect, same man

by JOHN MAES

A former Elk Grove Village resident, the subject of a nationwide manhunt for the kidnappings of a Glencoe woman and a California woman earlier this month, is the same man known as the "Northwest suburban cat burglar" who terrorized dozens of area residents in 1974.

Authorities said they are seeking Robert Edward Williams Jr., 23, formerly of 29 Grange Pl., Elk Grove Village. Williams is suspected of the two abductions and possibly a third that occurred April 12 in the Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has said Williams' fingerprints have been found on the autos belonging to both abduction victims, Muriel Fulton of north suburban Glencoe, and Evelyn Axlerod of Sherman Oaks, Calif.

THE FBI ALSO said blood stains found on a spent bullet casing in the auto match her blood type. Mrs. Axlerod's abandoned auto was found April 12 by police in Rolling Meadows. Police fear the woman has been slain.

Williams has been listed as an escapee from a Chicago prison work release center since March 1, about three weeks before he was due to be paroled following his conviction for a string of burglaries in 1974 in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Mount Prospect police arrested Williams in June 1974, shortly after he burglarized an apartment at 1101 Hunt Club Dr. An investigation later tied Williams to a number of home and apartment burglaries in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Another time, an Elk Grove Village man told police he was awakened by a noise in the middle of the night and found a man kneeling at the foot of his bed. The burglar, realizing he had been spotted, bolted from the bedroom and out the front door, escaping with the resident's wallet.

Police said the wallet burglary was the first of 22 Elk Grove Village burglaries in which the burglar had been spotted.

May 8 park vote draws protests from residents

The Buffalo Grove Park District's plans for a May 8 referendum met with opposition Thursday from several residents who charged the plans were incomplete and said voters need more time to study the referendum proposal.

Plan Comr. Stephen Goldspiel, one of six residents at the park district meeting, presented a statement from the plan commission that criticized the lack of a "long-range park development plan."

The park district referendum asks for acquisition of new parks, development of existing property and an increase in the operational and recreation budgets.

ALSO INCLUDED is a request to increase the debt limit to a 5 per cent maximum of the value of taxable property in the district. The current rate is 2.5 per cent.

The resulting tax increase for a home with an equalized assessed valuation of $10,000 would be approximately $20.50, said Stanley Crosland, director of parks and recreation.

The park district attorney and bond consultant were unable to attend Thursday's meeting and a lack of specific facts and figures on the referendum proposals prompted requests from the audience for more time to consider the plans.

"With a proposal of this size you should have more planning than two weeks before the referendum election," Goldspiel said. "It just seems very precipitous."

MICHAEL MULLEN, a representative from the Strathmore Grove Homeowners' Assn., said he wanted more time to meet with neighbors and discuss the referendum's impact on the subdivision.

Park Comr. Dede Armstrong said the district bond consultant is working on the specific tax impact and bond figures. She said a "complete package" would be available the week of the referendum. She also said a brochure would be prepared and made available at meetings with parent-teacher organizations and other community groups before May 8.

The park district referendum includes a request for $600,000 for purchase and development of two additional park sites. The first site is located on approximately 3.5 acres south of Dundee Road and east of Old Arlington Heights Road near the Mill Creek apartment complex. The site would include a ball diamond and a football-soccer area, Crosland said.

The park district also would purchase a four-acre site in Lake County north of Checker Road and south of the village sewer treatment plant. The property is now farm land and located in an unzoned area near Willow Stream School.

The referendum also would call for improvements on 18 existing or soon-to-be-acquired park sites. Total cost of the improvements would be $300,000.

Also requested is an increase in the corporate and recreational budgets, from approximately $108,500 to $165,000.

Elderly remember panic, fear of 1918 flu epidemic

by KURT BAER

(Last of a three-part series)

For those old enough to remember, the 1918 flu epidemic was a fearsome thing.

"One morning we sat at the window and counted 18 funerals pass our house before noon," 81-year-old Olga Bardinet recalled Thursday in her room at the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, Arlington Heights.

Her neighbor, 76-year-old Esther Rauscher, also has vivid memories of the influenza attack that killed 646,000 persons in the United States, 21 million worldwide.

"We lived in Bellwood and there was only one doctor for the area and he just couldn't take care of all the cases. My dad was a pastor, and he would go call on the people and pass out medicine," she said.

"MY MOTHER MADE asafetida bags that people wore around their neck. Quite a few died, although I don't know how many. (I was only 12 years old at the time.) Dad had to take care of the funerals. The people had to have tickets, pieces of paper, that said they could be allowed in to the funeral. We tried to do the best we could," Esther Rauscher remembers.

Health officials fear that a strain of so-called swine influenza isolated in February at Fort Dix, N.J., is similar to the killer 1918 flu. A national vaccination program is planned this summer and fall to head off another possible epidemic.

But in 1918 there was no vaccine. Influenza was not even known as a virus. Sulphur drugs and quinine were used to combat the disease, according to those who remember. And certain preventive measures sound almost primitive by contemporary standards.

MARTHA REITER, 78, remembers that the doctor told her to put camphor in her nostrils as a way to keep out flu germs. And 82-year-old Carl Schmidtknecht recalls the words of his doctor.

"We didn't have (paper) tissues then. And the doctor told us, 'Don't reuse handkerchiefs. Use old rags. Then wrap them up in newspaper and burn them.'"

World health organizations around the world have been waiting for several years for evidence of a major shift in the flu bug — a signal that another epidemic may be on the way.

For the first time in history, it looks as though there will be time to take steps against a new flu, Dr. Edwin Kilbourne, head of the nation's first flu task force, told President Gerald Ford. The result is the $135 million national immunization plan.

Four drug companies already have begun mass production of what will amount to 200 million doses of vaccine — each about one-half cubic centimeter of clear liquid.

MANY OF THE INJECTIONS will be given by a high-pressure gun that forces the shot through the skin at very high pressure. This painless method of immunization, eliminates

Taxi ordinance sent to attorney

An ordinance regulating taxi cab operations in Buffalo Grove has been tabled by the village board and referred to the village attorney.

Buffalo Grove does not have a taxi business in the village, but Village Clerk Verna Clayton said she has received inquiries from a cab company.

Ordinances from five nearby communities were reviewed, Mrs. Clayton said.

10 finish cadet program

Certificates for 10 graduates of the Buffalo Grove Police Dept. police cadet program were presented at the village board meeting Monday.

The cadets completed a training program in 15 areas of law enforcement procedure under the direction of Sgt. Kenneth Blanchette, cadet advisor for the police department.

License law goes to attorney

A revision of the village's vehicle license ordinance was deferred for further study by the village attorney.

Harry Walsh, Buffalo Grove police chief, requested a change in wording that would allow citing any vehicle that does not have a municipal license.

United Fund asks $26,000 for Omni-House

The president of the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove United Fund has urged the Wheeling Village Board to approve the $26,000 budget request of Omni-House, Youth Services Bureau, Wheeling.

In a letter to the board, Gregg Crocker said the United Fund board is committed to assisting Omni-House. "I urge the Village of Wheeling to provide all human and financial resources available to help them continue to be an outstanding service agency," he said.

"I have become increasingly aware of the quality job that the Omni-House is doing for our community. However, I realize that for this kind of service to continue, they need dollars from as many local sources as possible," he said.

VILLAGE TRUSTEES in February delayed granting Omni-House its $26,000 budget request, saying that other communities were asked to contribute less money.

County mulls courts facility in area

by JOE SWICKARD

A site near Arlington Park Race Track is under consideration by Cook County officials as a Circuit Court mini-center, the Herald has learned.

Officials of Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights are actively promoting the site, 10 acres of vacant land at the southwest corner of Euclid Avenue and Wilke Road in Rolling Meadows.

The property is owned by the Madison Square Garden Corp., owners of the race track-Arlington Park Hilton Hotel complex.

COUNTY OFFICIALS said it is one of five or six possible locations in the area worthy of a "second look." About 20 possible locations were originally considered by the county last August and September.

Donald O'Connell, administrative director of the Circuit Court, said the sites will be reconsidered "within the next few weeks or about 30 days."

However, O'Connell said any locations being studied are "tentative" now and subject to final approval by the Cook County Board of Commissioners.

Arlington Heights Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the Rolling Meadows site is "perfect."

"We've been months now," Hanson said.

JOINING WITH Hanson have been Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer and Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, he said. Meyer and Ryan were not available for comment Thursday.

Advocates of the Rolling Meadows site say it is large enough to accommodate the building and necessary parking facilities in addition to its central location in the area and access by several major highways and the Chicago and North Western Ry. However, it is smaller than sites for two similar facilities, O'Connell said.

A court facility would be similar to ones planned in Maywood and Markham, he said.

If those plans were followed in the Northwest suburban facility, it would have about six to 10 court rooms and offices to house county and court clerks, probation officers and assistant state's attorneys. The courts would be able to handle probate and divorce actions in addition to criminal and traffic cases now dealt with in the branch courts, such as the one in the Arlington Heights municipal building.

DESPITE CONCERNS in some quarters that the county board may be hesitant about building another facility soon, O'Connell said plans for one in the area are "absolutely" still alive.

"We need more court space. We need more court space in northern Cook County. But when this might come to fruition, I really couldn't say," O'Connell said.

Among staunch supporters for enlarged court facilities have been local police officials. They have said readily in the past that their men lose time traveling to the branches, which are often overcrowded.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case said, "I have no objection to it here. Any court facility moving closer to being a centralized location that would save our men time and travel, I would have no objections to."

ARLINGTON Heights Police Capt. Maurice J. English said, "It's (a) logical (location). It has the area for parking, it's centrally located, and it would be accessible. The site has a great deal of potential."

If the court facility is built, it might figure into a suggested reorganization of the district court boundaries. One suggested realignment calls for using the Tri-State Tollway as an east-west border, which would place most Northwest suburbs within the proposed facility's jurisdiction.

Circuit Court Judge Harold Sullivan, presiding judge of the 2nd District, said he would favor a new facility, but said "the big problem" is whether the county board will be able to continue to provide funds for the facility.

O'Connell said the inspection of the five or six sites still under consideration will begin after construction of the Markham facility is underway. He said he could not speculate when a final decision might be reached.

Student musicians in concert Sunday

Several student musicians from the Northwest suburbs will perform with the Youth Symphony Orchestra of Greater Chicago at 3 p.m. Sunday at Orchestra Hall.

Students include: Carolyn Toll and Robin Raitt from Mount Prospect High School; Alice LaPlante, Timothy

by JOHN MAES

A former Elk Grove Village resident, the subject of a nationwide manhunt for the kidnappings of a Glencoe woman and a California woman earlier this month, is the same man known as the "Northwest suburban cat burglar" who terrorized dozens of area residents in 1974.

Authorities said they are seeking Robert Edward Williams Jr., 23, formerly of 29 Grange Pl., Elk Grove Village. Williams is suspected of the two abductions and possibly a third that occurred April 12 in the Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has said Williams' fingerprints have been found on the autos belonging to both abduction victims, Muriel Fulton of north suburban Glencoe, and Evelyn Axlerod of Sherman Oaks, Calif.

THE FBI ALSO said blood stains found in Mrs. Axlerod's car and those found on a spent bullet casing in the auto match her blood type. Mrs. Axlerod's abandoned auto was found April 12 by police in Rolling Meadows. Police fear the woman has been slain.

Williams has been listed as an escapee from a Chicago prison work release center since March 1, about three weeks before he was due to be paroled following his conviction for a string of burglaries in 1974 in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Mount Prospect police arrested Williams in June 1974, shortly after he burglarized an apartment at 1101 Hunt Club Dr. An investigation later tied Williams to a number of home and apartment burglaries in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Williams specialized in burglarizing apartments and stealing purses and wallets containing cash, often entering while residents slept, police said.

IN ONE INSTANCE, Williams successfully burglarized an Elk Grove Village apartment where 12 persons and a dog were sleeping.

Another time, an Elk Grove Village man told police he was awakened by a noise in the middle of the night and found a man kneeling at the foot of his bed. The burglar, realizing he had been spotted, bolted from the bedroom and out the front door, escaping with the resident's wallet.

Police said the wallet burglary was the first of 22 Elk Grove Village burglaries in which the burglar had been spotted.

Elk Grove Village police in 1974 said physical evidence and questioning linked Williams to 22 burglaries and attempts in the village in a span of seven weeks.

SIX BURGLARIES occurred in one apartment complex, the Eagles on Tonne Road in Elk Grove Village, and were attributed by police to Williams.

Of a string of burglary charges later brought against Williams, four involved break-ins to the Huntington Commons complex, Mount Prospect.

Elk Grove Village police Lt. William Kohnke said Williams' identity as the kidnap suspect came to light three days ago.

Kohnke said Patrolman Jeff Jenkins, son of Police Chief Harry Jenkins, saw a composite sketch of Mrs. Fulton's kidnaper on the department's bulletin board, noticing it was similar to Williams' picture.

"IT JUST STRUCK a familiar note

with him," Kohnke said. Jenkins alerted local investigators to the similarity and a file containing Williams' photo and fingerprints were later turned over to Glencoe police.

A clerk at Globe Hoppers, a store at Woodfield Shopping Center, Thursday identified Williams as the same man who attempted to rob the store April 12, Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy said.

Schaumburg police suspect Williams abducted an Itasca woman from the parking lot of the center the same day. Mrs. Dale C. Fridlund was forced at gunpoint to drive to Wood Dale where she was released unharmed. The kidnaper stole her car, which has not been found. Conroy said police expect to show Mrs. Fridlund a photo of Williams within the next several days.

Beer can buff wants containers not contents

Some people are continually saying they're bored, that life just does not mean anything.

You can generally pick out those people easily. When they describe weekend plans, the discussion begins with a yawn and ends with a nap.

This behavior is not for Bill Wishart. His mother, Virginia, says that Bill is always into something.

Bill's day starts each morning.

He slides out of bed, places one soft contact lens in each eye and hustles off to learn eighth grade at Iroquois Junior High School in Des Plaines.

There are dozens of ways to keep busy after school.

BILL LOVES sports. He wants to compete in athletics beginning next year at Maine West High School.

For his more creative moments, there's a set of drums which crowds one corner of his bedroom. And then there are the beer cans. Hundreds and hundreds of beer cans.

It all began about three years ago with Jim Holm, Bill's good friend from down the street who saved cans. Bill thought that might be interesting, even though his mother was not entirely convinced.

Virginia Wishart thought, "Oh, my God, beer cans! He's going into dumps... how unsanitary! Who needs them?"

Bill was not deterred.

"We started by going to flea markets, looking for cans, trading and buying the good cans," said Bill.

"Then we joined a few clubs and saw what they wanted in to trade cans. When you're a begin-

Village homes without water for 15 minutes

Sections of Elk Grove Village were without water for up to 15 minutes Thursday when Well No. 5, Walnut Street north of Tonne Road, broke.

Village Mgr. Charles A. Willis said when the well quit at 2:15 p.m. it caused a pressure drop throughout the village's water system and momentarily shut off boosters at other well stations.

Trustee Michael J. Tosto, who lives on Armstrong Ln., west of Ill. Rte. 58, said his water was out for 15 minutes.

Village Engineer Donald Ciaglia said a pipe of Well No. 5 apparently broke. He said the water apparently is still being pumped but it is not reaching the surface at that site.

With the breakdown of Well No. 5, five of the village's nine wells are not functioning. Four other wells are either being repaired or about to be repaired.

Willis said Bensenville officials have been contacted for preparation of enactment, if needed, of the two communities' emergency water agreement.

Under the agreement, Elk Grove Village can draw water from the Bensenville water system. Willis said it is unknown if the emergency water source will have to be used because of the well breakdown.

The period of potential water shortage should end by Monday, Willis said. Two of the wells under repair should be back in service by then, he said.

Willis said the situation such as Thursday's is an indication the village might reach the point where water shortages might help the village prove its need for Lake Michigan water and speed up the acquisition of it.

Clinic for gardeners at Lively Jr. High

Dick Price of the Lake-Cook Farm Supply Store, will conduct the session.

However, it is smaller than sites for two similar facilities, O'Connell said.

A court facility would be similar to ones planned in Maywood and Markham, he said.

If those plans were followed in the Northwest suburban facility, it would have about six to 10 court rooms and offices to house county and court clerks, probation officers and assistant state's attorneys. The courts would be able to handle probate and divorce actions in addition to criminal and traffic cases now dealt with in the branch courts, such as the one in the Arlington Heights municipal building.

DESPITE CONCERNS in some quarters that the county board may be hesitant about building another facility soon, O'Connell said plans for one in the area are "absolutely" still alive.

Unguarded stretch of track

Boy killed when train hits bicycle

by DIANE MERMIGAS

A 15-year-old Des Plaines youth was killed early Thursday when he was struck by a Chicago and North Western Ry. train while crossing an unguarded stretch of track on his bicycle.

Ronald P. Bahr, 444 N. Sixth Ave., was seen by the train engineer sitting on his bike next to the tracks at Seegers Road and Northwest Highway, about 100 yards east of the Cumberland station, shortly before he was struck by the westbound train at 7 a.m., said Des Plaines Patrolman Ronald Diehl.

The train, traveling about 45 m.p.h., was unable to make an emergency stop before striking the boy "who apparently ignored the warnings sounded by the engineer," Diehl said.

BAHR WAS APPARENTLY on his way to school at Maine West High School, Des Plaines, where he was a junior. He was killed instantly and was taken to Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, Diehl said.

Bahr is survived by his parents, Donald and Irene, and two brothers, David and Steven.

The train, headed into Mount Prospect on the southern tracks, was delayed about 40 minutes and no passengers were injured during the emergency stop, Diehl said.

Morning rush-hour traffic reportedly was backed up for a while on Golf and Wolf roads which intersect just west of where the accident occurred.

THE GRAVEL AND dirt pathway leading upward to the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks at Seegers Road is in an older, residential area of Des Plaines and directly faces Pace Auto, 600 E. Northwest Hwy.

Mal Ahrens, a sales manager at the dealership, said he was not around at the time of the accident, but often sees children on bicycles crossing the tracks at that point.

The gravel pathway is lined on both sides by high grass and shrubs, blinding the view of youngsters who ride their bikes there.

"You can't fence all of the railroad in, it's just impossible. And it's tragic when something like this happens," said James McDonald, public relations director for the Chicago and North Western Ry.

"If residents would only try and police these kind of pathways themselves and keep the children away from the tracks, there'd be less of a chance of this happening. We do all that we can to prevent it," he said.

Area driver testing station expected to open next month

The long-awaited Northwest suburban driver testing station is expected to open sometime in May in Schaumburg's Woodfield Commons office-commercial center.

"We are still shooting for our May opening target and expect to be able to announce a date in the very near future," Marty McLaughlin, a spokesman for Sec. of State Michael J. Howlett, said Thursday.

McLaughlin said remodeling of a 4,400-square-foot store-front office at 1231 E. Golf Rd. is in progress.

"Our goal is to open the testing station in time to accommodate the summer need we seem to experience each year," McLaughlin said.

THE FACILITY, expected to employ about 30 persons, will provide written and behind-the-wheel examinations for driver's license applicants. The road testing of applicants will take place on adjacent streets near Woodfield Shopping Center, rather than on the grounds of the office-commercial center.

License plates will not be sold at the new testing site.

The facility will be in space being leased by the state from J. Emil Anderson and Sons, developers.

The state also leases a six-story building in Woodfield Plaza, just east of the proposed testing site, from the Anderson firm.

LEASE ARRANGEMENTS for the building, used by the Illinois Dept. of Transportation, are being probed by a special Illinois House subcommittee.

The search for a driver testing site in the Northwest suburbs began in 1970. Locations in Arlington Heights, Palatine, Barrington and another Schaumburg site were considered and later rejected.

State officials say the Woodfield Commons site was selected because of its central location and easy access from major roads and highways.

Correction

A story in Tuesday's Herald incorrectly stated that a change in pastors brought about a decision to end a lease agreement between an Elk Grove Village food co-op and the First Baptist Church of Elk Grove Village.

Church Deacon J. O. Johnson said Thursday the church's new pastor was not involved in the decision and that church members authorized the action in a vote during a regular meeting.

The story correctly stated that the co-op was given 90 days notice of the termination following the vote. Church officials had been unavailable for comment earlier.

Cat burglar, kidnap suspect, same man

by JOHN MAES

A former Elk Grove Village resident, the subject of a nationwide manhunt for the kidnappings of a Glencoe woman and a California woman earlier this month, is the same man known as the "Northwest suburban cat burglar" who terrorized dozens of area residents in 1974.

Authorities said they are seeking Robert Edward Williams Jr., 23, formerly of 29 Grange Pl., Elk Grove Village. Williams is suspected of the two abductions and possibly a third that occurred April 12 in the Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has said Williams' fingerprints have been found on the autos belonging to both abduction victims, Muriel Fulton of north suburban Glencoe, and Evelyn Axlerod of Sherman Oaks, Calif.

THE FBI ALSO said blood stains found in Mrs. Axlerod's car and those found on a spent bullet casing in the auto match her blood type. Mrs. Axlerod's abandoned auto was found April 12 by police in Rolling Meadows. Police fear the woman has been slain.

Williams has been listed as an escapee from a Chicago prison work release center since March 1, about three weeks before he was due to be paroled following his conviction for a string of burglaries in 1974 in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Mount Prospect police arrested Williams in June 1974, shortly after he burglarized an apartment at 1101 Hunt Club Dr. An investigation later tied Williams to a number of home and apartment burglaries in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Williams specialized in burglarizing apartments and stealing purses and wallets containing cash, often entering while residents slept, police said.

IN ONE INSTANCE, Williams successfully burglarized an Elk Grove Village apartment where 12 persons and a dog were sleeping.

Another time, an Elk Grove Village man told police he was awakened by a noise in the middle of the night and found a man kneeling at the foot of his bed. The burglar, realizing he had been spotted, bolted from the bedroom and out the front door, escaping with the resident's wallet.

Police said the wallet burglary was the first of 22 Elk Grove Village burglaries in which the burglar had been spotted.

Elk Grove Village police in 1974 said physical evidence and questioning linked Williams to 22 burglaries and attempts in the village in a span of seven weeks.

SIX BURGLARIES occurred in one apartment complex, the Eagles, on Tonne Road in Elk Grove Village, and were attributed by police to Williams.

Of a string of burglary charges later brought against Williams, four involved break-ins to the Huntington Commons complex, Mount Prospect.

Elk Grove Village police Lt. William Kohnke said Williams' identity as the kidnap suspect came to light three days ago.

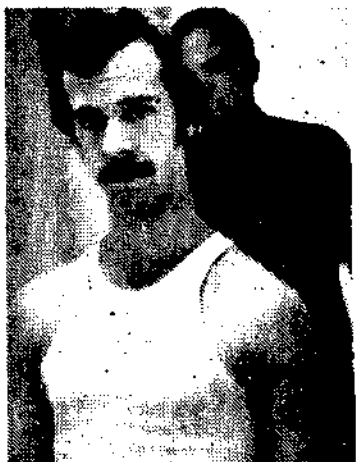

Kohnke said Patrolman Jeff Jenkins, son of Police Chief Harry Jenkins, saw a composite sketch of Mrs. Fulton's kidnaper on the department's bulletin board, noticing it was similar to Williams' picture.

"IT JUST STRUCK a familiar note

with him," Kohnke said. Jenkins alerted local investigators to the similarity and a file containing Williams' photo and fingerprints were later turned over to Glencoe police.

A clerk at Globe Hoppers, a store at Woodfield Shopping Center, Thursday identified Williams as the same man who attempted to rob the store April 12, Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy said.

Schaumburg police suspect Williams abducted an Illinois woman from the parking lot of the center the same day. Mrs. Dale C. Fridlund was forced at gunpoint to drive to Wood Dale where she was released unharmed. The kidnaper stole her car, which has not been found. Conroy said police expect to show Mrs. Fridlund a photo of Williams within the next several days.

Schaumburg Park District officials are proposing a $763,000 budget for the 1976-77 fiscal year, an increase of $115,000 over last year. Final adoption of the budget is not expected by the park board until current assessed valuation figures are available from Cook County, said Jerry Baer, park district business manager.

Baer said the new budget is not expected to increase taxes paid by residents because the park district is taxing at its legal limit — 10 cents per $100 assessed valuation for maintenance and 7.5 cents per $100 for recreation or $17.50 for a house with an equalized assessed valuation of $10,000.

INCREASE FACTORS, Baer said, include an additional $12,000 per year available to the park district under the Comprehensive Employment Training Act which pays the salaries of two full-time workers.

"We also experienced an increase of about $20,000 on interest earned on our investments and had a $28,000 surplus left in last year's recreation fund," Baer said.

The park district general corporate fund is tentatively set at $235,000 and the recreation fund at $468,000.

Baer said revenues of about $82,000 from swimming pool fees and $116,700 from recreation program fees have been forecast for the coming year.

Jaycees postpone pageant; seek funds, more entrants

A shortage of funds and entrants has forced a three-month postponement of the 11th annual Miss Hoffman Estates Pageant.

The decision to postpone the contest from May 8 to Aug. 21 came after a meeting Tuesday night of the Hoffman Estates Jaycees Board.

Jaycee publicist Chuck Byers said Wednesday the organization needs at least $3,000 to break even on the pageant, which offers $1,500 in scholarships to winners.

"By delaying the pageant until August, it will allow us time to come up with the necessary funds to make the thing go," Byers said.

THE POSTPONEMENT also will allow more women to sign up for the pageant, Byers said. Only seven entries were received by the original deadline of April 19.

Jaycees sent out letters two weeks ago soliciting donations from area merchants to go toward scholarships, but Byers said the response has been negative.

"We're going to try a slightly different approach before August," Byers said. "We'll solicit funds from merchants, but we'll also begin selling site-lites (electrically-lighted signs showing home addresses)."

Single women between the ages of 18 and 23 may enter the Miss Hoffman Estates Pageant, a preliminary pageant to the Miss America contest, by calling Ann Kohnke at 882-6086.

The contest features competition in swim suit, evening gown and talent categories. Talent constitutes 50 per cent of the overall score.

Further information may be obtained by calling Byers at 882-6964.

Elderly remember panic, fear of 1918 flu epidemic

by KURT BAER

(Last of a three-part series)

For those old enough to remember, the 1918 flu epidemic was a fearsome thing.

"One morning we sat at the window and counted 18 funerals pass our house before noon," 81-year-old Olga Bardinet recalled Thursday in her room at the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, Arlington Heights.

Her neighbor, 70-year-old Esther Rauscher, also has vivid memories of the influenza attack that killed 648,000 persons in the United States, 21 million worldwide.

"We lived in Bellwood and there was only one doctor for the area and he just couldn't take care of all the cases. My dad was a pastor, and he would go call on the people and pass out medicine," she said.

"MY MOTHER MADE asafetida bags that people wore around their neck. Quite a few died, although I don't know how many. (I was only 12 years old at the time.) Dad had to take care of the funerals. The people had to have tickets, pieces of paper, that said they could be allowed in to the funeral. We tried to do the best we could," Esther Rauscher remembers.

Health officials fear that a strain of so-called swine influenza isolated in February at Fort Dix, N.J., is similar to the killer 1918 flu. A national vaccination program is planned this summer and fall to head off another possible epidemic.

But in 1918 there was no vaccine. Influenza was not even known as a virus. Sulphur drugs and quinine were used to combat the disease, according to those who remember. And certain preventive measures sound almost primitive by contemporary standards.

MARTHA REITER, 78, remembers that the doctor told her to put camphor in her nostrils as a way to keep out flu germs. And 82-year-old Carl Schmidke recalls the words of his doctor.

"We didn't have (paper) tissues then. And the doctor told us, 'Don't reuse handkerchiefs. Use old rags. Then wrap them up in newspaper and burn them.'"

World health organizations around the world have been waiting for several years for evidence of a major shift in the flu bug — a signal that another epidemic may be on the way.

For the first time in history, it looks as though there will be time to take steps against a new flu, Dr. Edwin Kilbourne, head of the nation's first flu task force, told President Gerald Ford. The result is the $135 million national immunization plan.

Four drug companies already have begun mass production of what will amount to 200 million doses of vaccine — each about one-half cubic centimeter of clear liquid.

MANY OF THE INJECTIONS will be given by a high-pressure gun that forces the shot through the skin at very high pressure. This painless method of immunization eliminates

All kites will be judged according to construction, materials, originality and flying ability.

Winners will receive prizes and ribbons.

There is no entrance fee for the competition and no limit on participants.

In case of rain, the contest will be held May 15 at Campanelli Park.

$2,091 expenditure for mosquito spray

The Hoffman Estates Village Board has allocated $2,091 for mosquito abatement.

Assistant Village Mgr. John Dixon said $815 will be paid to Larke Outdoor Spraying Co. of Roselle to supplement spraying by the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District.

Additional funds were allocated in the event spraying by the district is inadequate and the village must provide further spraying, Dixon said.

Near Arlington Park

Consider courts facility for area

by JOE SWICKARD

A site near Arlington Park Race Track is under consideration by Cook County officials as a Circuit Court mini-center, the Herald has learned.

Officials of Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights are actively promoting the site, 10 acres of vacant land at the southwest corner of Euclid Avenue and Wilke Road in Rolling Meadows.

The property is owned by the Madison Square Garden Corp., owners of the race track-Arlington Park Hilton Hotel complex.

COUNTY OFFICIALS said it is one of five or six possible locations in the area worthy of a "second look." About 20 possible locations were originally considered by the county last August and September.

Donald O'Connell, administrative director of the Circuit Court, said the sites will be reconsidered "within the next few weeks or about 30 days."

However, O'Connell said any locations being studied are "tentative" now and subject to final approval by the Cook County Board of Commissioners.

Arlington Heights Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the Rolling Meadows site is "perfect."

"We've been months now," Hanson said.

JOINING WITH Hanson have been Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer and Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, he said. Meyer and Ryan were not available for comment Thursday.

Advocates of the Rolling Meadows site say it is large enough to accommodate the building and necessary parking facilities in addition to its central location in the area and access by several major highways and the Chicago and North Western Ry. However, it is smaller than sites for two similar facilities, O'Connell said.

A court facility would be similar to ones planned in Maywood and Markham, he said.

If those plans were followed in the Northwest suburban facility, it would have about six to 10 court rooms and offices to house county and court clerks, probation officers and assistant state's attorneys. The courts would be able to handle probate and divorce actions in addition to criminal and traffic cases now dealt with in the branch courts, such as the one in the Arlington Heights municipal building.

DESPITE CONCERNS in some quarters that the county board may be hesitant about building another facility soon, O'Connell said plans for one in the area are "absolutely" still alive.

"We need more court space. We need more court space in northern Cook County. But when this might come to fruition, I really couldn't say," O'Connell said.

Among staunch supporters for enlarged court facilities have been local police officials. They have said readily in the past that their men lose time traveling to the branches, which are often overcrowded.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case said, "I have no objection to it here. Any court facility moving closer to being a centralized location that would save our men time and travel, I would have no objections to."

If the court facility is built, it might figure into a suggested reorganization of the district court boundaries. One suggested realignment calls for using the Tri-State Tollway as an east-west border, which would place most Northwest suburbs within the proposed facility's jurisdiction.

Circuit Court Judge Harold Sullivan, presiding judge of the 2nd District, said he would favor a new facility, but said "the big problem" is whether the county board will be able to continue to provide funds for the facility.

O'Connell said the inspection of the five or six sites still under consideration will begin after construction of the Markham facility is underway. He said he could not speculate when a final decision might be reached.

Student award established in memory of Valentino

An award to honor outstanding student contributions to the community has been established in the name of the late Robert T. Valentino, a former member of the Hoffman Estates Plan Commission.

The award will be given to seniors at Hoffman Estates and Conant high schools who have contributed most to the community.

Edward Tavill of the village zoning board of appeals Monday gave the first donation for the award to Trustee Bruce Lind, who will handle the account on deposit at Lincoln Federal Savings and Loan Assn.

"I know how big a loss the community has suffered from the death of Robert Valentino," Tavill said. "He was always working for the youth. In the time that I had known him, he never once refused to talk to the kids."

Valentino, 37, also served as a zoning board member and was active in community affairs. He died of a heart attack April 3.

Tavill said a trustee organization to manage the award funds will be established.

Interested persons may call Tavill at 346-9076 or 882-0399, or Mrs. Tavill, 882-8800.

Tavill said the award could be expanded to a scholarship for graduating Hoffman Estates seniors.

by JOHN MAES

A former Elk Grove Village resident, the subject of a nationwide man-hunt for the kidnappings of a Glencoe woman and a California woman earlier this month, is the same man known as the "Northwest suburban cat burglar" who terrorized dozens of area residents in 1974.

Authorities said they are seeking Robert Edward Williams Jr., 23, formerly of 29 Grange Pl., Elk Grove Village. Williams is suspected of the two abductions and possibly a third that occurred April 12 in the Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has said Williams' fingerprints have been found on the autos belonging to both abduction victims, Muriel Fulton of north suburban Glencoe, and Evelyn Axlerod of Sherman Oaks, Calif.

THE FBI ALSO said blood stains found in Mrs. Axlerod's car and those found on a spent bullet casing in the auto match her blood type. Mrs. Axlerod's abandoned auto was found April 12 by police in Rolling Meadows. Police fear the woman has been slain.

Williams has been listed as an escapee from a Chicago prison work release center since March 1, about three weeks before he was due to be paroled following his conviction for a string of burglaries in 1974 in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Mount Prospect police arrested Williams in June 1974, shortly after he burglarized an apartment at 1101 Hunt Club Dr. An investigation later tied Williams to a number of home and apartment burglaries in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Williams specialized in burglarizing apartments and stealing purses and wallets containing cash, often entering while residents slept, police said.

IN ONE INSTANCE, Williams successfully burglarized an Elk Grove Village apartment where 12 persons and a dog were sleeping.

Another time, an Elk Grove Village man told police he was awakened by a noise in the middle of the night and found a man kneeling at the foot of his bed. The burglar, realizing he had been spotted, bolted from the bedroom and out the front door, escaping with the resident's wallet.

Police said the wallet burglary was the first of 22 Elk Grove Village burglaries in which the burglar had been spotted.

Elk Grove Village police in 1974 said physical evidence and questioning linked Williams to 22 burglaries and attempts in the village in a span of seven weeks.

SIX BURGLARIES occurred in one apartment complex, the Eagles on Tonne Road in Elk Grove Village, and were attributed by police to Williams.

Of a string of burglary charges later brought against Williams, four involved break-ins to the Huntington Commons complex, Mount Prospect.

Elk Grove Village police Lt. William Kohnke said Williams' identity as the kidnap suspect came to light three days ago.

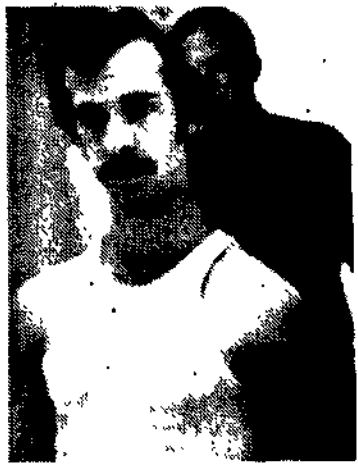

Kohnke said Patrolman Jeff Jenkins, son of Police Chief Harry Jenkins, saw a composite sketch of Mrs. Fulton's kidnaper on the department's bulletin board, noticing it was similar to Williams' picture.

"IT JUST STRUCK a familiar note

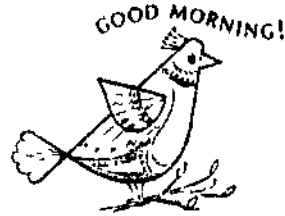

with him," Kohnke said. Jenkins alerted local investigators to the similarity and a file containing Williams' photo and fingerprints were later turned over to Glencoe police.

A clerk at Globe Hoppers, a store at Woodfield Shopping Center, Thursday identified Williams as the same man who attempted to rob the store April 12, Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy said.

Schaumburg police suspect Williams abducted an Itasca woman from the parking lot of the center the same day. Mrs. Dale C. Fridlund was forced at gunpoint to drive to Wood Dale where she was released unharmed. The kidnaper stole her car, which has not been found. Conroy said police expect to show Mrs. Fridlund a photo of Williams within the next several days.

Mike Klein's people

Some people are continually saying they're bored, that life just does not mean anything.

You can generally pick out those people easily. When they describe weekend plans, the discussion begins with a yawn and ends with a nap.

This behavior is not for Bill Wishart. His mother, Virginia, says that Bill is always into something.

Bill's day starts each morning. He slides out of bed, places one soft contact lens in each eye and hustles off to learn eighth grade at Iroquois Junior High School in Des Plaines.

There are dozens of ways to keep busy after school.

BILL LOVES sports. He wants to compete in athletics beginning next year at Maine West High School.

For his more creative moments, there's a set of drums which crowds one corner of his bedroom. And then there are the beer cans. Hundreds and hundreds of beer cans.

It all began about three years ago with Jim Holm, Bill's good friend from down the street who saved cans. Bill thought that might be interesting, even though his mother was not entirely convinced.

Virginia Wishart thought, "Oh, my God, beer cans! He's going into dumps . . . how unsanitary! Who needs them?"

Bill was not deterred.

"We started by going to flea markets, looking for cans, trading and buying the good cans," said Bill.

County weighs track site for courts building

by JOE SWICKARD

A site near Arlington Park Race Track is under consideration by Cook County officials as a Circuit Court mini-center, the Herald has learned.

Officials of Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights are actively promoting the site, 10 acres of vacant land at the southwest corner of Euclid Avenue and Wilke Road in Rolling Meadows.

The property is owned by the Madison Square Garden Corp., owners of the race track-Arlington Park Hilton Hotel complex.

COUNTY OFFICIALS said it is one of five or six possible locations in the area worthy of a "second look." About 20 possible locations were originally considered by the county last August and September.

Donald O'Connell, administrative director of the Circuit Court, said the sites will be reconsidered "within the next few weeks or about 30 days."

However, O'Connell said any locations being studied are "tentative" now and subject to final approval by the Cook County Board of Commissioners.

Arlington Heights Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the Rolling Meadows site is "perfect."

"We've been months now," Hanson said.

JOINING WITH Hanson have been Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer and Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, he said. Meyer and Ryan were not available for comment Thursday.

Advocates of the Rolling Meadows site say it is large enough to accommodate the building and necessary parking facilities in addition to its central location in the area and access by several major highways and the Chicago and North Western Ry. However, it is smaller than sites for two similar facilities, O'Connell said.

A court facility would be similar to ones planned in Maywood and Markham, he said.

If those plans were followed in the Northwest suburban facility, it would have about six to 10 court rooms and offices to house county and court clerks, probation officers and assistant state's attorneys. The courts would be able to handle probate and divorce actions in addition to criminal and traffic cases now dealt with in the branch courts, such as the one in the Arlington Heights municipal building.

DESPITE CONCERNS in some quarters that the county board may be hesitant about building another facility soon, O'Connell said plans for one in the area are "absolutely" still alive.

"We need more court space. We need more court space in northern Cook County. But when this might come to fruition, I really couldn't say," O'Connell said.

Among staunch supporters for en-

Elderly remember panic, fear of 1918 flu epidemic

by KURT BAER
(Last of a three-part series)

For those old enough to remember, the 1918 flu epidemic was a fearsome thing.

"One morning we sat at the window and counted 18 funerals pass our house before noon," 81-year-old Olga Bardinet recalled Thursday in her room at the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, Arlington Heights.

Her neighbor, 70-year-old Esther Rauscher, also has vivid memories of the influenza attack that killed 549,000 persons in the United States, 21 million worldwide.

"We lived in Bellwood and there was only one doctor for the area and he just couldn't take care of all the cases. My dad was a pastor, and he would go call on the people and pass out medicine," she said.

"MY MOTHER MADE asafetida bags that people wore around their neck. Quite a few died, although I don't know how many. (I was only 12 years old at the time.) Dad had to take care of the funerals. The people had to have tickets, pieces of paper, that said they could be allowed in to the funeral. We tried to do the best we could," Esther Rauscher remembers.

Health officials fear that a strain of so-called swine influenza isolated in February at Fort Dix, N.J., is similar to the killer 1918 flu. A national vaccination program is planned this summer and fall to head off another possible epidemic.

But in 1918 there was no vaccine. Influenza was not even known as a virus. Sulphur drugs and quinine were used to combat the disease, according to those who remember. And certain preventive measures sound almost primitive by contemporary standards.

MARTHA REITER, 78, remembers that the doctor told her to put camphor in her nostrils as a way to keep out flu germs. And 82-year-old Carl Schmidke recalls the words of his doctor.

"We didn't have (paper) tissues then. And the doctor told us, 'Don't reuse handkerchiefs. Use old rags. Then wrap them up in newspaper and burn them.'"

World health organizations around the world have been waiting for several years for evidence of a major shift in the flu bug — a signal that another epidemic may be on the way.

For the first time in history, it looks as though there will be time to take steps against a new flu, Dr. Edwin Kilbourne, head of the nation's first flu task force, told President Gerald Ford. The result is the $135 million national immunization plan.

Four drug companies already have begun mass production of what will amount to 200 million doses of vaccine — each about one-half cubic centimeter of clear liquid.

MANY OF THE INJECTIONS will be given by a high-pressure gun that forces the shot through the skin at very high pressure. This painless method of immunization eliminates

The program is sponsored by Friends of Gifted Children and is open to the public.

Workshop sessions on body language between teacher and student, a letter-writing exchange between suburban schools and intercity schools, and methods of stimulating students to write meaningfully will be part of the program when Northwest suburban teachers of English and the language arts meet Tuesday at the North Shore Hilton Hotel in Skokie, for the second annual spring conference of the Northwest Suburban Dist. of the Illinois Assn. of Teachers of English.

For information and reservations contact Gene Haas, Maine North High School, 298-5500.

Preconvention conference of PTA Dist. 21, entitled "The Today PTA" will start at 9:30 a.m. Thursday at Our Lady of the Brook Church, 3700 Dundee Rd., Northbrook.

The mock convention is conducted to prepare delegates for the annual Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers convention in May. All prospective delegates, administrators, teachers, parents and officers are invited to attend.

Host to the 96 units represented will be the River Ridge Council of PTAs under the direction of Mrs. Herbert Schlatter, Des Plaines, council president.

No foul play suspected in death of exec, 61

Investigators are discounting the possibility of foul play in the death of the president of an Arlington Heights publishing company whose body was discovered in a forest preserve Tuesday.

The body of Harry Metzger, 61, president of AHM Publishing Co., 8110 N. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights, was found in a stand of trees near the edge of the Skokie Lagoon in the Erickson Forest Preserve early Tuesday.

Metzger, a Winnetka resident, was last seen Monday afternoon as he left his company offices.

It doesn't appear to be murder at this point," said Phillip Bettiker, Cook County Sheriff's police investigator.

Bettiker said Metzger's body showed no marks of violence. His car, parked nearby, wallet and personal effects were undisturbed, he said.

The coroner's office will perform an autopsy on the body and results are expected "within two weeks" from the tests, Bettiker said.

The investigator said it is possible that Metzger was fatally stricken as he walked in the forest preserve near Palatine Road and Edens Expressway.

Metzger's company, in the village north industrial park, publishes college textbooks.

PAUL STROCKMAN jumps off a playground swing this week, giving kids plenty of time to work off to make his way home. School hasn't been in session some of that extra energy.

Post full price of gasoline, city to urge two villages

Rolling Meadows officials will ask Arlington Heights and Palatine officials to require that service stations advertise the full pump price of gasoline instead of the separate prices of gasoline and sales tax.

"We believe the ordinance we adopted a year ago is a good one and plan to send a copy of it to communities that border our city, asking their officials to also consider adopting it," Ald. Daniel Weber said Thursday.

Weber is chairman of the city's public works, building and zoning committee.

TWO ROLLING MEADOWS service station owners, Ron Langton and Eric Christiansen, have asked the committee to review the city's sign ordinance.

Station owners in the city, if they advertise at all, must post signs that show the full price instead of gallon price excluding tax.

Langton, owner of the Standard Service Station at Hicks and Euclid roads, Thursday said, "the city's rule does not allow us to be competitive. It was needed when it was adopted, but since the state has passed laws that govern advertising of gas prices, the city law is no longer needed," he said.

Langton said station owners in most other communities can advertise pump or gallon price, plus tax.

"A Rolling Meadows station across the street from a station in another town that's advertising gallon price doesn't have a chance," Langton said.

"The ordinance definitely hurts our business. It's doubly discriminatory," Langton said.

"WHY DON'T THEY pass an ordinance that requires the grocery store to add the tax price to a head of let-uce. That's what they are making us do," he said.

Langton and Christiansen, owner of the Standard Service station at 1801 Algonquin Rd., both said they are pleased with the aldermen's quick response to their request to review the ordinance.

"Right now a station across the street from me, because it is in another town, can post a gallon price plus tax. If I sell my gas for the same price but post a pump price, the average motorist will look at the sign and still think his gas is selling cheaper than mine," Christiansen said.

Christiansen said the public works committee has offered to meet again with service station owners after it receives a response from Arlington Heights and Palatine officials.

"I believe the ordinance was first adopted because the city officials believed neighboring communities around us would also impose the rule," Christiansen said.

Neighboring Schaumburg and Elk Grove Village have similar ordinances.

"I'm not attempting to have the city's ordinance repealed," Christiansen said.

Des Plaines boy killed when train hits bicycle

by DIANE MERMIGAS

A 15-year-old Des Plaines youth was killed early Thursday when he was struck by a Chicago and North Western Ry. train while crossing an unguarded stretch of track on his bicycle.

Ronald P. Bahr, 444 N. Sixth Ave., was seen by the train engineer sitting on his bike next to the tracks at Seegers Road and Northwest Highway, about 100 yards east of the Cumberland station, shortly before he was struck by the westbound train at 7 a.m., said Des Plaines Patrolman Ronald Diehl.

The train, traveling about 45 m.p.h., was unable to make an emergency stop before striking the boy "who apparently ignored the warnings sounded by the engineer," Diehl said. BAHR WAS APPARENTLY on his way to school at Maine West High School, Des Plaines, where he was a junior. He was killed instantly and was taken to Holy Family Hospital,

Ronald P. Bahr

Des Plaines, Diehl said.

Bahr is survived by his parents, Donald and Irene, and two brothers, David and Steven.

The train, headed into Mount Prospect on the southern tracks, was delayed about 40 minutes and no passengers were injured during the emergency stop, Diehl said.

Morning rush-hour traffic reportedly was backed up for a while on Golf and Wolf roads which intersect just west of where the accident occurred.

THE GRAVEL AND dirt pathway leading upward to the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks at Seegers Road is in an older, residential area of Des Plaines and directly faces Pace Auto, 600 E. Northwest Hwy.

Mel Ahrens, a sales manager at the dealership, said he was not around at the time of the accident, but often sees children on bicycles crossing the tracks at that point.

The gravel pathway is lined on both sides by high grass and shrubs, blinding the view of youngsters who ride their bikes there.

"You can't fence all of the railroad in, it's just impossible. And it's tragic when something like this happens," said James McDonald, public relations director for the Chicago and North Western Ry.

"If residents would only try and police these kind of pathways themselves and keep the children away from the tracks, there'd be less of a chance of this happening. We do all that we can to prevent it," he said.

Surrey Ridge center ordered to upgrade area

The Village of Arlington Heights has ordered the operators of the Surrey Ridge Shopping Center at Golf and Algonquin roads to begin making improvements requested by the Surrey Ridge West Homeowners Assn.

The pending improvements have caused the village board to postpone approval of a request by Fotomat Corp. to install a drive-in store in the center's parking lot.

S. S. Kresge Co. must remove the auto repair sign from the north side of the building that faces Kennicott Avenue because it "impinges on the residential neighborhood" immediately adjacent to the shopping center, the letter from the village's health department states.

The Kresge Co. also was ordered to remove garden supplies that are now stored in the parking lot and to restrict long-term parking in the lot by trucks and buses.

Other improvements required by the village include: repairs of holes in the parking lot; removal of graffiti from the walls of the buildings; new canopies; replacement of dead trees and plants; and a new emergency exit gate.

Area driver testing station expected to open next month

The long-awaited Northwest suburban driver testing station is expected to open sometime in May in Schaumburg's Woodfield Commons office-commercial center.

"We are still shooting for our May opening target and expect to be able to announce a date in the very near future," Marty McLaughlin, a spokesman for Sec. of State Michael J. Howlett, said Thursday.

County weighs site in Meadows

larged court facilities have been local police officials. They have said recently in the past that their men lose time traveling to the branches, which are often overcrowded.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case said, "I have no objection to it here. Any court facility moving closer to being a centralized location that would save our men time and travel, I would have no objections to."

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Police Capt. Maurice J. English said, "It's (a) logical (location). It has the area for parking, it's centrally located, and it would be accessible. The site has a great deal of potential."

If the court facility is built, it might figure into a suggested reorganization of the district court boundaries. One suggested realignment calls for using the Tri-State Tollway as an east-west border, which would place most Northwest suburbs within the proposed facility's jurisdiction.

Circuit Court Judge Harold Sullivan, presiding judge of the 2nd District, said he would favor a new facility, but said "the big problem" is whether the county board will be able to continue to provide funds for the facility.

O'Connell said the inspection of the five or six sites still under consideration will begin after construction of the Markham facility is underway. He said he could not speculate when a final decision might be reached.

McLaughlin said remodeling of a 4,400-square-foot store-front office at 1231 E. Golf Rd. is in progress.

"Our goal is to open the testing station in time to accommodate the summer need we seem to experience each year," McLaughlin said.

THE FACILITY, expected to employ about 30 persons, will provide written and behind-the-wheel examinations for driver's license applicants. The road testing of applicants will take place on adjacent streets near Woodfield Shopping Center, rather than on the grounds of the office-commercial center.

License plates will not be sold at the new testing site.

The facility will be in space being leased by the state from J. Emil Anderson and Sons, developers.

The state also leases a six-story building in Woodfield Plaza, just east of the proposed testing site, from the Anderson firm.

LEASE ARRANGEMENTS for the building, used by the Illinois Dept. of Transportation, are being probed by a special Illinois House subcommittee.

The search for a driver testing site in the Northwest suburbs began in 1970. Locations in Arlington Heights, Palatine, Barrington and another Schaumburg site were considered and later rejected.

However, it is smaller than sites for two similar facilities, O'Connell said.

A court facility would be similar to ones planned in Maywood and Markham, he said.

If those plans were followed in the Northwest suburban facility, it would have about six to 10 court rooms and offices to house county and court clerks, probation officers and assistant state's attorneys. The courts would be able to handle probate and divorce actions in addition to criminal and traffic cases now dealt with in the branch courts, such as the one in the Arlington Heights municipal building.

DESPITE CONCERNS in some quarters that the county board may be hesitant about building another facility soon, O'Connell said plans for one in the area are "absolutely" still alive.

"We need more court space. We need more court space in northern Cook County. But when this might come to fruition, I really couldn't say," O'Connell said.

Elderly remember panic, fear of 1918 flu epidemic

by KURT BAER

(Last of a three-part series)

For those old enough to remember, the 1918 flu epidemic was a fearsome thing.

One morning we sat at the window and counted 10 funerals pass our house before noon," 81-year-old Olga Bardinet recalled Thursday in her room at the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, Arlington Heights.

Her neighbor, 70-year-old Esther Rauscher, also has vivid memories of the influenza attack that killed 548,000 persons in the United States, 21 million worldwide.

"We lived in Bellwood and there was only one doctor for the area and he just couldn't take care of all the cases. My dad was a pastor, and he would go call on the people and pass out medicine," she said.

"MY MOTHER MADE asafetida bags that people wore around their neck. Quite a few died, although I don't know how many. (I was only 12 years old at the time.) Dad had to take care of the funerals. The people had to have tickets, pieces of paper, that said they could be allowed in to the funeral. We tried to do the best we could," Esther Rauscher remembers.

Health officials fear that a strain of so-called swine influenza isolated in February at Fort Dix, N.J., is similar to the killer 1918 flu. A national vaccination program is planned this summer and fall to head off another possible epidemic.

But in 1918 there was no vaccine. Influenza was not even known as a virus. Sulphur drugs and quinine were used to combat the disease, according to those who remember. And certain preventive measures sound almost primitive by contemporary standards.

MARTHA REITER, 78, remembers that the doctor told her to put camphor in her nostrils as a way to keep out flu germs. And 82-year-old Carl Schmidt recalls the words of his doctor.

"We didn't have (paper) tissues then. And the doctor told us, 'Don't reuse handkerchiefs. Use old rags. Then wrap them up in newspaper and burn them.'"

World health organizations around the world have been waiting for several years for evidence of a major shift in the flu bug — a signal that another epidemic may be on the way.

For the first time in history, it looks as though there will be time to take steps against a new flu, Dr. Edwin Kilbourne, head of the nation's first flu task force, told President Gerald Ford. The result is the $135 million national immunization plan.

Four drug companies already have begun mass production of what will amount to 200 million doses of vaccine — each about one-half cubic centimeter of clear liquid.

MANY OF THE INJECTIONS will be given by a high-pressure gun that forces the shot through the skin at very high pressure. This painless method of immunization eliminates

The program is sponsored by Friends of Gifted Children and is open to the public.

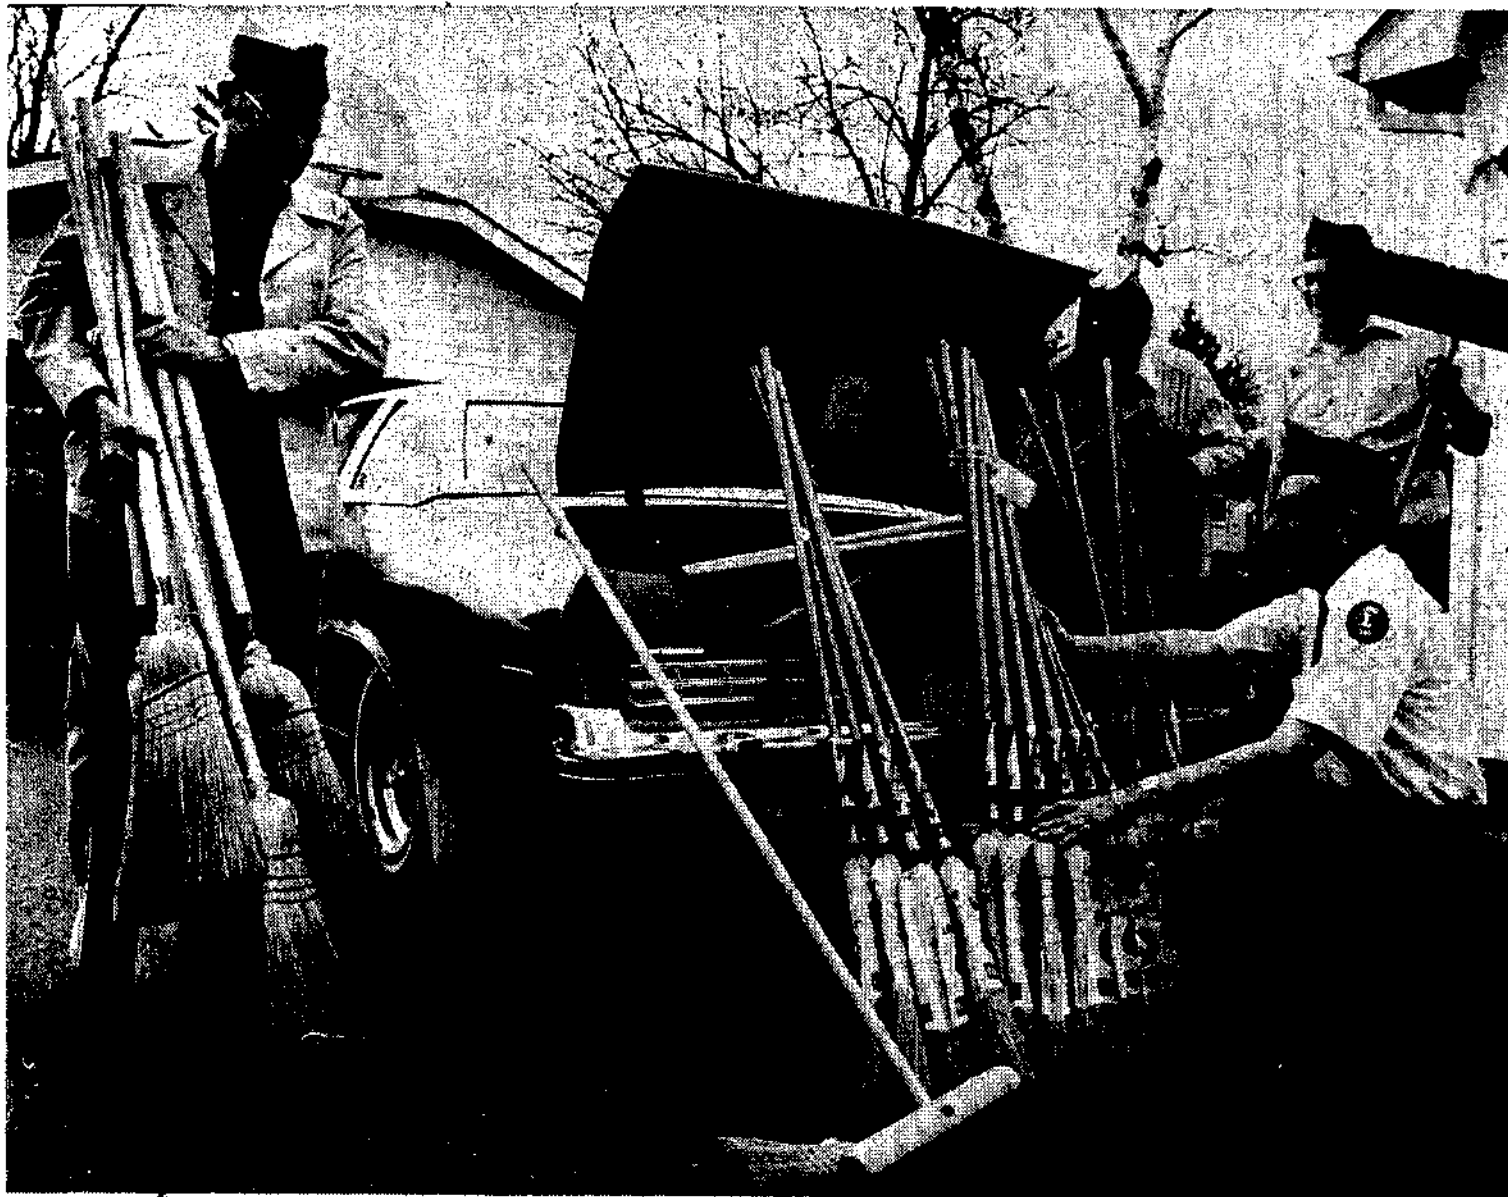

Workshop sessions on body language between teacher and student, a letter-writing exchange between suburban schools and intercity schools, and methods of stimulating students to write meaningfully will be part of the program when Northwest suburban teachers of English and the language arts meet Tuesday at the North Shore Hilton Hotel in Skokie, for the second annual spring conference of the Northwest Suburban Dist. of the Illinois Assn. of Teachers of English.

For information and reservations contact Gene Haas, Maine North High School, 299-5500.

Preconvention conference of PTA Dist. 21, entitled "The Today PTA" will start at 9:30 a.m. Thursday at Our Lady of the Brook Church, 3700 Dundee Rd., Northbrook.

The mock convention is conducted to prepare delegates for the annual Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers convention in May. All prospective delegates, administrators, teachers, parents and officers are invited to attend.

Host to the 96 units represented will be the River Ridge Council of PTAs under the direction of Mrs. Herbert Schlatter, Des Plaines, council president.

To fund paramedic service

Ambulance tax vote Saturday

Residents within the Palatine Rural Fire Protection District will vote from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday on a referendum to levy a separate tax for ambulance service.

Paramedic service now is financed with fire protection taxes, which are 26 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

If the referendum passes, the fire district could tax as much as 30 cents per $100 assessed valuation for fire protection and 25 cents for emergency ambulance service, for a combined maximum rate of 55 cents.

WITH VOTER APPROVAL to levy separate taxes, fire district president Fred Roegner said he is "hopeful" the fire protection levy could be as low as 20 cents and ambulance service 15 cents for a combined rate of 35 cents per $100 assessed valuation, an increase of 9 cents.

If the referendum fails, the paramedics might answer calls only within the village, or the village fire department could contract with the rural district on a cost-per-call basis. Both the village department and the rural district will retain the regular ambulances that accompany engines on fire calls.

The rural fire protection district, which includes Inverness and unincorporated Palatine Township, buys and maintains its own equipment, but contracts with the village fire department for manpower. A new contract must be signed before May 1, when the present agreement expires.

At its last meeting, the Inverness Village Board passed a resolution supporting separate tax levies, and Palatine trustees have expressed personal support.

LAST YEAR the rural district contributed between $190,000 and $200,000 to the village fire department, Roegner said. This year's portion probably will be larger, he said.

Several other area rural fire protection districts have voted to levy separate taxes for fire protection and emergency ambulance service, including Robert Park, near Hickory Hills, and Pingree Grove, south of Elgin.

An Illinois law passed in 1965 allows rural fire districts to levy separate taxes. Palatine began using paramedics in 1972.

Last year the paramedics answered 493 emergency calls from the rural district and 1,167 calls from the village, for a total of 1,660. That total is nearly triple the 508 calls answered during the first year paramedic service was available.

Voters who live north of the Chicago and North Western Ry. will vote on the referendum at Lincoln School, 1021 Ridgewood Ln., Palatine.

Voters living south of the tracks will vote at the Inverness Fieldhouse at the north end of Highland Road, Inverness.

Driver testing station expected to open in May

The long-awaited Northwest suburban driver testing station is expected to open sometime in May in Schaumburg's Woodfield Commons office-commercial center.

"We are still shooting for our May opening target and expect to be able to announce a date in the very near future," Marty McLaughlin, a spokesman for Sec. of State Michael J. Howlett, said Thursday.

McLaughlin said remodeling of a 4,400-square-foot store-front office at 1231 E. Golf Rd. is in progress.

"Our goal is to open the testing station in time to accommodate the summer need we seem to experience each year," McLaughlin said.

THE FACILITY, expected to employ about 30 persons, will provide written and behind-the-wheel examinations for driver's license applicants. The road testing of applicants will take place on adjacent streets near Woodfield Shopping Center, rather than on the grounds of the office-commercial center.

License plates will not be sold at the new testing site.

The facility will be in space being leased by the state from J. Emil Anderson and Sons, developers.

The state, also leases a six-story building in Woodfield Plaza, just east of the proposed testing site, from the Anderson firm.

LEASE ARRANGEMENTS for the building, used by the Illinois Dept. of Transportation, are being probed by a special Illinois House subcommittee.

The search for a driver testing site in the Northwest suburbs began in 1970. Locations in Arlington Heights, Palatine, Barrington and another Schaumburg site were considered and later rejected.

State officials say the Woodfield Commons site was selected because of its central location and easy access from major roads and highways.

County weighs site in Meadows

larged court facilities have been local police officials. They have said, "In the past that their men lose time traveling to the branches, which are often overcrowded."

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case said, "I have no objection to it here. Any court facility moving closer to being a centralized location that would save our men time and travel, I would have no objections to."

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Police Capt. Maurice J. English said, "It's (a) logical (location). It has the area for parking, it's centrally located, and it would be accessible. The site has a great deal of potential."

If the court facility is built, it might figure into a suggested reorganization of the district court boundaries. One suggested realignment calls for using the Tri-State Tollway as an east-west border, which would place most Northwest suburbs within the proposed facility's jurisdiction.

Circuit Court Judge Harold Sullivan, presiding judge of the 2nd District, said he would favor a new facility, but said "the big problem" is whether the county board will be able to continue to provide funds for the facility.

O'Connell said the inspection of the five or six sites still under consideration will begin after construction of the Markham facility is underway. He said he could not speculate when a final decision might be reached.

Des Plaines boy killed when train hits bicycle

by DIANE MERMIGAS

A 15-year-old Des Plaines youth was killed early Thursday when he was struck by a Chicago and North Western Ry. train while crossing an unguarded stretch of track on his bicycle.

Ronald P. Bahr, 444 N. Sixth Ave., was seen by the train engineer sitting on his bike next to the tracks at Seegers Road and Northwest Highway, about 100 yards east of the Cumberland station, shortly before he was struck by the westbound train at 7 a.m., said Des Plaines Patrolman Ronald Diehl.

The train, traveling about 45 m.p.h., was unable to make an emergency stop before striking the boy "who apparently ignored the warnings sounded by the engineer," Diehl said.

BAHR WAS APPARENTLY on his way to school at Maine West High School, Des Plaines, where he was a junior. He was killed instantly and was taken to Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, Diehl said.

Bahr is survived by his parents, Donald and Irene, and two brothers, David and Steven.

The train, headed into Mount Prospect on the southern tracks, was delayed about 40 minutes and no passengers were injured during the emergency stop, Diehl said.

Morning rush-hour traffic reportedly was backed up for a while on Golf and Wolf roads which intersect just west of where the accident occurred.

THE GRAVEL AND dirt pathway leading upward to the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks at Seegers Road is in an older, residential area of Des Plaines and directly faces Pace Auto, 680 E. Northwest Hwy.

Mel Ahrens, a sales manager at the dealership, said he was not around at the time of the accident, but often sees children on bicycles crossing the tracks at that point.

The gravel pathway is lined on both sides by high grass and shrubs, blinding the view of youngsters who ride their bikes there.

"You can't fence all of the railroad in, it's just impossible. And it's tragic when something like this happens," said James McDonald, public relations director for the Chicago and North Western Ry.

"If residents would only try and police these kind of pathways themselves and keep the children away from the tracks, there'd be less of a chance of this happening. We do all that we can to prevent it," he said.

Library schedules children's films

A recent plant sale sponsored by the Guild of St. James Catholic Church in Arlington Heights raised more than $600 for Countryside.

by JOHN MAES

A former Elk Grove Village resident, the subject of a nationwide manhunt for the kidnappings of a Glencoe woman and a California woman earlier this month, is the same man known as the "Northwest suburban cat burglar" who terrorized dozens of area residents in 1974.

Authorities said they are seeking Robert Edward Williams Jr., 23, formerly of 29 Grange Pl., Elk Grove Village. Williams is suspected of the two abductions and possibly a third that occurred April 12 in the Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has said Williams' fingerprints have been found on the autos belonging to both abduction victims, Muriel Fulton of north suburban Glencoe, and Evelyn Axlerod of Sherman Oaks, Calif.

THE FBI ALSO said blood stains found in Mrs. Axlerod's car and those found on a spent bullet casing in the auto match her blood type. Mrs. Axlerod's abandoned auto was found April 12 by police in Rolling Meadows. Police fear the woman has been slain.

Williams has been listed as an escapee from a Chicago prison work release center since March 1, about three weeks before he was due to be paroled following his conviction for a string of burglaries in 1974 in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Mount Prospect police arrested Williams in June 1974, shortly after he burglarized an apartment at 1101 Hunt Club Dr. An investigation later tied Williams to a number of home and apartment burglaries in Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

Williams specialized in burglarizing apartments and stealing purses and wallets containing cash, often entering while residents slept, police said.

IN ONE INSTANCE, Williams successfully burglarized an Elk Grove Village apartment where 12 persons and a dog were sleeping.

Another time, an Elk Grove Village man told police he was awakened by a noise in the middle of the night and found a man kneeling at the foot of his bed. The burglar, realizing he had been spotted, bolted from the bedroom and out the front door, escaping with the resident's wallet.

Police said the wallet burglary was the first of 22 Elk Grove Village burglaries in which the burglar had been spotted.

Elk Grove Village police in 1974 said physical evidence and questioning linked Williams to 22 burglaries and attempts in the village in a span of seven weeks.

SIX BURGLARIES occurred in one apartment complex, the Eagles on Tonne Road in Elk Grove Village, and were attributed by police to Williams.

Of a string of burglary charges later brought against Williams, four involved break-ins to the Huntington Commons complex, Mount Prospect.

Elk Grove Village police Lt. William Kohnke said Williams' identity as the kidnap suspect came to light three days ago.

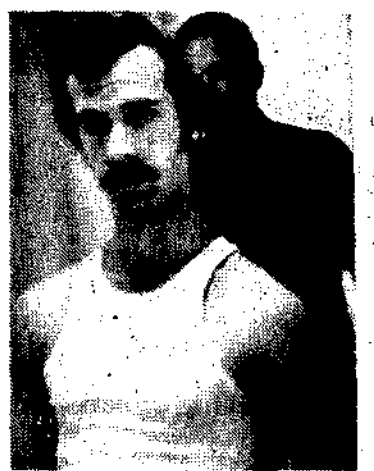

Kohnke said Patrolman Jeff Jenkins, son of Police Chief Harry Jenkins, saw a composite sketch of Mrs. Fulton's kidnaper on the department's bulletin board, noticing it was similar to Williams' picture.

"IT JUST STRUCK a familiar note

with him," Kohnke said. Jenkins alerted local investigators to the similarity and a file containing Williams' photo and fingerprints were later turned over to Glencoe police.

A clerk at Globe Hoppers, a store at Woodfield Shopping Center, Thursday identified Williams as the same man who attempted to rob the store April 12, Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy said.

Schaumburg police suspect Williams abducted an Itasca woman from the parking lot of the center the same day. Mrs. Dale C. Fridlund was forced at gunpoint to drive to Wood Dale where she was released unharmed. The kidnaper stole her car, which has not been found. Conroy said police expect to show Mrs. Fridlund a photo of Williams within the next several days.

Mike Klein's people

Beer can buff wants containers not contents

Some people are continually saying they're bored, that life just does not mean anything.

You can generally pick out those people easily. When they describe weekend plans, the discussion begins with a yawn and ends with a nap.

This behavior is not for Bill Wishart. His mother, Virginia, says that Bill is always into something.

Bill's day starts each morning. He slides out of bed, places one soft contact lens in each eye and hustles off to learn eighth grade at Iroquois Junior High School in Des Plaines.

There are dozens of ways to keep busy after school.

BILL LOVES sports. He wants to compete in athletics beginning next year at Maine West High School.

For his more creative moments, there's a set of drums which crowds one corner of his bedroom. And then there are the beer cans. Hundreds and hundreds of beer cans.

It all began about three years ago with Jim Holm, Bill's good friend from down the street who saved cans. Bill thought that might be interesting, even though his mother was not entirely convinced.

Virginia Wishart thought, "Oh, my God, beer cans! He's going into dumps... how unsanitary! Who needs them?"

Bill was not deterred. "We started by going to flea markets, looking for cans, trading and buying the good cans," said Bill.

"Then we joined a few clubs and saw what they wanted is to trade cans. When you're a beginner..."

Officials dislike separate library district proposal

The idea of creating a separate Mount Prospect library district was received unfavorably Thursday night by village trustees and library board members.

Representatives of the two independent boards discussed for the first time the concept of an additional taxing district.

Regardless of whether the two boards think an autonomous library district would be viable, Finance Committee Chairman Edward B. Rhea Jr. said the key point to consider is that any voter who can obtain at least 100 other voters' signatures may file a petition forcing a referendum attempting to create the taxing body.

Though the library now operates independently of the village, appropriations for library funds are subject to village board approval.

SHOULD A LIBRARY district be created, its powers would be the same as those of the current library board except it would have taxing power.

The library tax levy, now included in the village property tax, is currently 15 cents per $1,000 of assessed valuation. A library district would have the authority to hold its own referendums to increase the levy up to 40 cents per $1,000 assessed valuation. "This would generate approximately $865,000 annually," Rhea said.

"It seems to me the library board would become more visible as a district," he said. "A definite plus is that it would remove the library from village politics."

But the minuses seem to outweigh the pluses, according to the library board. Sally Viger, library board secretary said she was concerned how a separate library district could broaden its tax base because of difficulties in annexing areas outside the village boundaries. To annex areas outside the village the library would have to seek permission from residents in the unincorporated areas.

Library Board Pres. John Parsons, attending the meeting despite earlier statements he would not be there, said a library district could lose joint services the library board now shares with the village such as fire and police service. "I don't think autonomy is a real great thing."

WAVING HIS TAX bill through the air, Trustee Leo Floros said, "There are now 14 taxing units with their hands in my pocket. I'm reluctant to be a party to create a 15th."

Each of six trustees chairs one of the three-member committees and serves on two others.

County mulls courts facility in area

by JOE SWICKARD

A site near Arlington Park Race Track is under consideration by Cook County officials as a Circuit Court mini-center, the Herald has learned.

Officials of Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights are actively promoting the site, 10 acres of vacant land at the southwest corner of Euclid Avenue and Wilke Road in Rolling Meadows.

The property is owned by the Madison Square Garden Corp., owners of the race track-Arlington Park Hilton Hotel complex.

COUNTY OFFICIALS said it is one of five or six possible locations in the area worthy of a "second look." About 20 possible locations were originally considered by the county last August and September.

Donald O'Connell, administrative director of the Circuit Court, said the sites will be reconsidered "within the next few weeks or about 30 days."

However, O'Connell said any locations being studied are "tentative" now and subject to final approval by the Cook County Board of Commissioners.

Arlington Heights Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the Rolling Meadows site is "perfect."

"We've been months now," Hanson said.

JOINING WITH Hanson have been Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer and Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, he said. Meyer and Ryan were not available for comment Thursday.

Advocates of the Rolling Meadows site say it is large enough to accommodate the building and necessary parking facilities in addition to its central location in the area and access by several major highways and the Chicago and North Western Ry. However, it is smaller than sites for two similar facilities, O'Connell said.

A court facility would be similar to ones planned in Maywood and Markham, he said.

If those plans were followed in the Northwest suburban facility, it would have about six to 10 court rooms and offices to house county and court clerks, probation officers and assistant state's attorneys. The courts would be able to handle probate and divorce actions in addition to criminal and traffic cases now dealt with in the branch courts, such as the one in the Arlington Heights municipal building.

DESPITE CONCERNS in some quarters that the county board may be hesitant about building another facility soon, O'Connell said plans for one in the area are "absolutely" still alive.

"We need more court space. We need more court space in northern Cook County. But when this might come to fruition, I really couldn't say," O'Connell said.

Among staunch supporters for enlarged court facilities have been local police officials. They have said recently in the past that their men lose time traveling to the branches, which are often overcrowded.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case said, "I have no objection to it here. Any court facility moving closer to being a centralized location that would save our men time and travel, I would have no objections to."

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Police Capt. Maurice J. English said, "It's (a) logical (location). It has the area for parking, it's centrally located, and it would be accessible. The site has a great deal of potential."

If the court facility is built, it might figure into a suggested reorganization of the district court boundaries. One suggested realignment calls for using the Tri-State Tollway as an east-west border, which would place most Northwest suburbs within the proposed facility's jurisdiction.

Circuit Court Judge Harold Sullivan, presiding judge of the 2nd District, said he would favor a new facility, but said "the big problem" is whether the county board will be able to continue to provide funds for the facility.

O'Connell said the inspection of the five or six sites still under consideration will begin after construction of the Markham facility is underway. He said he could not speculate when a final decision might be reached.
